A. F. of L. Council Calls for Repeal Of Pay Roll Tax

Amend Constitution, if Necessary, Report on Security Asserts.

Work-Relief Fund Every Year Urged

Board Reviews Revolt of Lewis Group, Offers Little Comment.

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 15.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in its report to the federation's annual convention starting here tomorrow, called today for a constitutional amendment, if such be needed, to save the social security act.

The council also proposed repeal of social security pay roll taxes, suggested an appropriation as soon as Congress convenes for work relief, and speedy enactment of the Wagner low-cost housing bill.

The council dismissed John L. Lewis' epochal rebellion with a detailed factual account of its progress during the last year. "Appropriate action" was suggested.

Nevertheless, the revolt was on the lips of nearly all the delegates who jammed Tampa's hotel lobbies tonight.

Should Lewis' ten rebel unions be expelled from the federation?

John P. Frey, veteran president of the federation's metal trades department, and J. W. Williams, ruddy-faced former carpenter and president of the building trades department, agreed the answer was "yes." They said they were backed by enough votes to turn the trick.

Some Doubtful.

Yet some leaders were more doubtful. William Green, federation president, told his evening press conference the council's peace committee still was willing to negotiate an agreement with a committee from the Lewis faction.

Although William Green, federation president, recently said the Black-Connery 30-hour week bill and the O'Mahoney industrial licensing bill would top the A. F. of L. legislative program this winter, no mention of either measure appeared in the report. Broadening the scope of the Walsh-Healy Government contract act was recommended. The act now covers contracts of only $10,000 or more.

In discussing unemployment since NRA's end, the council said:

"The shorter work-week and the six-hour day furnish the real solution to the insistent problem of unemployment. It is the responsibility that private industry must accept in order to give the necessary balance to economic expansion."

The council reported a membership of 3,422,398 on August 31—the greatest since 1921. About 1,000,000 would be lost by the proposed expulsion of the ten union in the Lewis rebellion.

Can't Afford Reductions.

Expenses during the year ending August 31 were reported as $1,027,938, leaving a balance of $569,405 in the treasury.

The report heartily approved of a Federal social security program and urged adoption of State laws that would give labor the greatest possible benefit from the Federal statute.

If the Federal law is unconstitutional, the council said, "it is clear that its provisions must be changed or that sanction must be afforded

Government Will Take First Steps Today to Enroll Workers.

5,000,000 Employers Asked to Give Data

26,000,000 Expected to Be Eligible for the Pension Plan.

The Nation today officially launches its vast system of social security old-age benefits, voted at the last session of Congress, to provide ease for millions of workers in their advanced years.

The supendous task of enrolling some 5,000,000 employers and 26,000,000 working men and women in the system will be undertaken this morning as postmen, from 45,000 postoffices throughout the country, deliver to all employers cards that will serve as the employers' application for identification numbers in the huge set-up. Employers will return the cards to their respective postoffices, filled out and giving the number of employes in the establishment of each.

Eight days later, on November 24, the postmen again will deliver to each employer a sufficient number of registration cards to supply one to each employe. The working men and women will fill out their cards and return them to the postoffices. Then the tremendous administrative machine created under the social security act will start functioning tabulating and recording the data on each employe's card, assigning an account number for each of the 26,000,000, and maintaining their wage records so that in time the amount of retirement pay due can be ascertained.

65 Retirement Age.

The retirement age is 65. The old-age benefits start accruing January 1. The Treasury Department is charged with the responsibility of collecting the taxes from employers and employes to create the huge fund from which retirement benefits later are to be paid.

Collection of the tax starts January 1, with 1 per cent to be taken from each employe's pay, with a similar amount to be paid by the employer. The amount deducted from the worker's pay increases later until it reaches 3 per cent.

Months of preparation by the Social Security Board have preceded the actual task of enrolling employers and workers, which starts today. Much time was spent in determining the distribution of establishments and workers in every city, town, village and commercial or industrial center. Sending official instructions to postmasters, the organization and training of postoffice personnel and printing and delivery of the proper quantity of forms to each postoffice have required considerable additional time.

The Social Security Board emphasized yesterday the importance of every employer and worker obtaining his or her account number and to that end urged that everyone covered by the system promptly fill out the cards received from postmen and as promptly return them.

Ask Seven Questions.

The employer forms, being distributed today, ask only seven questions. Each business establishment is called upon to give its business name, nature of the business, the address and approximate number of persons now employed. Manufacturing concerns are asked to state the principal products, and other concerns are asked what the principal goods or services are that are sold or furnished. Each is asked also to state whether the establishment is a branch or a subsidiary concern and if so to give the name and address of headquarters. The form, after it is signed, will be returned to the postoffice from which it was issued. The employer is required, under a Treasury decision, to return the application not later than November 21.

Upon receiving this information, each postmaster will provide the necessary number of employe application blanks to meet the needs of each business establishment, and an equivalent number of informational folders so that each employe may receive one.

These employe application blanks and folders will be delivered on November 24. Every space on every application should be filled out completely, the board pointed out, lest

Margaret Sullavan Wed to Hayward, N. Y. Social Leader

By the United Press.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 15.—Margaret Sullavan, stage and screen star, and Leland Hayward, prominent in New York and Newport society, were married here late today in a surprise ceremony. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fred W. Knickrehm in the parsonage of St. Paul's Methodist Church.

Witnesses were Col. and Mrs. William Hayward, father and stepmother of the bridegroom.

Only a handful of guests were present.

Miss Sullavan obtained a divorce in Juarez, Mexico, on March 6 from William Wyler, Hollywood director. Previously she had married and divorced Henry Fonda, stage and screen actor, who recently married Mrs. George Brokaw, Newport social leader.

Hayward, one of the most prominent agents supplying story material for Broadway and Hollywood, was married twice before—to the same woman, the former Inez Gibbs, of Dallas, Tex. They were married first in 1921 after an elopement which startled society, and were divorced two years later. They were remarried in Dallas in February, 1930, but Mrs. Hayward obtained a divorce a few years later.

3 Lose Lives In Week-End Auto Crashes

Two Washington Men, Unidentified Woman Die in Accidents.

Six Residents of Capital Among Eight Injured in City, Nearby.

Traffic accidents over the week-end took the lives of two Washington men and an unidentified woman and injured eight persons, six of whom are residents of this city.

Maurice Deen, 41, an accountant in the legal department of the Federal Housing Administration, who lived at 506 A street northeast, died early yesterday after an auto crash Saturday night near McKenny, Va. His wife, seriously injured in the accident, was being treated last night at the Petersburg, (Va.) Hospital.

Irving E. Bache, 34, of 1237 Queen street northeast, was killed yesterday when his car plunged over an embankment on Route 15 near Warrenton, Va. His wife and Otis Bowers, 14, of 1250 E street northeast, were injured seriously.

Dies Hour Later.

Bache, a Navy Yard worker, died in Fauquier Hospital, Warrenton, of a skull fracture about an hour after the accident. His wife and the boy were treated there for multiple injuries. The three were en route to Culpeper to visit Russell Bowers, the boy's father.

The other person killed was a woman, whose body was held for identification last night in an undertaking establishment at Ashland, Va. She died in an accident in which Edward M. Boyd, of Washington, driver of the car was hurt critically.

Boyd's Washington relatives, when notified yesterday of the accident near Bowling Green, Va., late Saturday, said they did not know who was in the car with him. Boyd was in a semi-conscious condition in Grace Hospital at Richmond, Va., yesterday, and did not respond to questioning. Police officials, who investigated the accident, a head-on collision, found no articles of identification on the woman's body.

Boyd, a bricklayer, lived formerly at 2715 Fourteenth street northwest, but has not resided there for the last six months, his wife, Mrs. Mazie I. Boyd, declared yesterday.

Escapes Death in Plunge.

Another Washingtonian escaped death when his car plunged through the gap left by the falling of a span of the Romney, W. Va., bridge across the south branch of the Potomac River, the Associated Press reported. He was I. M. Eshelman, of the 1300 block of Girard street northwest. His car hurtled down, landing upside down on the wreckage of the span. He escaped with cuts and bruises.

Previously the span had given way with a car bearing three residents of Romney, Clyde Landis, Clarence Pyles and Bruce Corbin. None was seriously hurt.

Police Chief Fred Cunningham said, "The river is low now and there were only big puddles of water in it. If the river had been high, they all would have drowned."

Triple Collision.

The Deens were the victims of a triple automobile crash on U. S. Route 1 one mile south of McKenny, Va. Persons living near the scene of the accident said the Deen car was sideswiped by a southbound auto and crashed into a third car. Occupants of the other cars escaped with slight injuries.

Mrs. Deen, whose condition was reported as "fair" last night at the Petersburg hospital, suffered body bruises, a leg fracture and shock.

A collision in T. B., Md., early

14-Story Plunge Kills Moffett's Son-in-Law

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 15.—David Brooks, 26, son of a millionaire, nephew of Lady Nancy Astor, and husband of the former Adelaide Moffett, fell 14 stories to his death from a Park avenue apartment house today. He lost his balance while trying to open a bedroom window.

Tonight Mrs. Brooks was in a state of nervous prostration. A widow at 23, after only four months of marriage, the 14-story plunge of her husband brought back the horror of a similar tragedy that cost the life of her mother.

On October 26, 1934, Mrs. Adelaide Taft Moffett, 47, fell to her death from an eighth-floor apartment here in the fashionable East Fifties. She was estranged from her husband, James A. Moffett, vice

Week-End Gifts To Be Reported Today to Chest

Fund Expected to Reach Third of Drive Quota of $1,969,000.

The week-end campaign work of Community Chest committees and units is expected to boost gift totals over one-third of the drive quota, when reports are made at a campaign luncheon this noon in the Willard Hotel.

At the last report meeting, contributions of the early days of the drive for 1937 raised the total to $599,160, or 30 per cent of the amount estimated as necessary to meet the charity needs.

Workers are optimistic that the $1,969,000 goal will be reached. Their efforts so far have been unusually successful, Coleman Jennings, campaign chairman, pointed out yesterday the success of chest drives in other cities.

The general gain over last year is more than 7 per cent among cities holding campaigns this fall, and in some instances contributions were 15 per cent more than a year ago.

As the chest prepared to open a new week of campaigning, Jennings expressed satisfaction with the work thus far. He stressed the cooperative campaign for the nearby counties.

"Of course, there are some misunderstandings coming to our attention," the chairman said, "But

Retired Soldier, Wife Lose All As Home Burns

Couple Had Lived 17 Yrs. in Century-Old House in Arlington.

Shivering in a cold northwest wind, Sergt. W. A. Merrill, United States Army, retired, and his wife stood helplessly on their chicken farm on the Arlington Ridge road, near Arlington Cemetery yesterday, while the home in which they had lived for the last 17 years burned to the ground.

So swiftly did the flames spread through the century-old frame dwelling, the two were forced to abandon all of their household possessions.

Arlington County fire companies were forced to stretch their hose line more than half a mile to reach a water supply and the flames were out of control before pumping apparatus could go into action.

The house, one of the county landmarks, was built a century ago by Grover Palmer, a landscape gardner, who came to this country from England. He lived in the dwelling for 50 years before his death.

Flames shooting high in the air attracted several hundred motorists to the scene and traffic on the Ridge road was paralyzed for more than an hour.

Mrs. Merrill estimated the value of her household furnishings at $2,000. The house was valued at $3,500.

War in Year Is Predicted By Pertinax

Famed French Writer Says Ethiopia Failure Wrecked League.

Laval Refusal to Back British Fatal Error, He Adds Here.

War in a year was predicted for Europe last night by Andre Geraud, noted French journalist, as he delivered the opening address at the season's first meeting of the Town Hall of Washington at the Shoreham Hotel.

Only quick and aggressive action by the peace-loving people of France and Germany can avert a conflict which will embroil all Europe, said Geraud, who as "Pertinax" is known to thousands of continental readers as one of the best informed newspaper correspondents.

"The people must be made to learn that the only way to attain peace is to accept the risks of war," Geraud told the more than a thousand fashionably dressed men and women who jammed the main dining room.

The League of Nations, said Geraud, has "gone to pieces," as a result of its wavering attitude over Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia. France, he said, was guilty of a "fatal error of policy" in not throwing immediate and wholehearted support behind England when the British fleet was first massed in the Mediterranean.

But only through a League of Nations, Geraud said, can Europe hope to find peace.

Says Time Is Short.

"I am convinced even now," he said, "that it is in the power of France and Britain to retrieve the whole situation, but the weeks, the months are numbered."

Failure of Premier Laval to join with England in determined opposition to the Italian conquest, Geraud said, "set a premium on gamblers in Europe."

"When the Germans saw that France and Britain did not want to enforce the League covenants they realized their great occasion had arrived and Hitler knew his gamble would succeed.

"France by one single stroke could have reduced the German dictator to impotence if her troops had been sent into the Rhineland when Hitler flaunted defiance at the treaty."

Germany's rearmament program probably will reach its maximum of military power sometime in 1937, Geraud said, and Hitler will be forced to act quickly then because

Sympathy Strike Called at Howard For Hungry Team

Howard University students last night started a movement to fill the stomachs of the school's football gladiators, whose hunger caused them to forfeit a game to Virginia Union University Saturday.

At a midnight meeting in Clark Hall, called by the Liberal Club and attended by nearly 500 students, a sympathy strike was called for today. Between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. strikers will picket the classrooms. Leaders expect that 90 per cent of the students will remain away from their studies.

An assembly of the student body will be held at 11 a. m. today. At that time the students will decide what action to take about the football team that preferred the movies to hungry gridiron glory.

Fliers Shell Path For Franco's Men In Entering City

LOYALISTS CLAIM 20 PLANES DESTROYED IN AIR BATTLE

50 Killed, Hundreds Hurt as 26 Aircraft Renew Raids; Tenements and Streets Bombarded by Attacking Airmen.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 15.—Fascist insurgent troops of Gen. Francisco Franco, climaxing a bloody nine-day siege, tonight fought their way into the University City section of Madrid.

Behind violent machinegun and rifle fire, the troops stormed across the Manzanares River and drove within the city limits of the Spanish capital.

Insurgent military leaders officially announced the vanguard of their forces had penetrated within Madrid proper. A loyalist attempt to stem the advance by blowing up the Los Franceses railroad bridge over the Manzanares proved futile.

Five rebel trimotor bombing planes blasted the way for the infantry. Sixty bombs were dumped into the University City section before the attackers surged forward.

The University City area is in the extreme northwest section of Madrid.

Reporter Hears Shelling.

The central university buildings, covering two square blocks, are not far from the Plaza de Espana. The university section is north and a little west of the Puerta del Sol, Madrid's Times Square.

Sounds of fighting within Madrid—the explosion of hand grenades and the crackle of rifle fire—could be clearly heard at the vantage point from which the Associated Press correspondent watched the fighting.

A pall of dense black smoke blanketed the whole of the Manzanares River from the north to Parquedel Oeste.

The dynamiting of the bridge came as a final desperate loyalist move to halt the rebels after a day of bloodshed marked by air raids in which at least 50 persons were killed and 200 wounded in Madrid's streets.

The bridge crashed down with an earsplitting roar as a Government official pulled a switch setting off a load of dynamite laid under it. The rebel line swerved and penetrated the city a little to the north.

Earlier in the day insurgent artillery sent shells screaming into the northern end of Grand Via, Madrid's main traffic artery.

Shell after shell ripped paving blocks asunder in the Grand Via section less than a quarter of a mile from the center of the city.

The last air raid today caught promenaders on the Avenue de Pablo Iglesias.

Flying shrapnel filled the road with dead and screaming injured. Local first-aid stations sent emergency calls out for more doctors and nurses to take care of the wounded.

26 Planes in Raid.

The largest fleet of Fascist war planes yet to bomb beleaguered Madrid swept over the city. Scurrying residents counted 26 planes in the fleet.

Twelve bombers, escorted by 14 pursuit planes appeared from the West at 9:10 a. m. (4:10 a. m., Eastern standard time), flying low over the city.

Defying a barrage of antiaircraft fire, the attackers headed directly for government troop concentrations in University City.

The bombers spread their cargo over the whole northwestern section, including Arguelles and Vallehermose districts.

An official bulletin said government pilots in swift retaliation destroyed 20 insurgent planes.

Airdromes Bombed.

The Fascist airdromes at Avilla, Toledo, Torrejos and Navalmoral were bombed heavily, the Air Ministry announced, and many planes burned.

Twenty-four bombs hit the Avilla airdrome and 18 bombs destroyed hangars at Torrejos, the officials said.

Several workers' tenements collapsed during the first attack.

The bombers shuffled about in determined search of government fortifications and dropped at least a dozen bombs along the trench system just outside the city.

Murdered Man Is Identified as Jewelry Bandit

Chicago Couple Kidnaped and Robbed, Says Shooting Victim Was Thief.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—After John Benedetto, 33, of Rockford, Ill., was shot to death today at the wheel of his auto on a North Side street, he was identified, Supervising Police Capt. John Stege said, as one of three gunmen who kidnaped a wealthy Chicagoan and his wife a few hours earlier and robbed them of jewelry estimated by the victims to be worth $40,000.

Stege said the man was identified as Benedetto through his fingerprints and automobile license plates. At Rockford police said they learned from relatives that the man was last seen last night.

Stege said Mrs. John Cuneo, wife of the head of the Cuneo Press, Inc., "positively identified" the slain man as one of the robbers. Cuneo, Stege said, was less positive, but said Benedetto "resembled" Cuneo, one of the robbers. Stege said he believed the shooting followed a quarrel over a division of the loot.

Robbed Near Home.

Cuneo, his wife and their chauffeur, Frank Grubb, were held up as they stopped their car in front of their Lake Shore home after returning from a theater. The gunmen also took their six-cylinder auto and $116 in cash.

Benedetto was known at Rockford as a wrestling promoter and operator of the "Jolly Fifty Club," described by police as a gambling establishment. Relatives told police that Benedetto went to Rockford 11 years ago from Dohaldsonville, La.

Fred Kohler, Chicago wrestling promoter, said he bought Benedetto's license for $250. A contract between the two men was found in Benedetto's auto, police said.

Two distant relatives of Benedetto were questioned by police. They were Anne Amedo, 18, and her brother, John, 24, of Chicago. They were arrested when their address was found on a slip of paper in Benedetto's pocket.

Robert Benson, 12-year-old newsboy, found the body in the car this morning.

The man had been shot three times from behind. His hat, clutched in his hand, bore two bullet holes.

Mrs. Simpson With Aunt on Week-End

London, Nov. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Wallis Simpson, American friend of King Edward, spent the week-end with her "Aunt Bessie," Mrs. D. B. Merryman, friends said today.

But whether they chose London's rain or the King's pleasant gardens at his Belvedere Palace, friends professed not to know. At any rate, they were sure "Aunt Bessie" was along.

Mrs. Merryman came here from Washington to be with her niece during the six-month period until her divorce decree from Ernest Simpson is made final.

"Aunt Bessie" was expected to accompany Mrs. Simpson to social functions henceforth—Mrs. Simpson lately has been attending parties with friends, but without escort.

Ethel du Pont Parries Questions About Family Political Feud As She Holds Court With Roosevelt Son for Newspapermen

Was Too Young to Vote, She Laughingly Tells Interviewers.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 15.—The principals in America's most exciting romance of the moment—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Ethel du Pont—held their first "reception" today, throwing open doors of the du Pont mansion here to a small army of reporters and cameramen.

Young Roosevelt, whose engagement to the pretty, blonde heiress was announced last night, looks a lot like his famous father, but he has a long way to go before he has the President's poise and smiling nonchalance. He nervously admitted as much.

"This is worse than campaigning with father," the 21-year-old Roosevelt said, facing the battery of press representatives.

He declined to pose for the news reels, saying he looked "gawky" on the screen.

Miss du Pont, more at ease, as is usual with a bride-to-be, neatly sidestepped an attempt to find out how she stood in the recent election campaign, whether she favored her future father-in-law or whether she lined up with the wealthy "economic royalists" of the du Pont clan.

"I wasn't old enough to vote," she said. She is 20.

They smoked cigarettes and kept up a lively banter.

"Are you still smiling?" Miss du Pont asked, as they posed before a French door leading to the grounds of the estate.

"I am," said Franklin D., jr. "I feel that I shall be perpetually smiling after this."

The President's son came out into the court yard of the high brick wall that surrounds the estate on the roadside to greet the reporters. The newsmen were arriving from New York, Washington and Philadelphia, many by plane. Young Roosevelt wore a dark blue suit with white pin stripes and brown shoes.

Miss du Pont greeted the news men in the sun room. She wore a gown of black chiffon with short sleeves and lined with a wide sash of Chinese red chiffon. Blonde and blue eyed, she wore no make-up but lipstick.

On her left hand she wore her

Jail Inmate Dies In Virginia Fire

Colonial Beach, Va., Nov. 15 (AP).—John Coates, trapped in the town jail, was burned to death in a fire here today which did estimated damage of between $10,000 to $15,000.

Coates, the only prisoner in the frame jail, was cremated inside one of the two steel cages. Would-be rescuers were unable to reach him as flames enveloped the jail and spread to the nearby town hall.

Mayor James A. Myers, who began an investigation, theorized that a visitor might have given Coates cigarettes and matches, or dropped a lighted cigarette in leaving the building.

A. F. L. Council Urges Support Of Security Act

Report at Tampa Favors Constitutional Change if Necessary.

to them through an amendment to the Constitution.

"If unemployment benefits are to those out of work who have complied with the provisions set forth in the act, funds must be made available, but the wisdom of obtaining these funds through a pay roll tax which to a great extent is to be paid directly or indirectly by the workers involved is subject to question.

"Weekly and annual earnings have not yet reached such levels that the wage earners can afford substantial reductions for the purpose of giving them limited benefits during the periods of unemployment."

The council also suggested that funds for payment of old-age compensation should be made available by Congress each year "on the basis of estimated need."

In conclusion, the report said:

"Labor feels that the burden of insecurity should be lifted from its shoulders and that the cost should be a social responsibility. We believe that our Federal Government has the power to levy and collect taxes to be used to further social security purposes."

The Federal Government, the council said, would have to be the keystone in the Nation's permanent relief program.

"Planning a long-time program of relief, we must accept the principles of Federal responsibility," the report added. "Conservation of our Nation is a social obligation we cannot delegate to private charity or trust to the chance of individual conscience."

Lewis Dispute Reviewed.

Better co-ordination of Federal, State and local welfare relief agencies with an expanded social security program that would include health insurance was recommended for the permanent relief program.

The story of the Lewis rebellion covered the period from the 1935 Atlantic City convention which voted down Lewis' proposal for unqualified industrial organization of mass productioin workers, to the start of the unsuccessful peace maneuvers proposed by the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers last month. Reason for suspension of the ten rebel unions September 5 were reviewed at length.

After quoting all the correspondence between the warring factions, the council said:

"The executive council followed a policy of conciliation during all the months which have intervened since the adjournment of the Atlantic City convention of the A. F. of L.

"It has endeavored patiently to find a way by which differences which arose within the family of organized labor could be composed.

"It has, however, dealt with an emergency which arose within the A. F. of L., as the result of the formation of an organization which it found, from an examination of all the facts and evidence, was dual to the A. F. of L.

"It could not, without sacrificing the prestige, honor and principles of the A. F. of L., do less than it has done. It met a situation bravely and courageously and it made answer to a challenge to the supremacy and authority of the A. F of L."

Green Case This Week.

Whether William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, "conspired" against the United Mine Workers of America will be decided this week by the miners' executive board, which meets here today.

Green's "trial" is set for Wednesday, but he already has notified his accusers that other business will make his presence impossible. He will be presiding at the annual Federation of Labor convention in Tampa, where the miners themselves will be "on trial" on a charge of fomenting insurrection against the federation.

This situation arose out of the controversy between industrial and craft union factions within the federation's ranks. The industrial unionists, headed by John L. Lewis, Mine Workers president, have formed the Committee for Industrial Organization. They propose to line up mass production workers in vertical unions despite the federation's preference for horizontal unionism.

The Mine Workers and nine others unions were suspended from the federation, and their case left to the federation convention for final decision.

Last week the Mine Workers issued a summons to Green, demanding that he appear before the executive board of their organization to explain his part in the suspension of the C. I. O. unions.

The summons, however, gave him the option of appearing by letter or proxy.

Green has been a member of the Mine Workers for more than 30 years. He said last week he could not be removed from the organization without a hearing before his local union in Coshocton, Ohio.

Hands-Off Plan Adopted.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 15 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said tonight his executive council would keep hands off the Seattle American Newspaper Guild strike from now on.

After the council discussed the situation with Dave Beck, Northwest representative of the Teamsters Union, and Harvey Kelly, representative of Hearst newspapers, Green told reporters the council had suggested a basis of settlement for the Seattle Post-Intelligencer walkout at its October meeting.

The Hearst management accepted the council's proposal immediately, Green said, but the guild held out for revision.

Green also said the paper's management turned down an agreement negotiated by the guild and "a representative of the chamber of commerce" because, the management said, the chamber of commerce representative exceeded his authority.

Manchu Bandits Killed.

Tokyo, Nov. 15 (AP).—Japanese-Manchukuoan punitive forces in Manchukuo killed 270 bandits, captured 14, "redeemed" 76 and rescued 76 hostages during October, the government reported today.

Caution Should Be Exercised in Investigating Foreign Capital Invested in U. S. Securities.

—By Franklyn Waltman.

HEALTHY and proper as it is for President Roosevelt to encourage a searching study into the huge sums of foreign capital invested now in American securities, thorough consideration of the many ramifications flowing out of this situation and extreme caution should be observed before any remedial action is undertaken.

WALTMAN.

The problem obviously is too large and touches too many aspects of American policy to permit hasty action or tinkering, which by solving one difficulty might create three in its place. Nevertheless, it is a subject worthy of the best study that can be given to it and one about which comparatively little is known, despite the good work done recently along that line by Commerce Department financial investigators.

Mr. Roosevelt, in announcing he had suggested an inquiry into the presence of approximately $7,000,000,000 of foreign funds in this country, addressed himself but to one aspect of the problem—namely, the effect on American security prices and the potential danger, like a Damocles sword, involved in a precipitate withdrawal of these funds by their foreign owners.

Embarrassment over this superabundance of foreign capital riches, however, goes much farther than the immediate stock market situation. Too large a capital inflow may have the same dislocating effect on the national economic structure as excessive importation of commodities or unrestricted immigration. Thus the heavy inflow of gold into this country is having an impact on the American credit structure which may not become fully evident for several years.

But that is not the entire problem. The presence of these foreign funds has a relationship to the foreign exchange problem, and hence affects our world trade position; they form an important part of the problem confronting this Nation of keeping out of future wars; they raise a question as to whether the "transfer-problem" reason for nonpayment of the war debts due this Government should not be re-examined, and finally, they suggest an inquiry as to whether steps should not be taken from a national point of view to protect certain key industries in this country from having dominant or influential foreign ownership represented on the boards of directors of such corporations.

And, it might be added, that in seeking to appraise the reasons for the present stock market boom, objective investigators should guard against overemphasizing foreign influences and overlooking contributing domestic factors, such as the capital gains tax. That levy creates the paradoxical situation that while the market may be high for the buyer, it is not nearly so high for the seller after he deducts the present tax on his profits—a tax which might run as high as 50 per cent of his profits in the case of large income taxpayers.

Thus it is not a simple question to which the President has directed the attention of the country. Books could be written about each of these aspects. As a starting point it would seem appropriate, first, to establish the cause of the presence of these foreign funds in the United States.

One contention is that these funds have been attracted here because of the rapid economic recovery being experienced, making American investments good investments. Another contention is that most of these funds represent in large part "nervous money," that is, money fleeing the disturbed conditions in Europe, where the threat of war, in greater or less degree, hangs over practically every country. In all probability the reason is a combination of both these contentions.

But in seeking measures to safeguard the economic welfare of this country against such funds, it is important to establish the cause more definitely than it has been.

For instance, the case of the international speculator who skips from money market to money market, leaving disorganized currencies and credit structures in his wake, is entirely different from that of, say, the British investment trust which finds American securities attractive and sound or the Scottish enterprises which invest in American real estate.

Much of the anxiety over the presence of foreign funds now felt is due in part to our experience with foreign holdings in 1931-32 when their withdrawal rocked our financial structure and caused sleepless nights to many of our officials and financiers. But more about that tomorrow.

president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, then in Washington as chief of the Federal Housing Administration. Adelaide at that time was winning fame as a radio singer under the psuedonym of Diana Dorrance.

Had Attended Party.

Brooks, a broker, and his bride had attended a party at the home of friends last night. Others at the party were Howard Hughes, millionaire sportsman and movie producer; Sherman Fairchild and Vivian Dixon. The Brookes returned to Mayfair House, their apartment home on Park avenue, at 3 o'clock this morning.

Brooks went into a bedroom, saying the apartment was "stuffy" and he was going to open a window. Mrs. Brooks remained in the living room. A moment later she heard a scream from her husband, followed by a crash of glass.

Mrs. Brooks ran into the bedroom and collapsed.

Several persons, taxicab drivers and pedestrians saw the body of Brooks strike the sidewalk. It landed in East Sixty-fifth street, almost opposite the town house of President Roosevelt, No. 49. Death was instantaneous.

Mrs. Brooks, after telling her story to detectives, was put to bed under the care of a physician and a nurse.

Marriage a Surprise.

The wedding of young Brooks and the beautiful and talented Moffett girl took place in Municipal Hall here on July 13, 1936. There had been no announcement of their engagement and the marriage was generally a surprise.

Early in 1935, at a party in the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, Moffett announced the engagement of Adelaide to Henry Gibbins, jr., son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Henry Gibbins, a former football captain at Central High School in that city. They were to be married in the fall, but in May the young woman announced the engagement had been broken by mutual consent.

Brooks, whose marriage to Miss Moffett followed a whirlwind courtship, was the son of the millionaire, Reginald Moffett, and Mrs. Robert H. Brand, one of the five celebrated Langhorne sisters of Greenwood, Va. His aunt, Lady Astor, the former Nancy Langhorne, was the first woman to win a seat in the British Parliament. Two other aunts were Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, of New York, wife of the famous artist, and Mrs. Maurice Flynn, of Greenwich, Conn.

Father a New Dealer.

Former Federal Housing Administrator Moffett, who gave up a $100,000 a year job with Standard Oil after a quarrel over the New Deal, accepted the housing post from President Roosevelt in the summer of 1934. His Government salary was $10,000 a year, not enough to maintain the palatial yacht which he kept anchored in the Potomac River.

Adelaide Moffett made her debut in this city in 1932. Later she went to Washington with her father and her younger sister, Ruth. The social whirl there did not satisfy her; she was ambitious to make her own way as a professional singer.

She went to Miami and obtained an engagement as a night club entertainer. Her father heard about this, made a hurried trip to Florida, and forced her to cancel the engagement.

Reached Contest Finals.

A few months later, Miss Moffett, using the name of Diana Dorrance, entered a Nation-wide radio contest to find a girl to sing opposite Dick Powell and was one of 12 candidates out of 851 to reach the finals.

A year ago it was revealed that Miss Moffett had a new ambition. She wanted to study medicine, it was reported, and had enrolled in Russell Sage College, at Troy, N. Y., to determine her fitness for that profession.

Adelaide's father married again two weeks after the fatal plunge of his first wife. The second Mrs. Moffett was Mrs. Arelaide Kim Morna, widow of Joseph F. Morna, the millionaire shipbuilder.

In January of this year, Ruth Moffett, 16, and Warren Johnson, 24, eloped to Harrison, N. Y., and were married. Adelaide was the only member of either family at the ceremony.

Week-End Gifts To Be Reported Today to Chest

they are few and there is genuine good faith on the part of all Chest and county leaders. I have just had a most cordial meeting with representatives of the suburban communities, and we are in full agreement.

"It is understood that every suburban resident who is solicited in his place of business in Washington has the right to receive a suburban pledge card and the right to use that card as well as the Chest pledge card, according to his own interest in the needs of Washington and the neighboring communities."

The important thing, Jennings added, is that each contributor make clear where he wants his gifts to go.

"The Chest is not handling any suburban pledges or payments, and pledges which are not perfectly clear must be followed up for further information."

Many contributions to the Chest are coming from donors outside Washington, leaders revealed yesterday. In the Government unit, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, chairman, reported gifts from Buenos Aires, Prague, Paris and one from war-torn Madrid. A retired Government clerk, now living in Massachusetts, sent a substantial sum.

WJSV will give another remote control broadcast at 6 p. m. today. Hugh Conover, announcer, will get the story of Juanita K. Nye House, a Community Chest settlement.

newly acquired engagement ring, three huge white diamonds set in platinum, and a platinum and diamond wrist watch. She wore a shoulder bouquet of two large purple orchids, the gift of her fiance.

"I think," said Miss du Pont, "that there has been too much said about it all already. We are hoping to live quietly again after the public announcement is made."

"I am just going to have a very small wedding in Christ Church," she said. "I don't know when it will be and we haven't an idea where we will live after the wedding."

Met at New York Party.

Tall and willowly, Miss du Pont is, however, more than a head shorter than her fiance. Both seemed unable to remember where they had first met, but both agreed that it was at one of the parties in New York.

"We have known each other a long time," said young Roosevelt. "It has been almost three years ago, you know."

"Now, oh, now," he admonished laughingly when asked how long they had been secretly engaged, and would not reply to a question about love at first sight.

He refused to pose for newsreel men. "I don't like the way I look in the reels," he said. "It makes me look more gawky."

"You see, I told the Washington men not to send their men and made an agreement with them then that I would pose for no other newsreel."

The President's son said he gave the ring to Miss du Pont on Friday night when he arrived from Harvard to spend the week-end. He returned to his studies tonight.

"No, after all, I am only a student, and I can't leave my classes," he said, when asked if he would accompany his father to South America.

"I haven't an idea what I am going to do when I get out of college," he said. "I don't know whether I will study law or go to business college, but it won't be politics; of that I am certain," he said with emphasis.

Family Is Absent.

Members of the du Pont family were absent from the room during the interview, although du Pont sent word that he agreed with the President's son that there should be no newsreels.

"I am afraid the President might not like it," was Du Pont's message.

Miss du Pont visited Washington frequently during the last few years. She said she did not know when she would visit the White House again.

"It will be soon after my parents get back," Roosevelt added.

"What do we have in common?" young Franklin laughed. "Why everything. Riding, dancing, hunting, backgammon. By the way, you just interrupted our game."

"We have an appointment at 3," said Miss du Pont pointedly.

"Well, the fact of the matter was," said young Roosevelt, "we were just going to walk around the grounds a bit before I leave for college."

Anacostia Legion Will Install Thursday

Kenna-Main Post, No. 37, American Legion, the community legion organization for Anacostia and Congress Heights, will install its 1937 officers at ceremonies at Hitchcock Hall on the St. Elizabeth's Hospital grounds, Thursday night.

Department officers from District Legion headquarters will be in charge of ceremonies. A reception and dance in honor of the new officers and 12 new members will be held after the installation.

Old-Age Pension Is Topic at Forum

The strength and weaknesses of the Social Security program as it affects the District will be discussed in an open forum tonight in Barker Hall at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, under auspices of the Monday Evening Club.

The policies of the Social Security Board will be presented by the chief of its division of plans and grants, Dr. Geoffry May.

Application of this program to the District will be explained by Miss May Hankins, Miss Madorah Donahue and Paul Kirby, of the Board of Public Welfare, and will be followed by open discussion.

the official record be held up until the missing or illegible information can be obtained. If an applicant does not know the answer to any specific question, the instructions say, he should enter the word "unknown" in that space.

Return Instructions.

The worker's application form only asks such questions as the name and address of the worker, name and address of his employer, date and place of the worker's birth, his father's name and mother's full maiden name. The information is designed to provide the Government with a means of identifying the worker. The questions are in sharp contrast with those which were forecast in the heat of the political campaign.

At that time charges were made that the Social Security Board intended to require each employe to state his church affiliations, whether divorced and numerous other personal matters. It was said also that a metal identification tag would be given each employe to be worn for life.

The Social Security Board pointed out that the employes' cards need not be returned through the employer but may be sent to the postoffices by the following methods: 1, handing it to any labor organization of which the worker is a member; 2, handing it to a letter carrier; 3, delivering it personally or by messenger to any postoffice; 4, by mailing it, without postage, in a sealed envelope, addressed "Postmaster, Local;" or 5, by handing the application form back to the employer.

When the application forms are received back at the postoffices they will be sent to the "typing centers," each serving a definite area. There are to be 1,072 such centers, where cards will be made out certifying to each employe that a Social Security account number has been assigned to him. These cards will be returned to the workers through the postoffice system are are to be retained for identification purposes. At the typing centers an office record card for each employe will be prepared and will be forwarded to the records division of the board at Baltimore.

Exemptions Noted.

Exemptions from provisions of the old-age benefits clause are provided for the following cases:

1. Self-employment.
2. Employes of the railroad industry subject to the carriers' taxing act of 1935.
3. Agricultural labor.
4. Domestic service in a private home.
5. Casual labor not in the course of the employer's trade or business.
6. Service performed not in the course of the employer's trade or business.
7. Service in the employ of the United States Government or of an instrumentality of one or more States or political subdivisions.
8. Service performed in the employ of a corporation, community chest, or a fund or foundation operated for religious, charitable, scientific or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

As a final word of advice the board last night cautioned:

"Employers or employes in doubt as to whether they come within the scope of the act should either fill out an application form and return it in the required way or seek advice from the local postal authorities."

Rites Tomorrow For Edward Beall

Funeral services for Edward T. Beall, 45, of Cedar Grove, Md., will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Salem M. E. Church, Cedar Grove. The Rev. Raymond H. Brown will officiate. Burial will be in the adjoining cemetery.

Mr. Beall, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beall, had been a lifelong resident of the Cedar Grove neighborhood. He engaged in farming until early last summer, when he was kicked by a horse as he led the animal into a stable.

Blood poisoning resulted from the crushed condition of the leg and he died Friday at Springfield Hospital, Sykesville, Md. The body will remain at the Beall's Funeral Home in Damascus until time for the funeral.

Gods Draw Nearer To Pueblo Red Men

Zuni, N. M., Nov. 15 (AP).—While their white neighbors were counting the days until Christmas, Indians of this plateau pueblo whispered excitedly today: "Only 32 knots to shalako."

For as dawn broke over the yellow rooftops of the abode village, the chief of the Longhorn Council solemly untied another knot in the shalako string calendar. Unloosening of the last one will signalize the annual re-entrance into the pueblo of messengers from the shalako gods.

FROM 4,192 CARS A YEAR TO OVER 4,000,000
—with the aid of Instalment Buying

As the curtain rises on the 1937 models, miracle cars are presented at new low prices, on terms to meet your convenience.

How different from the show of 1900, with its crude, high-priced "Horseless Carriages" that could be bought only for cash!

When the privileges of instalment buying were offered to men of average income, sales began to soar—prices to drop. Cars were no longer the exclusive property of the rich. Any responsible person could enjoy one, paying part cash and the balance monthly.

As sales increased new and better models appeared. Yet prices continued to drop so that still more people could afford the convenience and comfort of independent transportation. Today, there are two cars to every three American families. And you can get a superb 1937 model for a fraction of former prices, whether you buy for cash or on the C. I. T. Budget Plan.

For more than 20 years C. I. T. has aided in the remarkable development of the automobile industry, which now employs, directly and indirectly, one out of every seven of the nation's workers.

Through a nationwide network of Local Offices the C. I. T. Budget Plan is helping responsible families everywhere to enjoy finer cars and such other modern conveniences as refrigerators, radios, washing machines and automatic heating plants.

Blum Program Still Imperiled After 6 Months

Storm Rages Over Plans as Split in Ranks Threatens Tenure.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 15.—The People's Front government concluding its first half-year of power pointed today to a long list of social and economic reforms—more than were adopted in the preceding 20 years, the Popular Frontists assert.

But despite the wide scope of measures already imposed, a large part of Premier Leon Blum's program has yet to be put into effect.

The government has had anything but easy sailing since its formation last June. Widespread labor strife, manifestations of class enmity, increased political bitterness, and recurrent outbreaks of street fighting have accompanied enactment of reforms applied to industry, commerce and finance.

The efficacy of the government's program to attain its goal—a strong, free, happy and prosperous France—is hotly disputed.

Rightists charge the program has increased unemployment, made living higher, provoked class strife, hurt business, robbed citizens of their savings, added to the war peril and generally injured the country.

Cite Worker Benefits.

Leftists assert the program already has brought untold benefits to workers, started business and industry on the uptrend and opened the way for rehabilitation of France's foreign trade.

Moderates—Radical Socialists, who, while affiliated with the Peoples Front, are less enthusiastic about the program than other elements—say it is too early to judge results. They are giving the government more time—and warning it not to yield to its extreme Leftist division, the Communists.

The danger of dissolution of the Peoples Front has haunted the government from the start. Communists have clamored for intervention in Spain and the right of strikers to occupy plants. Moderates have attacked some of the social reforms and made strong demands for restoration of civil peace. A bolt of either faction would leave the front without a parliamentary majority and topple the cabinet.

One of the most vigorously resisted measures of the program, the 40-hour week in French industry, although enacted into law several months ago, has not yet been put into general effect.

Technicians Study Effects.

The government's plan is to extend it gradually to various industries, after the national economic council, a body composed of technicians and representatives of labor, industry, commerce and agriculture, has studied its effects and approved the manner of its application to the respective industries.

The plan calls for no reduction in monthly salaries—which, in view of the reduction of working hours, means an increase in hourly salary rates.

It was first applied to underground workers of the coal industry. The metals and baking industries of the Paris region are scheduled to be next.

Employers are fighting it, asserting it will boost the French production costs to a level where French products will be unable to compete in foreign markets. They demand the government, instead of imposing the 40-hour week in France alone, take the initiative at Geneva for an international agreement for its adoption throughout the world.

Works Program Like PWA.

The public works program, designed to absorb unemployment and modeled somewhat after the PWA program in the United States, is still in a preliminary stage, little or no actual work having been begun.

The wheat control office, the government's chief step for the aid of agriculture, is functioning, but has not been operating long enough to show definite results. If it is successful, control plans for other crops will be created along its lines.

The machinery has been set up for granting government credit to business, designed to enable industry to meet the initial strain of pay roll increases under the program and to stimulate production generally, but has not yet functioned in a large way.

Parts of the program already put fully into effect include paid vacations throughout industry, collective labor contracts and the reorganization of the Bank of France.

The paid vacations and the labor contracts were won by workers in the settlement of the general strike imposed by the government as it came into office and later were made law.

In the general strike settlement and the settlement of subsequent strikes, workers won pay increases of from 7 to 15 per cent. Many of the settlements were negotiated after government intervention.

The vacations—two weeks with full pay—were accompanied by special summer rail rates which sent hundreds of thousands of workers into the country for the best vacation of their lives and resulted in increased railroad receipts and a boom for low-cost resort establishments.

The reorganization of the Bank of France has been important chiefly in giving the government closer control of it. The transfer of power from the 200 largest stockholders to all 40,000 stockholders has resulted in little change—only 900 exercised their right to vote and elected board representatives not very different in financial and social views from those who previously controlled the institution.

Flood-Control Plan to Await Survey Report

Board to Rate All Projects on Basis of Priority of Their Need.

By the Associated Press.

A broad survey of the Nation's water resources, ordered by President Roosevelt and now nearing completion, apparently holds the key to Congressional action on flood control.

Whether a concerted battle would be made at the next session for funds to implement the $380,000,000 omnibus flood control act depended largely upon the recommendation of the National Resources Board, informed sources said yesterday.

Under a Presidential mandate, the board has been at work since last spring on a "synthesis" dealing with all aspects of the water usage problem. It embraces stream erosion control, navigation, hydroelectric power development, stream pollution, flood control, drainage for malaria and mosquito control, irrigation, re-creation and water supply.

With only a few men in the field, the board's chief function has been to serve as a clearing house for all the Federal agencies conducting the studies and to draft the final report.

Concerning flood control, officials said the report would make reference to each of the projects in the omnibus bill passed at the last session, but for which no funds were appropriated. The recommendations will deal with priorities rather than appropriations, it was explained. The projects will be given the ratings advocated by the Army engineers.

While some of the projects will be marked "ready to go," officials said they were uncertain yet as to how many would be in that class.

Described by Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, of the Senate Commerce Committee as the first "porkless" bill of its kind, the measure authorized construction of flood control projects in more than 40 States. It also established a governmental policy on flood control, including requirement that States and local communities jointly bear the cost.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, who was active in the drive for Federal flood control legislation, indicated some changes might be made in the omnibus bill at the forthcoming session. He criticized the present form of the law, asserting it had made an efficient program of flood prevention impossible.

Since Congress adjourned, the Army engineers have been carrying out preliminary work on some of the projects authorized in the omnibus act. Funds provided by the Works Progress Administration have been used in Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia and California to get some of the flood control work started.

In addition, money from the engineers' regular appropriation has been devoted, officials said, to completing plans so that actual construction could begin as soon as funds are available.

Train-Auto Crash Kills Five Youths

Kankakee, Ill., Nov. 15 (AP).—Five youths were killed and another probably fatally injured today when their old model automobile crashed into the side of a moving freight train at Wichert, southeast of Kankakee.

The dead were Cecil Royce, 17, of Momence, Ill; Charles Royce, 20, his brother; Ed Lyons, 21, of Momence, Ill.; Clark Steele, 25, of Momence, the driver; Arnold Anderson, 22, of St. Anne, Ill.

In a critical condition in the Kankakee Hospital was Robert Lyons, 19, brother of Ed.

Lyons, dazed and semi-conscious, said they were returning to Momence from a roadhouse dance about 4 a. m. when their car struck the train, a Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad freight.

W. C. Smith, Noted As Scientist, Dies

William C. Smith, prominent young chemist connected for several years with the textile division of the Bureau of Standards here, died Saturday at his home in Utica, N. Y.

As a bureau scientist, Smith conducted important research in the field of dyes and fabrics and their resistance to fading. He wrote several papers on the subject for the bureau, and also for scientific publications.

When he left the bureau three years ago, Smith returned to Utica, where he worked as a research expert in a textile mill. He was a graduate of the Lowell (Mass.) Textile Institute, and belonged to the American Association of Textile Chemists and Colorists.

Wallace, Aide Will Make Tour Of RA Projects

Observers See Action as Move to Consolidate Resettlement Unit.

Spokesmen for the Resettlement Administration said yesterday that Secretary Wallace and Rexford G. Tugwell, director of the New Deal agency, would make a joint inspection tour of resettlement projects in Southern States in the next ten days.

The tour was viewed in some quarters here as another indication that the Resettlement Administration might be made a permanent part of the Agriculture Department.

Resettlement projects in Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama were described as having been listed for inspection.

Wallace and H. R. Tolley, Agricultural Adjustment Administrator, who is expected to make at least part of the trip, already are in the South and will speak today at a Houston (Tex.) conference and tomorrow at an Arkansas Farm Bureau session at Little Rock.

Officials said Tugwell probably would join them in Arkansas to start the tour. Tugwell is Undersecretary of Agriculture in addition to heading Resettlement, but has devoted a large part of his attention to the latter for more than a year.

Move Held Natural.

Both Wallace and Tugwell have said recently that shift of the Resettlement Administration to the Agriculture Department would be a natural consolidation of emergency and independent agencies. Both also have been talking of a Federal program directed at the farm-tenant problem.

Resettlement spokesmen said the inspection party would include W. W. Alexander, deputy administrator to Tugwell, and Paul H. Appleby, assistant to Wallace, who has been much interested in farm tenancy.

Dedicatory exercises for a 5,800-acre plantation near England, Ark., that has been converted into 100 family tracts by Resettlement, is scheduled for Friday, with the inspection party and other Federal and State officials taking part.

Other projects on the itinerary were said to include:

Itinerary Listed.

A 90-family community Resettlement project near Lakeview, Ark., and a 20,000-acre tract of badly eroded land between Helena and Mariana, Ark.

A 10,000-acre tract known as Shelby Forest, near Memphis, Tenn.

A 90,000-acre plot of submarginal land in northeast Mississippi, near Starkville.

Five different subsistence homestead projects near Birmingham, Ala., where part-time farming is expected to aid industrial workers to maintain families.

Resettlement spokesmen said exact dates for visiting the projects were not known, but that the party expected to return here not later than November 26.

Police Shoot Trio In Extortion Plot

Kansas City, Nov. 15 (AP).—City detectives shot and dangerously wounded three alleged extortionists today in the office of Andrew A. Brown, 38, manager of the National Battery Co.

Detectives John Flavin and John Clifford, jr., said they shot the men after they surprised them threatening Brown.

They had been assigned to guard Brown after he reported the three had threatened his life if he failed to pay them $2,000.

The wounded men were Paul Wingate, 27; Paul Spano, 24, and Henry Calia, 25.

Brown told police the men accused him of having knowledge of the slayers of William N. Polley, business agent for the truck drivers' union, who was shot to death as he sat in his motor car, October 11, 1935.

Police said the claim was without foundation.

Durig Bust of Long Goes on Sale; City Ponders Fate of Sculptor

Plaster Likeness of Louisianan Open to 'Any Offer;' Its Creator, Who Spurned $2,000, Then Gave It Away, No Longer on the Scene.

The name of Prof. Ernest Durig, the melancholy Swiss, popped into the news yesterday and Washington is speculating on whether it means the artistic end of the picturesque Capital sculptor.

A bust of Huey Long, which Durig fashioned of plaster, went on sale at the George L. Henderson Jewelry Co., "for anything it will bring." It was offered by William Camp, nephew of the jeweler.

Camp was given the bust along with another of Will Rogers on the occasion of Durig's eviction from his former home on Sixteenth street for nonpayment of rent.

Camp, a local newspaperman, was given the sculptor's two most recent works in a burst of generosity which Camp says took him wholly by surprise. Durig moved into the Shoreham Hotel in a typical Durig gesture and tendered a large cocktail party to celebrate his eviction and thereupon gave away his two most prized works.

Durig explained he had offered the bust to Mrs. Huey Long—now a Senator—but that she had offered "only $2,000" for it, at which he turned up his nose. Rather than accept such "a miserable price," he would give it away, throwing in the Will Rogers for good measure.

Camp found the large objects an embarrassment in his small apartment at 2019 I street northwest. Huey got in the way and finally was put up for sale, Will Rogers being allowed to remain.

The newsman has been unable to find Durig for several months and does not know what happened to the man who has sculptured (from life) such personages as Pope Pius, King Alfonso, Mussolini, Haile Selassie and dozens of others.

Durig in 1933 caused a stir when he disappeared from a cocktail party at which he was host, clad in frock coat, silk hat, tan shoes, black shirt and white vest, swinging his inevitable walking stick.

Despite his somewhat distinctive costume, police could not locate him for several months. He finally returned and explained he was "observing America," and seeking 'spiritual ointment for his wounded temperament." He wrote President Roosevelt about his mysterious disappearance and further included a plea that he be allowed to remain in the United States, of which he was not a citizen.

He apparently succeeded in staying in America, and attended numerous social affairs in the Capital up until spring, at which time he informed friends he was going to Charlottesville as an art instructor at the University of Virginia summer school. He is married and has a family.

Camp said he has been unable to locate Durig since that time, and not knowing what else to do with his massive gifts, decided to sell at least one of them, and picked on the late Louisiana Senator. Durig told him, Camp said, that the bust was originally intended for Statutary Hall in the Capitol, but "political rascals had succeeded in keeping it out."

Death Tableau To Be Enacted In Russell Case

Police to Duplicate Tragedy on Lawn of Gouverneur Morris' Home.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 15.—A graphic tableau which authorities hope will throw light on the mysterious shooting of Reid Russell will be enacted tomorrow at the beach home of Gouverneur Morris, the novelist.

Decision to re-enact the death scene was announced by Capt. Clyde Plummer of the district attorney's office after Morris, his wife, Ruth, and Lila Lee, film actress, appeared voluntarily yesterday to tell what they knew of the death of the young man, with whom they were friendly.

Russell, 28, and unemployed, was found dead, a bullet wound in his head, in a lawn swing at the home of Morris at Redondo Beach last September 25.

On his lap lay a pistol. Investigators never found the bullet which killed him, nor the ejected shell.

Police tomorrow will shoot the death weapon into an object of the approximate solidity of the human head, then trace the bullet.

If it is not easily found, said Plummer, it will indicate that Russell did not die in the lawn swing—that he was killed elsewhere and his body carried there.

Antwerp Ship Painters Call a General Strike

Antwerp, Belgium, Nov. 15 (AP).—Ship painters here proclaimed a general strike today and two asserted Communists were arrested while trying to induce dock workers to join the projected walkout.

Shipping quarters here considered the painters' strike as the first move in what was described as a contemplated extension of the North American strike to continental harbors.

Crowds Flock To Auto Show Over Week-End

Attendance of Last Year Nearly Doubled; Trailers Stir Interest.

A steady stream of prospective buyers filed through Calvert Exhibit Hall over the week-end as the Seventeenth Automobile Show got under way.

Attracted by the 1937 creations of automotive engineers, crowds for the first two days nearly doubled the attendance for the same period last year.

Visitors showed more than idle curiosity in inspecting the 100 shining examples of American inventive genius.

The products of more than a score of manufacturers are being displayed this year. In contrast to previous years, when speed and power were stressed in new models, the emphasis of engineers and designers this year is placed on safety, comfort and beauty.

One of the outstanding attractions is the trailer exhibit, which has caught the attention of the curious. On Saturday and Sunday throngs formed lines to get a chance to view the interiors of these traveling bungalows.

Trailer manufacturers estimate that production has trebled this year, and next year will see a further increase. Some half a million trailers now are in use.

The auto show will continue through next Saturday, with the exhibit hall being open daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

Voiding of Naval Clauses in Treaty Stirs Discussion of Nazis' Aims.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Beginning of a German campaign against Russia and Eastern Europe was seen by French officials today as one possible development of Germany's renunciation of the Versailles Peace Treaty navigation clauses.

(Germany yesterday announced resumption of sovereignty over her internal waterways, including the strategic Kiel Canal, heretofore administered by international commissions authorized by the Versailles pact.)

Officials here pointed out that Germany now was in a position to cut off Czechoslovakia from the sea and smother her world commerce if she wished.

"Germany can make Czechoslovakia choose between her world of commerce and her alliances, especially with Russia," one official said.

"She can demand that Czechoslovakia take a benevolent attitude in the event of a possible Russo-German war, or cut her off from world markets."

One official said it "is hard to see how energetic protest can be made after violation of military clauses of the treaty were allowed to go unpunished."

(France protested vigorously to the League of Nations when Germany marched troops into the Rhineland early this year.)

Premier Leon Blum's government awaited replies today from interested governments in his move for a collective protest to Berlin. A final decision would await their answers, it was said here.

Blum Would Disarm.

Soissons, France, Nov. 15 (AP).—Europe and the world must choose between disarmament and war, Premier Leon Blum declared here today in an address to supporters of his Popular Front government.

The premier announced that France will inaugurate a new drive for European disarmament at the League of Nations.

Business Hopes To Oust Berry As Co-ordinator

Advisory Council Reported Ready to Ask Change Here Thursday.

An informal agreement among business and industrial leaders to ask President Roosevelt to name some person or agency other than Maj. George L. Berry to collaborate in Government-plus-industry recovery efforts was revealed last night.

Informed sources disclosed that industrial leaders, anxious to renounce their former hostility to the Administration, but unable to get along with Berrry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, and also head of Labor's Non-Partisan League, are eager to have him replaced.

The Business Advisory Council, meeting Thursday in the Departmentof Commerce, apprised of this sentiment, will consider the matter, it was said, and will take up with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, the question of a new co-operative basis for consultation and action between the Administration and business.

One proposal will suggest enlargement of functions of the council and direct channeling of the regular contacts between it and industrial organizations.

Would Become Spokesman.

This would make the council a direct spokesman for business, as well as a mouthpiece for Administration suggestions.

Whether this would mean the naming of a single individual or of a group agency will be considered.

Industrial circles are likely to suggest that Roper himself call a conference of business leaders to supplant the one already called by Maj. Berry for December.

The names of Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; George H. Mead, Dayton manufacturer and Advisory Council chairman, and S. Clay Williams, former NRA chairman and tobacco manufacturer, are considered standouts for the post of official intermediary.

Industrialists, sensitive to the implications of being blanketed as "economic royalists," and anxious to remove such a "stigma," it was said, are eager to co-operate, but are unwilling to accept as the Administration go-between a labor leader or politician who has constantly attacked them.

Resent Berry's Activities.

Their attack thus is aimed, at least in part, at Maj. Berry, and while they feel they are in no position, according to informed quarters, to insist on certain demands on the White House, they also resent and fear Berry's numerous titles and activities, and particularly his last week's indirect announcement he might found a labor party in 1940. He was doing this, they assert, at the same time he was inviting leaders of business and industry to a Washington conference for December 11 and 12, as the Administration spokesman.

Attendance at Berry's previous meetings has been slim and non-representative, they claim, and will continue so until the President has more definitely expressed confidence in Maj. Berry's abilities and confirmed more completely his status.

Businessmen will have a series of opportunities this week to express their desire to go along with the Administration. On Wednesday the executive committee of the Business Advisory Council will meet in New York before meeting here Thursday. The United States Chamber of Commerce will hold a directors' meeting here Friday. On December 9 and 10 in New York the National Association of Manufacturers will have its annual meeting.

Montanans Push Efforts To Save Trapped Pair

Superior, Mont., Nov. 15 (AP).—Rescue workers dug feverishly today to reach two miners buried in a gold mine 15 miles south of Superior.

Deputy Sheriff A. G. Miles said it was thought the men—Antone Gustafson, 40, and Oscar Gevart, 45, both of Superior—were digging in an offshoot from the main tunnel of the windfall mine and struck loose dirt which caved in upon them. He added there was little chance they would be found alive.

19 Steel Window Manufacturing Concerns Charged With Price-Fixing by U. S. Trade Unit

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission said yesterday it had charged 19 corporations manufacturing metal window products and their trade association with maintaining price-fixing and eliminating competition in the sale of the products.

The commission ordered a hearing for December 18 at which the corporations, said by the commission to represent substantially all of the manufacturers of metal window products in the country, were directed to show cause why they should not cease practices charged to them in the complaint.

Much of the output of the corporations, the commission announced, had been sold to Federal, State and municipal governments. The commission said some of the corporations organized a trade association known as the "Solid Section Steel Window Industry," but since January, 1934, it had been known as the "Metal Window Institute," with Washington headquarters.

Corporations named in the complaint were:

William Bayley Co., Springfield, Ohio; Bliss Steel Products Corp., East Syracuse, N. Y.; Bougert & Carlough Co., Paterson, N. J.; Campbell Metal Window Corp., Baltimore; Concrete Engineering Co., Omaha, Nebr.; Crittall Manufacturing Co., Inc., Washington; Detroit Steel Products Co., Detroit; Durwhit Metal Products Co., Los Angeles; Federal Steel Sash Co., Inc., Waukesha, Wis.; Michael Flynn Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Hope's Windows, Inc., Jamestown, N. Y.; Kewanee Manufacturing Co., Kewanee, Ill.; Mesker Bros. Iron Co., St. Louis; Michel & Pfeffer Iron Works, Inc., San Francisco; S. H. Pomeroy Co., Inc., New York; Soule Steel Co., San Francisco; J. S. Thorn Co., Philadelphia; Truscon Steel Co., Youngstown, Ohio, and Vento Steel Sash Co., Inc., Muskegon Heights, Mich.

Officers of the trade association who were cited were:

Carl R. Raquet, Detroit Steel Products Co.; Grover J. Meyer, Truscon Steel Co.; James Allinson, J. S. Thorn Co.; Guy D. Bayley, William Bayley Co.; Frank Garratt, Hope's Windows, Inc., and C. J. McIntosh, Federal Steel Sash Co., Inc.

The commission also cited Ralph H. Sartar, whom it described as not an officer of the Metal Window Institute, but employed as its commissioner.

European War Is Sure in Year, Pertinax Says

otherwise that military power will decline as France, England, Poland and the other countries of Europe reach the height of their armament programs.

"There is no question a preventive war should have been fought before conditions in Europe drifted to their present pass," Geraud said.

"It has been suggested that France should allow Germany a free hand in eastern and central Europe where she might become embroiled in a war that would keep her busy for 10 or 15 years," Geraud said.

"But are we sure Germany would lose herself in the marshes of Russia as Napoleon did? Are we sure Germany would go to war with Russia? Our military experts are doubtful of Germany's expectations toward Russia.

"We do feel that the central European powers would not engage in a war with Germany unless they were assured of the support of France. They would reach compromises and sign treaties and soon France would find her whole position had been reversed.

"It must be remembered that Germany was on excellent terms with Russia until 1934. If Germany and Russia should get together again an explosive combination would be formed for which we would have to be prepared.

Cites Dutch Plans.

"But Germany now looks westward. France and Britain are rich prizes worth being fought for. The Dutch generals are aware of Germany's ambitions and I have been informed they have made plans to open the dikes and flood their country if the worst comes to the worst."

"France has refrained from sending war materials to the Madrid government only because Premier Blum knew that if he did so the British would withdraw their guarantee of protection of our borders."

There has been considerable speculation over motives of Russia in moving so late if it really intended to save the Madrid government, Geraud said, adding that the Franco-Russian alliance has proven unsatisfactory both in Paris and Moscow.

"Some believe Russia may use the Spanish situation as an excuse to sever her relations with France," he added.

When Father Edmund Walsh reminded Geraud he had pictured Germany as the real menace to European peace, while indications are Hitler is not involved in the Spanish situation, the bearded journalist replied:

"Hitler not only is in the picture, he is the main source of trouble in Spain. It is well known that Gen. Franco gets money from Germany and that the rebel general conferred in Berlin before the revolution started."

Father Halsh reminded Geraud Russia sent 32,000,000 francs to the Madrid government, and that shortly before the outbreak of the revolution 30 Spaniards left Moscow for Madrid.

"It is going rather far to saddle Russia with responsibility for every revolution," Geraud said. "In 1873, I believe it was, revolution broke out in Spain, but I do not think any of the rebels passed through Moscow."

Prof. Grace Hadley Beardsley, of Gucher College, another member of the panel, asked Geraud if Premier Blum had not supported a non-intervention pact because he belied other great powers would have thrown their support behind the rebels.

It would have been a violation of international law, Geraud said, for other nations openly to aid rebel forces seeking overthrow of the established Spanish government.

Constantine Brown, foreign editor of the Washington Star, asked Geraud if his theory for establishing peace in Europe was not comparable with that of the farmer who wanted to burn all surrounding buildings to save his own from fire.

Geraud replied that only by force could peace be kept.

Father Walsh reminded Geraud of the enlightened and passive views now held by peoples of various countries and asked:

"Does any government today dare declare war?"

"What you have said does not apply to the people of Germany and Italy," Geraud replied.

Discusses Far East.

Father Walsh reminded Geraud of the revolt of the German people at the close of the World War and asked if he thought Hitler would risk the fate of the Kaiser.

"It is possible last-minute resistance would arise in Germany," Geraud said, "but we can not build security on such an assumption."

Father Walsh asked how the people could have any faith in a League of Nations, recalling only the United States stood firm in protest against Japanese invasion of China.

"A league will never be able to bring an aggressor to book unless two or three leading powers make it clear they are ready to go to war if necessary," Geraud replied. "In the Far East the United States and Great Britain, the only big powers involved, were not ready to act."

Promptness with which small nations voted to impose sanctions on Italy was an encouraging sign of the power of a league, Geraud said. If the small powers can be given confidence the strong powers are prepared to act aggresively they would act similarly again, Geraud predicted.

The neutrality of the United States is taken for granted on the Continent, Geraud declared. "But we look forward to you not undertaking anything you are not ready to back up," he added.

Neutrality which is violated does more harm than good, he added.

The United States is a strong molder of public opinion, Geraud said. "You have an honorary stall among the canons of England," he said.

Father Walsh reminded Geraud that honorary canons are not allowed to vote and usually are given the bill for the banquet."

Laughter broke out in the audience when one of its number sent Geraud the following written question:

"Why do you assume public opinion in the United States would favor France in a war with Germany?"

"I assume nothing," Geraud smilingly replied, "but I believe that if such a war should occur the questions of freedom involved would find sympathetic understanding in this country."

Geraud was asked if "just revision" of the Versailles Treaty might bring peace to Europe. He said the territorial provisions of the treaty could never be revised without force, although there was some possibility of slight revisions in the territorial boundaries of the central powers.

Earlier in the day Geraud was a luncheon guest at the White House.

Huston Thompson, president of the board of directors of Town Hall, in opening the winter meeting told the audience he believed Town Hall was ready to move into its own building if someone would donate one. He reminded the audience it was a Washingtonian who donated a meeting hall for the Town Hall of New York.

U. S. Strike Aid Aim of Mayor Flying to City

Rossi to Urge the President to Intervene; 4 Others May Follow Him.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Angelo Rossi, mayor of San Francisco, left by airplane today for Washington to seek President Roosevelt's intervention in the Pacific Coast maritime strike, now in its third week, with little prospect of immediate peace.

Four other mayors of Pacific Coast cities were reported either en route or planning to go to Washington for the same purpose.

Rossi hopes his trip may bring an end to the shutdown of shipping and the paralysis of commerce that is becoming more serious daily.

John F. Dore, Seattle's chief executive, who has supported labor strongly; Mayor Frank McCracken, of Oakland; Frank Shaw, Los Angeles chief executive, and Joseph K. Carson, jr., mayor of Portland, also were reported planning Washington visits.

They planned these new moves as a rising tide of public opinion swung toward demands that the maritime strike be settled before the holiday season.

Peace Appeals Increase.

Virtually silent in the first two weeks of the walkout, the public, as represented by city governments, organizations of businessmen, shippers' associations and individual entrepreneurs affected by the lockout have released a flood of letters, statements and appeals directed to Federal authorities asking something be done to start the wheels of commerce turning again.

Many of these appeals went to Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who worked for a month seeking to prevent the strike and who has spent the last two weeks in a series of conferences with Pacific Coast shipowners and the seven unions representing their 35,000 employes.

McGrady called union leaders into another conference at his headquarters tonight.

Showdown Due Today.

New York, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—All three sides at war in the Eastern maritime strike declared tonight the strength of the insurgent walkout will be decided tomorrow when the crew of the United States liner Washington will be asked to walk off.

Ship owners, International Seamen's Union officials and insurgent strikers agreed the expected showdown will settle the conflicting claims of all sides as to the extent of the strike. The Washington arrived from Europe Saturday and is to sail again Wednesday.

Rings Wrong Box; Lands in Lock-Up On Double Charge

John McCourkin, colored, 28, of 1430 Sixth street northwest, called for reinforcements to settle an argument yesterday and was dumbfounded when three companies of firemen arrived with axes and firehooks.

"All I wanted was a few policemen," McCourkin declared.

A police scout car which responded to the alarm at Fourth and C streets northwest took McCourkin to the Second Precinct, where he was charged with intoxication and ringing a false fire alarm.

Bridge Trophy Is Captured by Capital Couple

By Marian H. Barre.

The Woodward Cup stays home this summer. Thomas Hamlin and E. S. Connolly saw to that, when they won the open pair championship of the District of Columbia in the Bridge League tournament at the Hotel Shoreham yesterday.

In six years competition for this trophy, Baltimore players twice have succeeded in wresting it from the Capital. This happened last year when it was won by Mrs. Allan Rutherford and Mrs. H. H. Cairns. In consequence, there was great rejoicing when the local pair defeated the visitors.

The runners-up, Roy Thurtell and R. S. Wood, a local pair, were champions in 1934. Visiting pairs made the next positions, Edward Ellenbogan and A. R. Goodman, third, and Mrs. R. C. Young and C. H. Goren, fourth.

Mrs. Rebecca Phinney and J. C. Cook won the intermediate event, for the Evening Star Trophy. Second were Mrs. T. D. Sheldon and Mrs. R. S. Du Bois; third, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Little. The first and second pairs in this event retained their relative positions through both sessions of play.

A two-section open game was run concurrently, with special trophies for both sections. John Kunkle and T. R. Wickersham made top score in section A, runners-up were Mrs. Pauline Wilson and I. York. In section B, Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and Arch Kepner were high, Maj. and Mrs. Brice, second.

The team called "Brotherly Love," from the city of that name, won the team-of-four match. B. J. Becker, the first ranking player in the United States, captained this team; the other members were C. H. Goren, Mrs. R. C. Young and Robert Sitnick. The Philadelphian led both sessions.

A New York team consisting of Fred D. Kaplan, A. M. Barnes, Miss Edith Russell and Mrs. Ann Leary, made second place. The Baltimoreans were third, Dr. Lewellyn Lord, Mrs. Lord, John Kunkel and T. R. Wickersham composed the team. The local team to "show" was the Washington Whist Club. Fifth on the list was a second Baltimore team, Mrs. Allan Rutherford, Mrs. Fred Supplee, H. J. Geret and N. G. Wilson, jr. The team match was the only event to be won by out-of-town players. Twenty teams competed, of which nine were local players.

An American League Cup game, also run on Sunday evening, was won by William Cheeks and Samuel Groves. Runners-up were Miss Wilkinson and Mr. Butts, of Norfolk, Va.; third, Maj. and Mrs. Brice; fourth, Mrs. R. J. Belt and J. B. Lowell.

John H. Prince Is Dead; Served As Bryan Aide

John Hamilton Prince, of 3324 Seventeenth street northwest, private secretary to William Jennings Bryan when the Commoner was Secretary of State in the Wilson Administration, died in Homeopathic Hospital last night of pneumonia.

Granges' Heads Call on Nation To InsureCrops

Leaders at Columbus Rally Favor Permanent Plan for Agriculture.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 15.—Representing a cross-section of the American agricultural point of view, a dozen masters of State granges urged today enactment of legislation which would make crop insurance a permanent part of the national agricultural policy.

These masters have submitted crop insurance resolution to the seventieth annual meeting of the national grange and it was regarded likely that the organization, before it concludes its session Thursday, will be on record as favoring the insurance.

C. C. Cogswell, master of the Kansas State Grange, said he believed crop insurance a sound and constructive approach to the agricultural problem. He declared enough information had been gathered on the subject to assure that the program would be based on sound business principles.

L. J. Taber, master of the national grange, asserted crop insurance would prove as valuable as any other form of insurance.

Must Be "Tided Over."

"When a man's house burns he collects insurance if he has been wise enough to insure," said Taber. "When a farmer's crops are a total loss from drought or any other cause, his loss is just as acute as if his home burned. If he can carry insurance on his crops, he at least would have something to tide him over, to help him carry on until the next harvest."

"Droughts of the past few years," said C. H. Bramble, master of the Michigan State Grange, "appear to be the impelling reason behind the Grange demand for crop insurance. There is urgent need to protect agriculture from destruction of crops by drought in the future."

D. B. Anderson, South Carolina State Grange master, pointed out floods have been a frequent cause of ruin to crops. He said he was instructed by the South Carolina State Grange to work for adoption of crop insurance in the National Grange's "platform for agriculture."

Texas for Plan.

In Texas, said Ralph W. Moore, master of the Texas State Grange, there is strong sentiment in favor of some form of crop insurance. He agreed with Taber that it must be a voluntary plan and that it must not penalize the good farmer for the benefit of the poor farmer.

"Any plan should be based upon voluntary principles," More declared, "with rates suited to conditions in given areas, rising where losses are heaviest and falling in those sections where losses are less frequent and severe."

Post Model Home Visited by Throng

Permanesque Homes Village, new community at Beverly Hills, Alexandria, Va., had many visitors yesterday. They went there to attend the opening of the newest Washington Post model home attracting attention to this development.

The exhibit home is of brick and ready to move into. It is equipped with oil burner, electric stove and refrigerator. The house can be purchased for terms as low as $29 a month.

The model home contains three bedrooms, tile bath, living room with fireplace, dining room and modern electric kitchen. All the rooms are large and there is a built-in garage and maid's room in the basement.

This development and the new Post model home featuring it may be seen by driving over Arlington Memorial Bridge to Arlington Memorial, there taking the road to the left past the Little Tea House on South Arlington Ridge road, or Mount Vernon avenue, along the ridge to Russell road, then turning right to Beverly Hills.

BoyKilled Running To $1,000,000 Fire

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (AP).—A spectacular fire roared through a huge cotton oil warehouse today, causing damage unofficially estimated at $1,000,000.

The blaze was indirectly responsible for the death of 13-year-old Henry Matrango, who fell beneath a slowly moving freight train while running to the scene.

R. F. Ingold, president of the California Cotton Oil Co., owners, said 17,000 tons of cotton seed were in the warehouse. The loss is covered by insurance, he said.

Women's Party Predicts Equal Rights Victory

Mrs. Wiley Is Secretary; Key to D. C. Prison Given Mrs. Hilles.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 15.—Resolutions calling on the next Congress to approve the proposed women's equal rights amendment to the Constitution and proclaiming opposition to minimum wage laws for women alone were passed at today's final session of the National Women's Party, convention.

Helen Hunt West, Congressional secretary of the party, claimed the necessary two-thirds vote in Congress is now assured to carry the amendment.

Another resolution passed by the party praised President Roosevelt "for attempting, in codes of the national recovery act, for the first time to legislate equal pay for equal work for women."

Sarah T. Pell, of Ticonderoga, N. Y., was elected chairman of the party for the coming year. Other officers selected included Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Washington, D. C., secretary.

A highlight of the closing session was the presentation of the key to the old women's prison of the District of Columbia to Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Wilmington, Del., retiring chairman, and daughter of the late Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State under President Cleveland. Mrs. Hilles was one of the women incarcerated in the prison for picketing the White House during Woodrow Wilson's Administration.

Mrs. Karl Greene, of New Mexico, presented the key, a gift from Mrs. E. A. Bocock, wife of the superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, near the Capital, who obtained it from the matron of the old jail.

Burlington, Colo., Nov. 15 (AP).—Sim Hudson treated the town because he won an election bet.

At noon yesterday he gave everybody a free lunch. Two dances were in progress all day long. Four bands played in the streets. A parade was held in the afternoon. A crowd estimated at between 8,000 and 9,000 attended. The current report was that Sim's bet amounted to $4,000.

Soviet Bans New Opera For Jibes at Old Gods

Moscow, Nov. 15 (AP).—Soviet rulers of the theater rose up today against Poet Demyan Bedny because he ridiculed baptism in Russia and poked fun at ancient gods in a new comic opera, "The Titans."

The art committee of the Council of People's Commissars, the Soviet board of censors, ordered the opera withdrawn from the Kamerny Theater as "alien to Soviet art."

New Deal Backs 3 Laws in Week In High Court

Silver Tax, Chaco Embargo, Ban on Prison-Made Goods to Be Argued.

By the Associated Press.

Argument on test cases involving validity of three New Deal laws comes before the Supreme Court this week.

They affect the 50 per cent tax imposed on profits made just before the silver purchase act became effective, legislation authorizing the President to embargo shipment of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay for their Chaco war and the Ashurst-Sumners measure forbidding transportation of prison-made goods into States that bar their sale.

Before hearing the argument, the justices will assemble tomorrow to hand down a maximum of seven opinions and to announce whether they will review 25 cases appealed from lower courts. None is of outstanding interest.

Decisions in the cases argued this week and those debated last week may come as early as December 7. Last week the court heard argument on two New Deal cases. One involved the making by the PWA of loans and grants for publicly owned hydroelectric plants. The second presented the question of the Government holding up trial in lower courts of cases challenging the public utility holding company act pending a final decision in litigation it brought against the Electric Bond & Share Co. to test the legislation.

Other cases debated last week centered on validity of the New York unemployment insurance act which taxes employers to aid those out of work, the California and Illinois "fair trade" acts which prohibit sale of standard products at less than a stipulated price, and an injunction granted the Associated Press to restrain Radio Station KVOS, of Belingham, Wash., from broadcasting the press association's news items for 18 hours after publication.

Italy to Hold Rites On 'Sanctions Day'

Rome, Nov. 15 (AP).—One of the strangest of national ceremonies on the historical calendar—that of the "day of ignominy and iniquity" will be celebrated by Italians Wednesday.

The day to Italians is "sanctions day," first anniversary of the date upon which 52 member nations of the League of Nations ordered a tight economic siege against Italy. Just a year ago, Premier Mussolini ordered every Italian communal palace to be provided with a plaque recalling the "shamefulness of this concerted attack on Italy."

On Wednesday, Fascist officials will gather before these plaques. Victors against the siege, they will hear broadcast patriotic addresses.

Business Hopes To Oust Berry As Co-ordinator

Advisory Council Reported Ready to Ask Change Here Thursday.

An informal agreement among business and industrial leaders to ask President Roosevelt to name some person or agency other than Maj. George L. Berry to collaborate in Government-plus-industry recovery efforts was revealed last night.

Informed sources disclosed that industrial leaders, anxious to renounce their former hostility to the Administration, but unable to get along with Berrry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, and also head of Labor's Non-Partisan League, are eager to have him replaced.

The Business Advisory Council, meeting Thursday in the Departmentof Commerce, apprised of this sentiment, will consider the matter, it was said, and will take up with Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, the question of a new cooperative basis for consultation and action between the Administration and business.

One proposal will suggest enlargement of functions of the council and direct channeling of the regular contacts between it and industrial organizations.

Would Become Spokesman.

This would make the council a direct spokesman for business, as well as a mouthpiece for Administration suggestions.

Whether this would mean the naming of a single individual or of a group agency will be considered.

Industrial circles are likely to suggest that Roper himself call a conference of business leaders to supplant the one already called by Maj. Berry for December.

The names of Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; George H. Mead, Dayton manufacturer and Advisory Council chairman, and S. Clay Williams, former NRA chairman and tobacco manufacturer, are considered standouts for the post of official intermediary.

Industrialists, sensitive to the implications of being blanketed as "economic royalists," and anxious to remove such a "stigma," it was said, are eager to co-operate, but are unwilling to accept as the Administration go-between a labor leader or politician who has constantly attacked them.

Resent Berry's Activities.

Their attack thus is aimed, at least in part, at Maj. Berry, and while they feel they are in no position, according to informed quarters, to insist on certain demands on the White House, they also resent and fear Berry's numerous titles and activities, and particularly his last week's indirect announcement he might found a labor party in 1940. He was doing this, they assert, at the same time he was inviting leaders of business and industry to a Washington conference for December 11 and 12, as the Administration spokesman.

Attendance at Berry's previous meetings has been slim and nonrepresentative, they claim, and will continue so until the President has more definitely expressed confidence in Maj. Berry's abilities and confirmed more completely his status.

Businessmen will have a series of opportunities this week to express their desire to go along with the Administration. On Wednesday the executive committee of the Business Advisory Council will meet in New York before meeting here Thursday. The United States Chamber of Commerce will hold a directors' meeting here Friday. On December 9 and 10 in New York the National Association of Manufacturers will have its annual meeting.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission said yesterday it had charged 19 corporations manufacturing metal window products and their trade association with maintaining price-fixing and eliminating competition in the sale of the products.

The commission ordered a hearing for December 18 at which the corporations, said by the commission to represent substantially all of the manufacturers of metal window products in the country, were directed to show cause why they should not cease practices charged to them in the complaint.

Much of the output of the corporations, the commission announced, had been sold to Federal, State and municipal governments. The commission said some of the corporations organized a trade association known as the "Solid Section Steel Window Industry," but since January, 1934, it had been known as the "Metal Window Institute," with Washington headquarters.

Corporations named in the complaint were:

William Bayley Co., Springfield, Ohio; Bliss Steel Products Corp., East Syracuse, N. Y.; Bougert & Carlough Co., Paterson, N. J.; Campbell Metal Window Corp., Baltimore; Concrete Engineering Co., Omaha, Nebr.; Crittall Manufacturing Co., Inc., Washington; Detroit Steel Products Co., Detroit; Durwhit Metal Products Co., Los Angeles; Federal Steel Sash Co., Inc., Waukesha, Wis.; Michael Flynn Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Hope's Windows, Inc., Jamestown, N. Y.; Kewanee Manufacturing Co., Kewanee, Ill.; Mesker Bros. Iron Co., St. Louis; Michel & Pfeffer Iron Works, Inc., San Francisco; S. H. Pomeroy Co., Inc., New York; Soule Steel Co., San Francisco; J. S. Thorn Co., Philadelphia; Truscon Steel Co., Youngstown, Ohio, and Vento Steel Sash Co., Inc., Muskegon Heights, Mich.

Officers of the trade association who were cited were:

Carl R. Raquet, Detroit Steel Products Co.; Grover J. Meyer, Truscon Steel Co.; James Allinson, J. S. Thorn Co.; Guy D. Bayley, William Bayley Co.; Frank Garratt, Hope's Windows, Inc., and C. J. McIntosh, Federal Steel Sash Co., Inc.

The commission also cited Ralph H. Sartar, whom it described as not an officer of the Metal Window Institute, but employed as its commissioner.

European War Is Sure in Year, Pertinax Says

otherwise that military power will decline as France, England, Poland and the other countries of Europe reach the height of their armament programs.

"There is no question a preventive war should have been fought before conditions in Europe drifted to their present pass," Geraud said.

"It has been suggested that France should allow Germany a free hand in eastern and central Europe where she might become embroiled in a war that would keep her busy for 10 or 15 years," Geraud said.

"But are we sure Germany would lose herself in the marshes of Russia as Napoleon did? Are we sure Germany would go to war with Russia? Our military experts are doubtful of Germany's expectations toward Russia.

"We do feel that the central European powers would not engage in a war with Germany unless they were assured of the support of France. They would reach compromises and sign treaties and soon France would find her whole position had been reversed.

"It must be remembered that Germany was on excellent terms with Russia until 1934. If Germany and Russia should get together again an explosive combination would be formed for which we would have to be prepared.

Cites Dutch Plans.

"But Germany now looks westward. France and Britain are rich prizes worth being fought for. The Dutch generals are aware of Germany's ambitions and I have been informed they have made plans to open the dikes and flood their country if the worst comes to the worst."

"France has refrained from sending war materials to the Madrid government only because Premier Blum knew that if he did so the British would withdraw their guarantee of protection of our borders."

There has been considerable speculation over motives of Russia in moving so late if it really intended to save the Madrid government, Geraud said, adding that the Franco-Russian alliance has proven unsatisfactory both in Paris and Moscow.

"Some believe Russia may use the Spanish situation as an excuse to sever her relations with France," he added.

When Father Edmund Walsh reminded Geraud he had pictured Germany as the real menace to European peace, while indications are Hitler is not involved in the Spanish situation, the bearded journalist replied:

"Hitler not only is in the picture, he is the main source of trouble in Spain. It is well known that Gen. Franco gets money from Germany and that the rebel general conferred in Berlin before the revolution started."

Father Halsh reminded Geraud Russia sent 32,000,000 francs to the Madrid government, and that shortly before the outbreak of the revolution 30 Spaniards left Moscow for Madrid.

"It is going rather far to saddle Russia with responsibility for every revolution," Geraud said. "In 1873, I believe it was, revolution broke out in Spain, but I do not think any of the rebels passed through Moscow."

Prof. Grace Hadley Beardsley, of Gucher College, another member of the panel, asked Geraud if Premier Blum had not supported a non-intervention pact because he believed other great powers would have thrown their support behind the rebels.

It would have been a violation of international law, Geraud said, for other nations openly to aid rebel forces seeking overthrow of the established Spanish government.

Constantine Brown, foreign editor of the Washington Star, asked Geraud if his theory for establishing peace in Europe was not comparable with that of the farmer who wanted to burn all surrounding buildings to save his own from fire.

Geraud replied that only by force could peace be kept.

Father Walsh reminded Geraud of the enlightened and passive views now held by peoples of various countries and asked:

"Does any government today dare declare war?"

"What you have said does not apply to the people of Germany and Italy," Geraud replied.

Discusses Far East.

Father Walsh reminded Geraud of the revolt of the German people at the close of the World War and asked if he thought Hitler would risk the fate of the Kaiser.

"It is possible last-minute resistance would arise in Germany," Geraud said, "but we can not build security on such an assumption."

Father Walsh asked how the people could have any faith in a League of Nations, recalling only the United States stood firm in protest against Japanese invasion of China.

"A league will never be able to bring an aggressor to book unless two or three leading powers make it clear they are ready to go to war if necessary," Geraud replied. "In the Far East the United States and Great Britain, the only big powers involved, were not ready to act."

Promptness with which small nations voted to impose sanctions on Italy was an encouraging sign of the power of a league, Geraud said. If the small powers can be given confidence the strong powers are prepared to act aggresively they would act similarly again, Geraud predicted.

The neutrality of the United States is taken for granted on the Continent, Geraud declared. "But we look forward to you not undertaking anything you are not ready to back up," he added.

Neutrality which is violated does more harm than good, he added.

The United States is a strong molder of public opinion, Geraud said. "You have an honorary stall among the canons of England," he said.

Father Walsh reminded Geraud that honorary canons are not allowed to vote and usually are given the bill for the banquet."

Laughter broke out in the audience when one of its number sent Geraud the following written question:

"Why do you assume public opinion in the United States would favor France in a war with Germany?"

"I assume nothing," Geraud smilingly replied, "but I believe that if such a war should occur the questions of freedom involved would find sympathetic understanding in this country."

Geraud was asked if "just revision" of the Versailles Treaty might bring peace to Europe. He said the territorial provisions of the treaty could never be revised without force, although there was some possibility of slight revisions in the territorial boundaries of the central powers.

Earlier in the day Geraud was a luncheon guest at the White House.

Huston Thompson, president of the board of directors of Town Hall, in opening the winter meeting told the audience he believed Town Hall was ready to move into its own building if someone would donate one. He reminded the audience it was a Washingtonian who donated a meeting hall for the Town Hall of New York.

U. S. Strike Aid Aim of Mayor Flying to City

Rossi to Urge the President to Intervene; 4 Others May Follow Him.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Angelo Rossi, mayor of San Francisco, left by airplane today for Washington to seek President Roosevelt's intervention in the Pacific Coast maritime strike, now in its third week, with little prospect of immediate peace.

Four other mayors of Pacific Coast cities were reported either en route or planning to go to Washington for the same purpose.

Rossi hopes his trip may bring an end to the shutdown of shipping and the paralysis of commerce that is becoming more serious daily.

John F. Dore, Seattle's chief executive, who has supported labor strongly; Mayor Frank McCracken, of Oakland; Frank Shaw, Los Angeles chief executive, and Joseph K. Carson, jr., mayor of Portland, also were reported planning Washington visits.

They planned these new moves as a rising tide of public opinion swung toward demands that the maritime strike be settled before the holiday season.

Peace Appeals Increase.

Virtually silent in the first two weeks of the walkout, the public, as represented by city governments, organizations of businessmen, shippers' associations and individual entrepreneurs affected by the lockout have released a flood of letters, statements and appeals directed to Federal authorities asking something be done to start the wheels of commerce turning again.

Many of these appeals went to Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who worked for a month seeking to prevent the strike and who has spent the last two weeks in a series of conferences with Pacific Coast shipowners and the seven unions representing their 35,000 employes.

McGrady called union leaders into another conference at his headquarters tonight.

Showdown Due Today.

New York, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—All three sides at war in the Eastern maritime strike declared tonight the strength of the insurgent walkout will be decided tomorrow when the crew of the United States liner Washington will be asked to walk off.

Ship owners, International Seamen's Union officials and insurgent strikers agreed the expected showdown will settle the conflicting claims of all sides as to the extent of the strike. The Washington arrived from Europe Saturday and is to sail again Wednesday.

Rings Wrong Box; Lands in Lock-Up On Double Charge

John McCourkin, colored, 28, of 1430 Sixth street northwest, called for reinforcements to settle an argument yesterday and was dumbfounded when three companies of firemen arrived with axes and firehooks.

"All I wanted was a few policemen," McCourkin declared.

A police scout car which responded to the alarm at Fourth and C streets northwest took McCourkin to the Second Precinct, where he was charged with intoxication and ringing a false fire alarm.

Bridge Trophy Is Captured by Capital Couple

By Marian H. Barre.

The Woodward Cup stays home this summer. Thomas Hamlin and E. S. Connolly saw to that, when they won the open pair championship of the District of Columbia in the Bridge League tournament at the Hotel Shoreham yesterday.

In six years competition for this trophy, Baltimore players twice have succeeded in wresting it from the Capital. This happened last year when it was won by Mrs. Allan Rutherford and Mrs. H. H. Cairns. In consequence, there was great rejoicing when the local pair defeated the visitors.

The runners-up, Roy Thurtell and R. S. Wood, a local pair, were champions in 1934. Visiting pairs made the next positions, Edward Ellenbogan and A. R. Goodman, third, and Mrs. R. C. Young and C. H. Goren, fourth.

Mrs. Rebecca Phinney and J. C. Cook won the intermediate event, for the Evening Star Trophy. Second were Mrs. T. D. Sheldon and Mrs. R. S. Du Bois; third, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Little. The first and second pairs in this event retained their relative positions through both sessions of play.

A two-section open game was run concurrently, with special trophies for both sections. John Kunkle and T. R. Wickersham made top score in section A, runners-up were Mrs. Pauline Wilson and I. York. In section B, Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and Arch Kepner were high, Maj. and Mrs. Brice, second.

The team called "Brotherly Love," from the city of that name, won the team-of-four match. B. J. Becker, the first ranking player in the United States, captained this team; the other members were C. H. Goren, Mrs. R. C. Young and Robert Sitnick. The Philadelphian led both sessions.

A New York team consisting of Fred D. Kaplan, A. M. Barnes, Miss Edith Russell and Mrs. Ann Leary, made second place. The Baltimoreans were third, Dr. Lewellyn Lord, Mrs. Lord, John Kunkel and T. R. Wickersham composed the team. The local team to "show" was the Washington Whist Club. Fifth on the list was a second Baltimore team, Mrs. Allan Rutherford, Mrs. Fred Supplee, H. J. Geret and N. G. Wilson, jr. The team match was the only event to be won by out-of-town players. Twenty teams competed, of which nine were local players.

An American League Cup game, also run on Sunday evening, was won by William Cheeks and Samuel Groves. Runners-up were Miss Wilkinson and Mr. Butts, of Norfolk, Va.; third, Maj. and Mrs. Brice; fourth, Mrs. R. J. Belt and J. B. Lowell.

Granges' Heads Call on Nation To Insure Crops

Leaders at Columbus Rally Favor Permanent Plan for Agriculture.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 15.—Representing a cross-section of the American agricultural point of view, a dozen masters of State granges urged today enactment of legislation which would make crop insurance a permanent part of the national agricultural policy.

These masters have submitted crop insurance resolution to the seventieth annual meeting of the national grange and it was regarded likely that the organization, before it concludes its session Thursday, will be on record as favoring the insurance.

C. C. Cogswell, master of the Kansas State Grange, said he believed crop insurance a sound and constructive approach to the agricultural problem. He declared enough information had been gathered on the subject to assure that the program would be based on sound business principles.

L. J. Taber, master of the national grange, asserted crop insurance would prove as valuable as any other form of insurance.

Must Be "Tided Over."

"When a man's house burns he collects insurance if he has been wise enough to insure," said Taber. "When a farmer's crops are a total loss from drought or any other cause, his loss is just as acute as if his home burned. If he can carry insurance on his crops, he at least would have something to tide him over, to help him carry on until the next harvest."

"Droughts of the past few years," said C. H. Bramble, master of the Michigan State Grange, "appear to be the impelling reason behind the Grange demand for crop insurance. There is urgent need to protect agriculture from destruction of crops by drought in the future."

D. B. Anderson, South Carolina State Grange master, pointed out floods have been a frequent cause of ruin to crops. He said he was instructed by the South Carolina State Grange to work for adoption of crop insurance in the National Grange's "platform for agriculture."

Texas for Plan.

In Texas, said Ralph W. Moore, master of the Texas State Grange, there is strong sentiment in favor of some form of crop insurance. He agreed with Taber that it must be a voluntary plan and that it must not penalize the good farmer for the benefit of the poor farmer.

"Any plan should be based upon voluntary principles," More declared, "with rates suited to conditions in given areas, rising where losses are heaviest and falling in those sections where losses are less frequent and severe."

Post Model Home Visited by Throng

Permanesque Homes Village, new community at Beverly Hills, Alexandria, Va., had many visitors yesterday. They went there to attend the opening of the newest Washington Post model home attracting attention to this development.

The exhibit home is of brick and ready to move into. It is equipped with oil burner, electric stove and refrigerator. The house can be purchased for terms as low as $29 a month.

The model home contains three bedrooms, tile bath, living room with fireplace, dining room and modern electric kitchen. All the rooms are large and there is a built-in garage and maid's room in the basement.

This development and the new Post model home featuring it may be seen by driving over Arlington Memorial Bridge to Arlington Memorial, there taking the road to the left past the Little Tea House on South Arlington Ridge road, or Mount Vernon avenue, along the ridge to Russell road, then turning right to Beverly Hills.

Boy Killed Running To $1,000,000 Fire

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (AP).—A spectacular fire roared through a huge cotton oil warehouse today, causing damage unofficially estimated at $1,000,000.

The blaze was indirectly responsible for the death of 13-year-old Henry Matrango, who fell beneath a slowly moving freight train while running to the scene.

R. F. Ingold, president of the California Cotton Oil Co., owners, said 17,000 tons of cotton seed were in the warehouse. The loss is covered by insurance, he said.

Women's Party Predicts Equal Rights Victory

Mrs. Wiley Is Secretary; Key to D. C. Prison Given Mrs. Hilles.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 15.—Resolutions calling on the next Congress to approve the proposed women's equal rights amendment to the Constitution and proclaiming opposition to minimum wage laws for women alone were passed at today's final session of the National Women's Party, convention.

Helen Hunt West, Congressional secretary of the party, claimed the necessary two-thirds vote in Congress is now assured to carry the amendment.

Another resolution passed by the party praised President Roosevelt "for attempting, in codes of the national recovery act, for the first time to legislate equal pay for equal work for women."

Sarah T. Pell, of Ticonderoga, N. Y., was elected chairman of the party for the coming year. Other officers selected included Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Washington, D. C., secretary.

A highlight of the closing session was the presentation of the key to the old women's prison of the District of Columbia to Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Wilmington, Del., retiring chairman, and daughter of the late Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State under President Cleveland. Mrs. Hilles was one of the women incarcerated in the prison for picketing the White House during Woodrow Wilson's Administration.

Mrs. Karl Greene, of New Mexico, presented the key, a gift from Mrs. E. A. Bocock, wife of the superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, near the Capital, who obtained it from the matron of the old jail.

Burlington, Colo., Nov. 15 (AP).—Sim Hudson treated the town because he won an election bet.

At noon yesterday he gave everybody a free lunch. Two dances were in progress all day long. Four bands played in the streets. A parade was held in the afternoon. A crowd estimated at between 8,000 and 9,000 attended. The current report was that Sim's bet amounted to $4,000.

Soviet Bans New Opera For Jibes at Old Gods

Moscow, Nov. 15 (AP).—Soviet rulers of the theater rose up today against Poet Demyan Bedny because he ridiculed baptism in Russia and poked fun at ancient gods in a new comic opera, "The Titans."

The art committee of the Council of People's Commissars, the Soviet board of censors, ordered the opera withdrawn from the Kamerny Theater as "alien to Soviet art."

New Deal Backs 3 Laws in Week In High Court

Silver Tax, Chaco Embargo, Ban on Prison-Made Goods to Be Argued.

By the Associated Press.

Argument on test cases involving validity of three New Deal laws comes before the Supreme Court this week.

They affect the 50 per cent tax imposed on profits made just before the silver purchase act became effective, legislation authorizing the President to embargo shipment of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay for their Chaco war and the Ashurst-Sumners measure forbidding transportation of prison-made goods into States that bar their sale.

Before hearing the argument, the justices will assemble tomorrow to hand down a maximum of seven opinions and to announce whether they will review 25 cases appealed from lower courts. None is of outstanding interest.

Decisions in the cases argued this week and those debated last week may come as early as December 7. Last week the court heard argument on two New Deal cases. One involved the making by the PWA of loans and grants for publicly owned hydroelectric plants. The second presented the question of the Government holding up trial in lower courts of cases challenging the public utility holding company act pending a final decision in litigation it brought against the Electric Bond & Share Co. to test the legislation.

Other cases debated last week centered on validity of the New York unemployment insurance act which taxes employers to aid those out of work, the California and Illinois "fair trade" acts which prohibit sale of standard products at less than a stipulated price, and an injunction granted the Associated Press to restrain Radio Station KVOS, of Belingham, Wash., from broadcasting the press association's news items for 18 hours after publication.

Italy to Hold Rites On 'Sanctions Day'

Rome, Nov. 15 (AP).—One of the strangest of national ceremonies on the historical calendar—that of the "day of ignominy and iniquity" will be celebrated by Italians Wednesday.

The day to Italians is "sanctions day," first anniversary of the date upon which 52 member nations of the League of Nations ordered a tight economic siege against Italy. Just a year ago, Premier Mussolini ordered every Italian communal palace to be provided with a plaque recalling the "shamefulness of this concerted attack on Italy."

On Wednesday, Fascist officials will gather before these plaques. Victors against the siege, they will hear broadcast patriotic addresses.

Three Killed In Car Crashes Over Week-End

2 D. C. Men, Unidentified Woman Die in Collisions; 8 Are Injured.

yesterday resulted in injuries to Irene Williams, 15, of 1340 Emerson street northwest. She was taken to Providence Hospital, where she was treated for several rib fractures.

Three others were hurt about 3 p. m. at Seventh and E streets northwest when a car driven by James Dedrich, 26, of Harrisonburg, Va., was in collision with one driven by Edward L. Artes, 33, of 325 Ninth street southeast.

Mary High, 24, and Ethel Lawson, 20, both of Harrisonburg, occupants of Dedrich's car, were treated for minor injuries at Casualty Hospital, then released. Virginia Artes, 7-year-old daughter of the driver of the second car, suffered cuts and bruises, which were treated at Casualty Hospital.

Both drivers were uninjured. Dedrich was released after posting $25 collateral at the Ninth Precinct. Police said his car was outside the right of way.

Joseph F. Pitts, 19, of 726 Maryland avenue northeast, driver of the car which struck and killed 4-year-old Robert Dyke at 676 Fourth street northeast Saturday night, will appear before a coroner's inquest at 11 a. m. today, according to District Coroner A. Magruder McDonald.

Robert died after his 9-year-old playmate, Billie Kidwell, attempted to save his life. When Robert was struck down by the Pitts car in front of his home, Billie, who saw the accident from the sidewalk, rushed into the street, picked Robert up and with the injured boy in his arms mounted three flights of stairs to Mrs. Grace Dyke, Robert's mother.

The mother carried the boy down stairs again, and Pitts took him to Casualty Hospital, where he died about midnight. Pitts was released on a $500 bond.

Ex-Convict Sought In Slaying of Child

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP).—A former convict with a record for molesting children, and a "fat boy" who had been selling candy near schools, were sought today for questioning in the savage slaying of 5-year-old Antoinette Tiritilli.

The usual Sunday holiday for detective was canceled as the full strength of the department was used in the search for the man who slashed the child's throat Friday night when she fought him off after being dragged into an alley.

The police called upon pastors and teachers in the "Little Italy" district to help bring out information that might aid the hunt.

Four men picked up for questioning remained in custody.

Before little Antoinette died she told the police her assailant was a "short, fat white man."

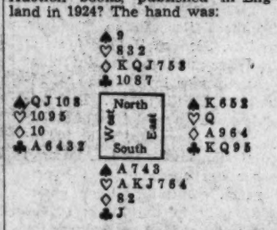
MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

It Used to Be Easy!

In the dear dead days when Bridge was one of the occult sciences, the few dozen men and two or three women in the world who claimed to have penetrated its mysteries had a delightfully easy time proving any point they cared to make. Then, there was no Bridge public sufficiently educated to be skeptical; the most outrageous opinions and glaring inaccuracies in analysis were accepted in the spirit of "Kings can do no wrong."

I wonder how many letters I should receive today if I were to present a hand as it actually was presented in one of the outstanding Auction books, published in England in 1924? The hand was:



At auction, South bid one heart and, according to the tome's author, all passed. This was rather strange, in itself, inasmuch as East-West could have done very well at a spade contract. But since the bidding was not the point the author wished to make, nor I to review, let us accept South's heart contract, raising it to four for contract purposes.

The theme was that West opened his singleton diamond, East won and returned the suit for West to ruff, and "after that there was no defense against four hearts, and game." This was quite true, but in his zeal to apostrophize what were, in those days, despised opening leads—namely, singletons or doubletons, the author went on to say that "had West made the correct opening of the spade Queen there would have been quite a different result." And to prove this statement, he had declarer win the hypothetical opening lead of the spade Queen and immediately ruff a spade in dummy, eventually demonstrating that the defenders would have to get four tricks.

Whether this "proof" was mendacious or merely naive, it is hard to say, but certainly it was not proof! Declarer's prompt ruff of a spade would prove nothing except that he couldn't play bridge. Any novice should see that a cross-ruff cannot be launched on such a hand without first preparing the entries. Let us experiment with correct declarer's play after a spade opening.

We win and lead the club Jack. The best defense is for East to win this trick and return the heart Queen. Now, with a method of re-entering our own hand established, we ruff two spades in dummy, returning to our hand with club ruffs, draw trumps and finally concede a spade and a diamond in addition to the club trick already lost. So we would do just as well against the spade opening lead as the author did against the despised singleton lead. Now if the opening lead had been a trump—well, that would be another matter!

Lydia E. Pinkham's TABLETS

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon; Hans Kindler, conductor; Blanca Renard, piano soloist. Program: "Tod und Verklaerung," Tondichtung for orchestra; "Burleske" for piano and orchestra (Richard Strauss), Prelude to Act III and Finale from "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg," "Siegmund's Liebeslied" from "Die Walkuere," Prelude and "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde" (Richard Wagner).

Not only did Hans Kindler bring together in amicable association the two great Richards of Teutonic music, but he also arranged the program so symmetrically that the concert began and ended on an emotional crest. In the trough between the high waves the two masters of instrumentation disported themselves in jest and laughter, the one with the impudent insouciance of youth and the other with the mellow humor of maturity.

A too literal translation of "Tod und Verklaerung" is responsible for the current English title, "Death and Transfiguration." Taking into consideration the subjective nature of the music, which speaks of a spiritual change, it would be more correct to call it "Death and Enlightenment." For, despite the few realistic effects which bring before our imagination the grisly picture of a dying man, we are not here concerned with the physical struggle against dissolution, or even with the peace that transfigures the countenance after death, but with the mental state of the moribund, with the memories that represent his clinging to mundane life, and with the ineffable serenity that accompanies his release into the larger life of the spirit, where all perplexities are resolved in understanding.

One was pleased to see Edward N. Waters, in his program note, again discrediting the baseless and persistent idea that Strauss found his inspiration for "Tod und Verklaerung" in the poor poem by Alexander Ritter, which is attached to the score. But when Strauss accepted this poem, written as an appreciative commentary on the music, he was acknowledging a far deeper and significant gratitude, and recognizing a friendship that influenced his creative direction.

Ten years before Strauss was born, Alexander Ritter, violinist and composer, married Franziska Wagner, a niece of the master of Bayreuth, and adopted as well the whole Wagnerian philosophy. It was Ritter, who, in his ardent championship of the "new music" of Liszt and Wagner, converted Strauss from a disciple of Brahms into an innovator and an explorer of harmonic hinterlands.

In the "Burleske," composed when Strauss was only 21, the influence of Brahms is unmistakeably plain in both the melodic phrasing and the harmonic idom. This work came close to being laid aside with the mass of unpublished manscripts that Strauss had been accumulating since he began to compose in his early childhood. After trying it over with the Meiningen Orchestra, he was dissatisfied with it, and wrote to Hans von Buelow, for whom he had intended it, that it was pure nonsense ("reinen Unsinn"). But four years later he thought better of it, and entrusted the piano part to Eugen d'Albert for performance.

Because its technical difficulties are out of proportion to its popular appeal, pianists have rather avoided the "Burleske." One congratulates Bianca Renard on having added it to her repertoire and on the skill and bravura with which she played the solo part. Her reading was commendably in accord with the high spirits of the music. The mood of the piece alternates between romantic poesy and gay mockery, as though the composer were laughing at his own sentiment. So strong is the jesting humor at times that one is inclined to consider the work a parody of the piano concerto.

The latter half of the program, compact of Wagnerian excerpts, left this commentator feeling that beyond recording the approval of the audience for an enjoyable hour with familiar music, there remains nothing to be said. It seems so needless to add a single word to the monumental cairns that have been raised in honor of Wagner. One may say, however, that every purely orchestral performance of extracts from the later music dramas increases one's conviction that Wagner should have been a composer of symphonies.

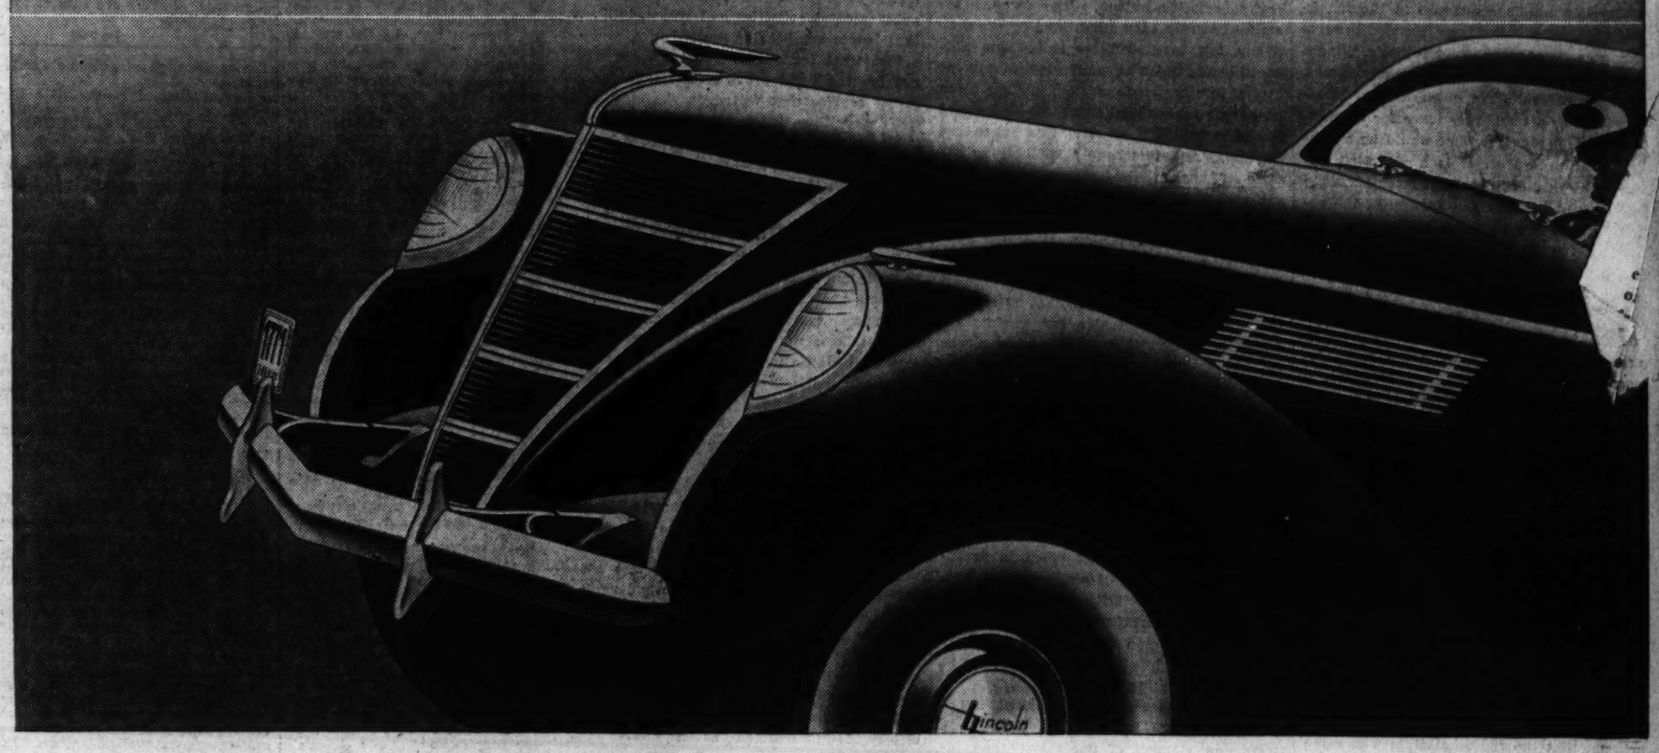
THE NEW KIND OF CAR THAT IS ROLLING UP NEW RECORDS



LINCOLN ZEPHYR

V-12 FOR 1937

BEFORE you go to the Automobile Show, let us tell you what to look for in the 1937 LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12. This is the new kind of car built by Lincoln, and the only car of its kind!

Look at the engine. Here are twelve cylinders (a thing unusual in a medium-price car)—in V-formation. The engine develops 110 horsepower.

Look at the lines. This car is streamlined from prow to stern. Beneath the graceful contours is unique steel body-and-frame—a strong, rigid, one-unit structure. Great safety . . . great comfort!

Look at the interior. (The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR has a wheelbase of 122 inches.) Where else in the medium-price field will you find these inches of extra space . . . this head room, foot room, elbow room . . . this luxury of appointment . . . this quality of decoration, appointments, upholstery?

Look at the record. 14 to 18 miles per gallon of gas! Thrilling performance on roads good, bad and indifferent. A new "flowing" ride that changes your whole idea of transportation. Thousands of the most enthusiastic owners in motor car history!

Something has happened to travel. See what . . . and how . . . and why . . . at the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR exhibit! Lincoln Motor Company, builders of the Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

BASE PRICES $1090 AND UP AT DETROIT PLANT

Taxes, delivery and handling, bumpers and spare tire extra.

On display at showrooms of all Lincoln-Zephyr dealers. Convenient terms through Authorized Universal Credit Company Finance Plans.

Mr. Winant's Predicament.

When John G. Winant resigned the chairmanship of the Social Security Board to answer Republican attacks upon the act this agency is administering, the country was in the midst of an intense political fight. No doubt the former Governor of New Hampshire, as the Republican member of the board, considered it his particular duty to refute charges made from that political camp. And he realized that it would be entirely improper for him to engage in active politics while still a member of an independent agency of this character.

With the campaign over and politics laid aside, however, it is obvious that his service on the stump, regardless of its value, could not be worth the sacrifice he made. Realizing his aptitude for leadership in the development of our social security system, many of Mr. Winant's friends hope that he will be responsive to President Roosevelt's informal suggestion that he return to the board. Yet his campaign activities have created a delicate situation that cannot easily be ironed out.

Bipartisan boards and commissions must remain rigidly aloof from politics. Their work is such that partisan activity tends to undermine public confidence in the impartial administration of laws intended to serve the interests of all the people. If Mr. Winant now returns to the Social Security Board, his absence could, not unreasonably, be interpreted as a temporary leave for the purpose of campaigning. That would be an unfortunate precedent. It is a pity that the President did not in the first place persuade Mr. Winant to leave the defense of the social security law to active politicians.

Whatever the outcome of this particular case, the need for more complete isolation of the independent administrative boards from the swirl of politics must not be overlooked. The unfortunate consequences of the Republican attack upon the social security system have already been noted. If this difficult technical program is to be kept out of politics, however, one of the first essentials is to divorce its administrative staff from all trace of partisan activities.

The President's Powers.

During the first week after the election concerted movements were initiated for revival of the AAA and some features of the NRA. When Congress returns to Washington, this demand for regulatory agencies in agriculture and industry may swell to chorus proportions. On the industrial side it has the support of powerful labor groups. The sentiment of farmers may be judged by the fact that the representatives who came to Washington to discuss crop insurance stayed to urge a return to the principles of the first triple A.

When the Administration devised its substitute for the invalidated AAA the new measure was everywhere recognized as a stop-gap. To avoid the risk of setting up another unconstitutional mechanism to aid the farmer, Congress provided for "48 little AAA's" to be created by State Legislatures and operated by a rather loose system of remote control from Washington. Now it is apparent that the scheme is unworkable. That gives farmers at least a superficial reason once more to seek restricted production under Federal supervision.

In the case of NRA there has been a sudden congealing of sentiment that has existed ever since the Schechter Case opinion was handed down. President Roosevelt's overwhelming victory has aroused new hope in the hearts of its sponsors. While the clothing workers' unions were indorsing the protective features of the old codes, Maj. Berry, the co-ordinator for industrial cooperation, was calling for a meeting in December to discuss new industrial and labor legislation. The interest of President Roosevelt in the problem was evinced when he called for legislation to bring about a "leveling upward of labor standards" in his message to the third National Conference on Labor Legislation.

In each instance it seems to be taken for granted that the President will find some way to overcome the constitutional impediments which wrecked these "new instruments of power." Indeed, there seems to be a widespread assumption that the election has given the President authority to reestablish abandoned New Deal agencies in spite of the Constitution or Supreme Court decisions.

Regardless of the majority a President may receive, he is invested with only those powers enumerated in the organic law. Nothing the electorate may do, short of amending the Constitution, can increase those powers. And for the President to increase them on his own initiative might easily prove an inexcusable breach of trust.

It appears, therefore, that the country may soon be confronted by the question of amending the Constitution. It is to the interest of every economic group, as well as every citizen, that this issue should be presented and met openly, in a way that will permit the people themselves to decide what changes, if any, are desirable.

The Stock Market Rise.

The emphasis which President Roosevelt has placed upon the danger of a sudden withdrawal of foreign funds invested in American securities, coupled with Governor Eccles' statement that the recent rapid rise in stocks has not been accompanied by an expansion of brokerage or bank loans, is cleverly designed to place the blame for any future stock market reaction upon the shoulders of foreigners. While heavy buying of American securities for foreign account has unquestionably been an important factor in boosting stock prices, the Administration cannot disavow responsibility for certain of its own acts which have laid the foundation for unsound speculative developments.

Instead of discussing plans to check the free flow of funds into this country, Federal officials should be trying to correct the abnormal domestic conditions affecting our security markets which create anxiety as to the future course of events. Apart from the improvement in business, which accounts for a large part of the gains in stock market prices in recent months, a number of important influences are at work, which, if unchecked, are likely to boost quotations beyond any reasonable relation to current or prospective earnings and yield.

Certainly the Administration cannot escape blame for any future stock market boom, with an inevitable aftermath of disaster, if it continues to build up deposits in our banks by sales of bonds to cover deficits. During the year ended June 30 deposits in all banks increased by $5,500,000,000. And as these huge sums pile up, they add to the supply of potential speculative fuel. We find, then, a growing demand for stocks due to better business prospects and abnormally large credit-created bank deposits available for financing speculative buying. The demand for stocks has also been stimulated by the artificially low interest rates ruling for gilt-edged bonds which have diverted investment capital into the stock market. At the same time, only a restricted supply of high grade stocks is available to meet this expanding demand. And this supply is likely to become still more limited so long as the present method of taxing capital gains is followed.

It is doubtful, indeed, whether the public fully realizes the extent to which the capital gains tax interferes with the smooth functioning of the stock market by making it prohibitively expensive for wealthy individuals to take their profits when stocks are rising. Rather than pay exorbitant surtaxes on income from capital gains, the stockholder prefers to put his appreciating securities in his strong box, with the result that their prices are boosted to artificially high levels because of the limited floating supply in the market.

There are many cogent arguments against the levy on capital gains in its present form, apart from its disturbing effect in accentuating the violence of stock market fluctuations. As one critic says, it is the "height of arbitrariness" to tax capital gains as income and at the same time limit deductions for losses to a mere $2,000 in excess of offsetting capital gains.

The punitive taxes levied on undistributed corporate profits have added another entirely new element of uncertainty and instability to the stock market by virtually forcing dividend disbursements. Radical revision of these two tax measures as well as a return to sound fiscal and monetary policies would afford the surest kind of preventive against an uncontrollable speculative boom in the stock market.

Misplaced Subsidies.

President Roosevelt's enthusiastic approval of Greenbelt, the experimental town which the Resettlement Administration is building near Berwyn, seems to be based on two unproved assumptions. First, he concludes that it will be a "splendid thing" because it will "get people out into the country." Second, he is pleased because "it is primarily designed to benefit the low-income group of people."

Living in the country is undoubtedly desirable, but city working men who have to count every penny will thoughtfully calculate transportation costs before they indulge in that luxury. That, of course, is a minor point which might easily escape the President on a brief jaunt to Dr. Tugwell's new town. But how did he make the mistake of supposing that these fine quarters are being erected for the low-income group?

To qualify for residence in Greenbelt families must have incomes ranging from $1,200 to $2,000. If the Department of Commerce's estimate of a $60,000,000,000 national income this year is correct, the income of the median American family will roughly approximate $1,780. A family would have to earn considerably more than the average wage, therefore, to rent one of the larger dwellings at Greenbelt. These are middle-class homes, and no amount of verbal deference to the low-income groups can conceal that fact.

Families that are desperately in need of public housing have been completely forgotten by the RA. Its subsidies will benefit only those who are able to take care of themselves. Surely the President could not have realized the implications of this stupid policy when he expressed the naive hope that Greenbelt will be copied in every American city.

A Belated Test Of Merit.

Several factors contribute to the favorable outlook for extension of the civil service system next year. All excuse for selecting personnel on an emergency basis has been removed. With the President assured of a second term, he should be less amenable to the patronage hunters than he has been during the last four years. Legislation to bring about the desired reform was well advanced in the last Congress, and it should not be difficult to enact a satisfactory measure early in the 1937 session.

It is especially gratifying to learn that the President intends to take advantage of these favorable conditions to place permanent agencies of the New Deal under the merit system. That step can be readily and properly taken through a grant of power to the President to extend the classified civil service through executive orders. Congress has always been reluctant to diminish the number of patronage jobs by direct action. Experience suggests that the merit system is most likely to grow when it has the full support of a President who is authorized to "blanket-in" employes rendering satisfactory service.

Of course, the lowering of standards under the spoils system prevailing since 1933 cannot be entirely overcome by either legislation or executive orders. It would be impractical as well as expensive to reorganize the staffs of New Deal agencies through competitive examinations. Moreover, it would be unfair to present employes who are doing their work satisfactorily. In the circumstances the best that can be done is to weed out the incompetent through noncompetitive tests before civil service status is granted. Apparently that is what the President intends to do.

The net result of awarding Government positions as spoils and then providing civil service protection for all who can measure up to the minimum requirements is to discourage the most capable men and women from even considering Government service as a career. Commendable as it is, the step now contemplated will merely eliminate those patently unfit for the work assigned to them. In this period of expanding governmental activities and responsibilities that leaves much to be desired.

The fight for a real merit system will not be won until provision is made for a career service that will open the most desirable positions below the rank of "Little Cabinet" officers to specially-trained men and women who can work their way to the top through the ranks.

Puerto Rico's Vote.

Generally overlooked in the excitement of President Roosevelt's re-election was the outcome of Puerto Rico's vote on November 3. The principal issue confronting the islanders was the future of their relationship with the United States. That question, always in the back of Puerto Rican minds, was this year brought to the fore by Senator Tydings who, with Administration approval, introduced in the last session of Congress a bill providing for an independence plebiscite in the island.

By implication at least, the Puerto Ricans emphatically repudiated the idea that they wish to steer their own course through the Caribbean. The Coalition Party won impressively from the Liberals who had made much of an outright independence plank in their platform. Precise totals of the vote will not be officially known until January, but every sign points to a two-to-one Coalition majority in both houses of the legislature for the next four years. The victory is interpreted as a convincing demonstration of majority sentiment in favor of remaining under the American flag, although it cannot be regarded as an indorsement of the present governmental set-up at San Juan.

Because the campaign was one of the most heated in Puerto Rican history and because not only men but women—the latter for the first time—participated in the balloting, disappointed enthusiasts for independence can scarcely argue that a plebiscite would produce a greatly different expression of opinion. Still less can reason be found in Washington to press again the plebiscite proposal before the next Congress. If the Administration put forward this bill to arouse Puerto Ricans who do not wish to have the island cut loose from the United States, it has accomplished its purpose. Nothing could now be gained by pressing a measure that is obviously repugnant to a majority of the people who would be most affected by it.

The best way to keep from worrying about tomorrow is to forget yesterday.

As time goes by we become more and more thankful that Columbus sailed a long way from Europe before he discovered America.

It's usually the motorist who is going nowhere to do nothing who drives the fastest.

Among many disappointing things this year was Peltier's comet. We had expected it to put on a good show, but it lost its tail, shied away from the earth and soon disappeared from the skies and the Sunday supplements.

The Flag's Significance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a patriotic American citizen, the one-time principal of a large public school and an ardent lover of the old flag, I read with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction a letter in The Post of November 5, by Dr. George S. Duncan.

Dr. Duncan who, by the way, is a biblical scholar of note, proved conclusively to my mind by pertinent Bible references in his letter, that there are no scriptural grounds, whatever, for any parent to assert that his children, in saluting Old Glory, worship it. I was sorry to see a letter in The Post of November 11, by C. A. M. Wells, taking strong exceptions to Dr. Duncan's interpretation of the Scriptures and, inferentially, upholding the idea that saluting the flag is worshiping it.

All patriotic, intelligent American citizens are fully aware of the fact that when they salute and honor the American flag, they are not honoring the visible materials of which the flag is composed, but the mighty and splendid things for which the flag stands and which it symbolizes.

How beautifully this truth is brought out in the following quotation from that American classic, "Makers of The Flag," written by the late Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior under Woodrow Wilson and read by him on Flag Day, 1914, in Washington:

"I was about to pass on, when The Flag stopped me with these words:

"I am not the Flag; not at all. I am only its shadow. I am whatever you make me, nothing more. I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and statute makers, soldier and dreadnaught, drayman and street sweep, cook, counselor, and clerk. I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol, of yourself, the pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this Nation. My stars and my stripes are your dream and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith, because you have made them so out of your hearts. For you are the makers of the flag and it is well that you glory in the making."

Bidding The Perfect Hand.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am undoubtedly one of many thousands who offer sincerest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Du Puy upon the success of receiving the perfect hand in bridge on November 11 and also upon the bidding and playing of that hand.

However, I am of the opinion that there was great error in the bidding of that hand. Since, as you state in The Post, Mrs. Du Puy "showed no emotion" and "has played bridge all her life," I can find no excuse for her failure to redouble. Had there been great excitement, or had she been a player of tender years, then I should think that there would be justification for the explanation of extreme excitement.

Nevertheless, I congratulate her again. It was certainly a rare hand.

Moses In The Bulrushes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Prior to the recent Presidential election, The Post was carrying water on both shoulders—that is, favoring Landon in one editorial and the next day flowers to the Roosevelt Administration. No one knew exactly where they stood until after election. Now it is plain to every one that they are supporting the New Deal right or wrong.

In good government we need a militant minority and the unbiased newspapers of this Nation can best provide this opposition. Henceforth let The Post be critical and bold in its editorials, extolling the good and condemning the bad.

MOSES.

Labor's Struggle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The recent letter to The Post by A. McL. Abert under the heading, "Reaction to Unionism," is somewhat mystifying. Is Mr. Abert, who claims he is 72 years old, really sighing over the good old days, rejoicing over the prospect of their coming back?

Has he any proud memories of the days when industrial workers never lived in their own homes, but in a shanty which belonged to the boss, never had good food nor enough food or decent clothes, when sweatshops prevailed, when he worked from sunup to sundown for a pittance and at the end of the month was in debt to the company's store, when his children who should have been in school were forced into the mills to help out the family budget, when anyone who dared to try to better these conditions was persecuted and imprisoned?

Labor resorts to the strike only when all fair and honest efforts for collective bargaining fail and they see nothing but hopeless drudgery, bitter degradation and oppression before them. The sordid story unfolded before the Senate sub-committee of espionage and terrorism by detective firms who were paid hundreds of thousands of dollars by large corporations to terrorize men who thought of organizing or entering labor unions, should give Mr. Abert a clear understanding of who causes distress, sorrow and ill-feeling among the human race. After all, the enlightened worker only seeks fair play, decent conditions and security of tenure.

The Two Factions In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A letter from the Rev. Urban Adelman, O. M., Cap., says among other things "* * * there are those of us who believe that under the leadership of Gen. Franco are fighting all those who love Spain * * *"

It is pertinent to remember that there are also many of us, including members of Father Adelman's great communion, who believe that under the leadership of Gen. Franco, are fighting the renegades, the mercenaries, the ambitious and disappointed army officers, the Moors who love Spain so much that they fought Spanish armies to a standstill in the Riff, the feudal landowners and the liberty-loving Italian and German Fascists. So well do these groups love Spain that they are exterminating the Spanish population which has dared to oppose them. So strong is their belief in democracy that they are attempting to wash out the result of a democratically conducted election which they lost by flooding the records with a torrent of innocent blood.

Yes, they would restore feudalism in Spain. They would maintain Spain's high standing as one of the most illiterate white nations in the world. They would continue to rule over a nation of serfs while their puppet leaders continue the tradition of degeneracy which marked the Bourbon kingship and its nobility. In the name of civilization, saved from Moscow, economic poverty and a dead culture would again stalk Spain.

Fortunately for Spain and the world, the battle is far from lost. Even though the rebels conquer, which is not likely at the present time, many generations of the Spanish people will not forget those who murdered their relatives, destroyed their homes and their progress, and restored them to serfdom. The spark of liberty has been kindled by the fires of war. These moribund institutions which enslaved Spain will never regain the affection of those whom they now seek to destroy. The history of France provides a good example.

VINCENT O'CONNOR.
Washington, Nov. 13.

The Spanish Loyalists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Rev. Stephen H. Hogan states in a letter published on November 11 that Spanish loyalists are "Communists." This is not so. They advocate merely a mild form of socialism. They advocate, also, fundamental rights which the American laborer has enjoyed for the past 50 years. Curtailment of power traditionally in the hands of the Church and of land owners was the first necessary step toward such rights.

Mr. Hogan also states that "the Spanish people rose up to defend their country from a tyranny worse than ever existed in this country under English rule." He is speaking of the rebels! Is Mr. Hogan under the impression that the looting Moors, the barbaric Foreign Legion, and the hired mercenaries of the regular Spanish army are fighting for the loyalists? The Spanish people did indeed rise up, but only to defend their duly elected constitutional government. It is the Spanish people who, as I write this, are dying around the gates of Madrid, in a last effort to stave off fascism.

Let me point out that the rebels, far from expressing the will of Spain, have had to rely throughout on mercenary soldiers, men who would fight anybody for money, just as the English relied on hired Hessians in our own War of Independence.

ROBERT K. BLACK.
Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

When will powerful secular and religious groups come to their senses and grasp the true significance of the rapid ascendancy of radical social and political theories throughout the world? Can not they understand that these theories are but the swamp light hovering over an outmoded, decaying social and economic order? And as to the destruction or more than temporary suppression of these doctrines by force, one simply may not bludgeon a will-o'-the-wisp.

A Spanish loyalist propaganda mission recently arrived in New York stated that the Catholic Church in Spain was by no means a unit in its opposition to the loyalist cause; that many Catholic priests could be found supporting that cause with the bayonet. I believe that an anarcho-syndicalist fringe of outlaws is blamed for the murder of Catholic clergy and the destruction of religious edifices. The mission also stated that all religious orders were on an equal footing under the republic, but that this had not been the case under the monarchy. It appears to me that if these statements were untrue, they would have been refuted. I must confess, however, one member of the mission, a Father Sarasola, has been repudiated by the head of the Franciscan order in Rome.

CHARLES E. CROSS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Let us suppose that someone in America, or some group, decided that the present Administration had been governing long enough in spite of its legality, and these incipient American Fascists asked for and received the support of Italy and Germany, both in the matter of finances and arms, and attempted to overthrow the American Government by force. As a result of this invasion by foreign troops and hired mercenaries, America was precipitated into a war between two forces—between democracy and fascism.

The same is true of Spain, where a duly elected government composed of liberal, radical, and democratic elements is opposed by the few reactionaries of Spain. If, as the Rev. Mr. Adelman states, God has donned a Brown Shirt to fight on the side of these, then it is high time that the democratic American people found a substitute for Christianity, if the Fascists represent that religion and the ideals of the Christ of Galilee.

Four-Way Conversation

The following is taken from transcripts of a conversation recently arranged in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the National Broadcasting Company.

A PREDICTION that television may soon span the Atlantic was made last week by Senator Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of radio, in a shortwave broadcast from the Mediterranean.

Principal participants in four-way broadcast, arranged as a feature of the National Broadcasting Co.'s tenth anniversary celebration, were Marconi; Mr. Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; Robert Jardillier, minister of communications of France, and Maurice Rambert, president of the International Broadcasting Union and head of the Swiss Broadcasting Co.

Following is a portion of the conversations:

Sarnoff: Hello! Hello! Calling the American Airline flagship NC-16005, en route from Niagara Falls to Washington.

Russell: Hello! This is American Airline Flagship NC-16005, Dan Russell speaking.

Sarnoff: This is David Sarnoff calling from his office in Radio City, New York.

Sarnoff: Hello, Dan. Is Maurice Rambert, president of the International Broadcasting Union, on your plane, Dan?

Rambert: Hello, Mr. Sarnoff. This is Rambert speaking.

Sarnoff: It must be truly a wonderful experience for you, M. Rambert, to cruise over the United States, high up in the sky, at a height which equals perhaps the loftiest of the Alps in your own beautiful Switzerland.

Rambert: It is, Mr. Sarnoff. But it is even more of a thrill to me that the wonders of this age, the airplane, the radio, the transatlantic telephone can now be linked so perfectly that I can talk to you in your New York office from a height of 5,000 feet while speeding through the air at 180 miles an hour. It is surely an inspiration.

Sarnoff: I agree with you, M. Rambert. But while you are speeding through the air at 180 miles an hour, you know the radio waves speed through the air at 186,000 miles a second. Now, let's see if we can't make a little broadcasting history. I will call Senatore Marconi, in Rome, Italy, and ask him to call you in your plane. Just wait a moment, please! This is David Sarnoff in Radio City, New York, calling Senatore Marconi in Rome, Italy.

Marconi: Hello! This is Marconi speaking from his yacht off the coast of Genoa. Where are you, and how are you?

Sarnoff: Hello, Senatore Marconi. I am fine and better for hearing your voice, thank you. I am in my office, at my desk, in Radio City, New York. I have just been talking to the airplanes in which M. Jardillier, French Minister of Communications, and 26 members of the International Broadcasting Union, who are here for the N. B. C. tenth anniversary celebration, are flying from Buffalo to Washington. I think it would be indicative of the great development of radio, of which you are the illustrious father, if you from your yacht near Genoa would also talk with those aboard the plane. Senatore, won't you please call Maurice Rambert in American Airline flagship NC-16005.

Marconi: I will call Maurice Rambert. Hello, American Airline flagship NC-16005. I would like to talk to M. Rambert.

Rambert: This is Rambert speaking. How are you, Senatore Marconi, and how have you been since I met you in London two years ago?

Marconi: I am very well, thank you, M. Rambert. This is an amazing conversation. I am speaking to you from my yacht Elettra in the Mediterranean, near Genoa.

Sarnoff: Wait, gentlemen! Wait a minute, please! Before you say good-by. Let's carry this experiment a step further. We will ask Minister Jardillier, who is in the other plane, to join us in this conversation. Please stand by. Come in American Airline flagship NC-16030.

Jardillier: Hello, Mr. Sarnoff.

Sarnoff: Hello, Mr. Minister. Three of us would like to exchange words with you. Senatore Marconi, do you know Minister Jardillier?

Marconi: No. I only know about his interest in broadcasting as the French Minister of Communications.

Sarnoff: Here he is. Go ahead, please, Senatore.

Marconi: Hello! This is Senatore Marconi. I hope you can hear me.

Jardillier: We all regret that you are not here among us.

Sarnoff: Here, Mr. Minister, is M. Rambert.

Rambert: Hello, M. Minister. What we are now doing is a four-way conversation.

Versatile Crofters.

In the crofting communities of the Shetland Isles, which lie north of Scotland, many men, and women, too, are able to "turn their hands" to various kinds of work.

The average crofter is the complete handy man. He delves, sows and reaps; he makes boats, oars, masts, sails, fashions wooden spades, churns, benches, furniture; builds his own house and byre; makes feet gear, twines straw ropes from which he shapes kishies or woven baskets and other articles. In short, it is doubtful whether there is any task in stone, wood, leather or wool difficult enough to deter the versatile crofter for long.

Roosevelt Relationships.

THANKS to many reminders from Theodore Roosevelt, jr., and his sister, Alice, most of us are now thoroughly aware that Franklin D. Roosevelt is only a fifth cousin of theirs. The President himself has never been heard to claim a closer relationship and might even be glad to high-spade his fifth cousins on a proposition of double or nothing, with a private yearning for the latter alternative no less eager than their own. And, considering the respective achievements of the two factions, the insistent disclaimers of the Colonel and Alice sound as though the Plaza Hotel at 25 Bowery were to station a barker in front of the place to announce over and over, "This hotel has nothing but the name in common with the Plaza Hotel at Central Park."

Anybody could guess as much.

Perhaps the analogy is a little harsh, for the Colonel made a record for bravery in the war, and there is nothing shabby about him or Mrs. Longworth, but actually we heard them the first time and didn't need telling even then. Therefore, these frequent reiterations come to have the sound of a rather pathetic bid for personal attention, because people would never think of the relationship at all if they didn't bring it up.

• • • •

THE COLONEL had his chance in politics and didn't make it, and Mrs. Longworth had her lively, joyous day as a daughter of a President and White House bride and wife of the Speaker of the House. That day is now on toward the cool of the evening. This is Franklin D. Roosevelt's day, and the sun would shine no brighter for him if he were brother to his fifth cousins, because he is just as big and strong and noisy in his own right as that other President Roosevelt, from whom the Colonel and Alice inherit such public importance as they possess.

As to whether Franklin D. Roosevelt is a great President or a national calamity, they have the same right as the rest of us to strong personal opinion. There are many Americans who still hold the same opinion of their father and those who revere his name and defend his reign as ardently as Jim Farley admires Roosevelt 2d.

Their pride in their father is admired even by persons who disagreed with him, refused to accept his word without corroboration and regarded him as a selfish and glory-hungry demagogue. Any American would be proud to be the son or daughter of a President, even of Rutherford B. Hayes or Warren Harding. There are actually some at present who are immensely proud to be children of Franklin Roosevelt, though not much given to boasting of their fifth-cousinship to Young Ted and Alice. In fact, mention of this fifth-cousinship comes only from the other side.

Young Ted has been in politics ever since 1919, but in all that time the only office to which he has been elected was the New York Legislature. Al Smith beat him for Governor in a big Republican year, and his appointment to govern Puerto Rico and the Philippines, like his job as Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Harding, were a political inheritance from his father, for nobody will believe that a Lieutenant Colonel Mike Swift or a Major Pete would have received these posts on the strength of a combat record, a single hitch in the State Assembly and a B. A. degree from Harvard.

In the Legislature he could have raised hell, as his father surely would have done, to prevent the expulsion of the Socialist members, but he failed to dramatize the case. He should have shaken the very pillars against the State prohibition enforcement act, but missed. And, though he afterward got credit for opposing the Teapot Dome transfer while serving in the Navy Department, that was a chance in which a real Roosevelt would have roared all over the country and made himself great though he wrecked the Harding Administration.

So the son of the old mane-shaker has no prestige on which Franklin could impose were he so minded, although nothing here is intended to say that he is not a good American, a respectable family man, an interesting companion and one of those aristocrats who will fight until cut to pieces.

Mrs. Longworth is one of the period of women's rights, emancipation, good works and movements, but her career has been social, with only a flippant participation in the salon or inside politics of the Capital.

So, all right, the President is only a fifth cousin to them. Or wouldn't it be more like it to say that they are only fifth cousins to the President of the United States?

Another Shakespeare

By George Kittredge.

By William Lyon Phelps

The long-awaited one-volume edition of the Complete Works of William Shakespeare, edited by Professor George Lyman Kittredge, of Harvard University, has just made its appearance, published by Ginn & Co., of Boston.

This is a stout, noble volume, shaped like the original quarto editions of Shakespeare's single plays; that is, it is shaped like those previous volumes in length and breadth, but many times their size in the third dimension. This book has 1,561 pages.

Although it is necessarily in double column, the paper is good and the type is clear. The type is set up "leaded," which means there is a space between the lines, which makes it enormously more easy to read than if it were set up solid.

• • • •

The only objection I have to the book is its weight. It is terribly heavy, but perhaps that also was unavoidable, considering the vast amount of reading matter it contains.

When I was 12 years old, I bought my first copy of Shakespeare. It contained all the plays in one volume, but it was unbound, only paper covers, and the type was so small that I could not possibly read it today, even with strong glasses. It cost 50 cents, my entire capital, and I regard it as a good investment.

I read every word of that volume, for the most part under a flaring jet of gas. I had the eyes of eagles.

It is interesting that the Kittredge Shakespeare appears at the very moment when Professor Kittredge retires from teaching and when Harvard is celebrating her 300th anniversary.

• • • •

Shakespeare had been dead exactly 20 years when Harvard was born.

The text in this new volume is made by Kittredge himself, after a careful collation of the earliest editions.

He has, I am glad to say, used the spelling and punctuation of today, which Shakespeare would have used were he now alive in the flesh.

There are no footnotes to the pages, but there is a glossary at the end, which fills 32 pages.

Let's Talk Foreign

That Englishmen should speak English seems a reasonable proposition. And yet—there is, for example, this question of meals. All over Britain, culinary programs are called "menus," which is not English at all, but French. Certain protests have recently been made on this score, and a demand has been given publicity that English meals in future ought really be called by English names on a piece of paper with an English title.

Yet it is obvious that the difficulty will not be solved by merely translating the French into English—at least, not literally. No one could reasonably be expected to enjoy hors d'oeuvres if that famous first course were called "the unemployed" or "out-of-works." The same difficulty is encountered in other activities of life. How could one translate "chauffeur" into English? One really could not call the man who drives one's car "a heater-up," though that is the literal meaning. He might just as well be described as a hot-water bottle.

Moreover, this borrowing of words from foreign languages is often a pretty piece of courtesy. Meals are most likely catalogued in French because France is a land famous for gastronomy, just as in France itself, the words "le sport" are a tribute to Britain's eminence in games. It would be a pity to lose these examples of international amiability.

Buenos Aires Outlook

By Peter Thicket.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Montevideo, Uruguay.

BACK OF THE Pan-American peace conference which meets December 1, in Buenos Aires, and underlying its functioning and deliberations is a great complex of facts and forces which give it a unique place in inter-American and world life. Unlike most Pan-American conclaves this one is out of the routine and though strictly all-American and international in character it is the product of a world situation, of internal conditions in the many American States and a reflex, too, of internal movements in European and Asiatic countries.

Often in the past Pan-American conferences have merely been meetings of diplomats who carried false-fronts and who dwelt and moved in a happy but fictitious realm of amicable abtractions. Their sole contact with reality came when they condescended to discuss uniform customs regulations, patents and copyrights and other matters which might have oiled the pathways of inter-American commerce, but rarely did because the elegantly dressed gentlemen who did the talking knew a customhouse only as something to pass through as quickly as possible.

December's meeting, however, is, by virtue of a host of circumstances beyond anyone's control, unusual in the sense that almost all the diplomats who will assemble at Buenos Aires will represent certain non-American political and diplomatic trends which are seeking to break down purely American political institutions and to prevent the formation of anything like an American bloc which might result in the neutrality of America in the case of a great war or in the event of a widespread fight between communism and fascism in Europe. If Communist and Fascist forces will be represented indirectly in Buenos Aires, so will the League of Nations and all that it stands for. It, too, has its American champions. In somewhat indeterminate positions, but no less active are British and French interests. Germany, too, has a thumb in the pie.

Many Philosophies To Be Represented.

NONE OF THESE groups or nations will speak directly at Buenos Aires. But their influence will be none the less strong and perhaps because of its very disarming indirection all the stronger. Every one of these isms and nations has developed a propaganda in all Latin-America in the past seven or eight months which perhaps has no parallel in modern times. They have tumbled over themselves in backslapping, in banqueting, radio exchanges and special broadcasts; in cultural missions, in donations of books and libraries and in a host of other ways calculated to weaken faith in democracy, in an American system, in trade with the United States and conversely, of course, to strengthen trade with themselves, faith in either a League of Nations or in alliances overseas and in fascism or communism, whichever it is the nation has to sell.

Their success is attested to by trends in Brazil, for example. Two characteristics of Brazilian evolution have been, first, the slow but sure trend toward liberal democratic institutions and, second, an openly avowed friendship for the United States. In the last year Brazil has begun to swing widely and loosely toward Italy and Italian fascism and this means, of course, away from the United States. The justification for the rightward trend, or rather the pretext, was the "communist" uprising of November, 1935, and the trade trend is explicable by the facilities offered by fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

There seems to be little doubt that European nations singly, and collectively, in the League of Nations have sought to sabotage the peace conference in advance of its meeting. In this the transatlantic forces have found an ally in Senor Don Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Foreign Minister of the Argentine. The tortuous foreign policy of Argentina, with respect to Geneva and Washington, somewhat supported by Chile and Uruguay, finally was explained when the Pampean crusader for peace all but wrecked the Pan-American peace conference ahead of time by hieing himself to Geneva, where he was elected president of the League's Assembly. He thus showed his definite predilections for closer harmony with Geneva than with Washington.

The attitude of Argentina goes counter to that of the northern South American and Caribbean nations. These have proposed American "leagues," "courts of justice," and other measures which would result in the creation of an American "system" of some sort. Though the danger never materialized, it seemed in October that many South American states were ready to recognize the Burgos government in Spain. If they had done this officially, only two interpretations could be placed upon their action. For one, their explicit predilection for fascism would be registered and their willingness to intervene in European affairs, as thus demonstrated, would invalidate from the start any effort to establish a continent-wide American policy of neutrality at Buenos Aires. Officially, they failed to take this action, but in spirit one feels that they have.

Wavering Opinion Toward U. S. Recorded.

THE HISTORY of the reactions to the conference itself are interesting and constitute the record of Latin-American wavering opinion towards the United States. Whether or not President Roosevelt meant what he said when he proposed the conference, the Latin-Americans accepted him at his word and enthusiastically approved the scheme. For once they bared their souls and showed how eager they were to find anchor somewhere. They expressed their faith in the United States, in the desirability of an American plan of neutrality and in really establishing a modus vivendi which would translate a serious and realistic Pan-American ideal into reality. Then Washington wavered and, while Washington apparently misread the signs, the enemies of the United States and the lovers of Latin American trade got busy.

They began that process which seems to have taken off the keen edge of eager anticipation, and which has transferred the possibilities of a truly productive discussion into another Pan-American "batebocа," as the Brazilians would say—a talkfest. Not even the announcements that Secretary Hull and Assistant Secretary Welles are on the American delegation has revived the earlier fervor. In part this is due to the fact that the subcommittee appointed to formulate the program, all Latin Americans, culled out the most vital questions which many of the Latin-American states wished to have discussed.

Next to the wavering of Washington and the timidity of the subcommittee for vitally diminishing the appeal of the conference was the Spanish civil war. Because all Latin-American countries are lineal and cultural descendants of Iberia it was only natural that their eyes should turn Spainward and that their interest in a potential American agreement on matters which became dwarfed by events in the motherland should become cool indeed. But as the war has dragged on and, because of the type of news which is received in many parts of Latin America, to what seems to many to be towards a successful conclusion, purely American affairs begin to seem interesting again. Speeches and articles pleading for a middle road between extremes have begun to appear and the effect of these may be to turn the tide Americanward again.

Many Factors Will Rule Meeting's Outcome.

FORTUITOUS happenings have played such a vital role in the course of the pre-conference period that it is hardly possible to imagine what may develop in Buenos Aires when the representatives of 21 American nations meet. They are committed to discussions on how to perfect American peace pacts and machinery, the thorny problem of neutrality and many others which are of lesser importance. The wisdom of the American delegates, events in Spain, Saavedra Lamas' opinion on the League of Nations, local elections and political developments just prior to and in the course of the meeting, the sincerity of those American nations that suggested an American league, European and Asiatic propaganda, and a multitude of other factors will dictate the manner, the temper and the trends of the conference.

Many observers believed at one time that it might be the most significant conference in inter-American history.

With the implicit support of powerful European nations many a Latin-American state which has been tail to the United States kite may turn and assume a more independent and critical attitude than heretofore. But whether postitively or negatively, the conference may produce interesting and important results.

At least one thing is almost sure. Information of conditions in Latin-America heretofore little known will become known. By the same token the policies of the United States for the next four years as they will affect Latin America will probably come to light. But we must revert to our first statement and reiterate that this is not solely an American conference. The time and the condition in which it assembles give it a world importance other Pan-American conferences have not had.

Off the Record.

Old-Age Income

By A. J. Altmeyer

Federal Program Begins.

Following are extracts from a recent radio address delivered by the acting chairman of the Social Security Board.

THERE ARE 11 sections of the social security act altogether. These sections may be classified into three groups. One group provides financial assistance to the States to carry on health and welfare activities, including assistance to needy aged, needy blind, and dependent children. Another group provides a method under which each State with the aid of the Federal Government may enact an unemployment compensation law without placing its employers at a competitive disadvantage with employers in other States. The third group covers the Federal old-age benefits plan.

Federal old-age benefits are best understood if we compare them to insurance. They apply to wage and salary earners who are now young or middle aged—men and women who work in industry, in business offices, in commercial enterprises of all kinds—about 26,000,000 workers in all. Under the Federal old-age benefits provisions of the act these men and women will be assured an income for life after age 65 when they are no longer at work.

What about the costs? The worker pays one-half and the employer pays one-half. During the next three years each will pay at the rate of 1 cent on each dollar of the worker's earnings up to earnings of $3,000 a year. That will mean for the next three years 15 cents, 20 cents, 30 cents or more a week according to what the worker earns. After the first three years the worker and the employer will each pay one-half cent more every three years until finally, beginning in 1949, 12 years from now, each will invest for old-age security 3 cents on each dollar the worker earns up to $3,000 a year. That is the most anybody will ever pay.

• • • •

NOW LET US compare the total amount of contributions paid with the total benefits received. For the man of 35 who is making $25 a week his contributions over 30 years' time amount to $975. If this man lives out his normal life expectancy of 12 years after reaching the age of 65 his benefits will amount to $6,480, or more than 6½ times what he pays in. In the case of a woman, the normal life expectancy is 15 years and she would receive $8,100 or more than 8 times what she paid in.

For a man of 60 who pays in for five years before he retires his total tax is $78—in return for which he gets $2,580 if he lives out his normal life expectancy or more than 33 times the amount he has paid in. In the case of a woman, she would receive $3,225, or more than 40 times the amount she paid in. Nowhere else can the worker get as much protection for the same amount of money that he pays in. This is true not only because he receives the benefit of his employer's contributions, but also because it would cost a private insurance company a great deal more to collect the premiums directly from the worker in such small amounts weekly or monthly.

However, insurance companies are prepared to furnish additional protection to workers who desire it and can afford to pay for it. Just as war risk insurance stimulated the life insurance business it is anticipated by insurance officials that the Government old-age benefits plan will stimulate the purchase of additional protection from insurance companies.

• • • •

BEGINNING ON November 24, the 45,000 postoffices throughout the country will distribute to employes, through their employers, forms known as "Application for Social Security Account Number." These employes' application forms will be distributed to all work places and will also be available after November 24 at all postoffices. The employe's application is a simple form asking a few questions such as name and address of the worker, name and address of his employer, date and place of birth, and father's and mother's name. When the worker has provided this information on the application he may return it, without paying any postage, in any of five ways:

By handing it back to the employer, or
By handing it to any labor organization of which the worker is a member, or
By handing it to a letter carrier, or
By delivering it personally to any local postoffice, or
By mailing it—without postage—in a sealed envelope addressed simply: "Postmaster, Local."

On the return of this information to the postoffice a social security account will be set up for each person eligible and he or she will be furnished a card—comparable to an insurance identification card—certifying that an account has been set up and bearing the number of the account so as to make it easy for the worker to find out at any time just how his or her account stands.

The Once Over

Probe of a Straw Vote.

("Senate May Investigate Literary Digest Poll."—Headline.)

Q. Now, then, the Senate would like to know how the Literary Digest ever went so far wrong on the election.

A. So would the Literary Digest!

Q. How long has the Digest been taking straw votes?

A. Well, it goes away back to the days when you could get a pretty good advance idea on how the public would vote.

Q. Your polls in the past have been marked by their accuracy, have they not?

A. They were so accurate we got to believe in them ourselves.

Q. Did you continue these polls as a duty or a habit?

A. We are now convinced it was a vice.

• • • • •

Q. Even the candidates used to believe in it, did they not?

A. The ones on the short end used to concede defeat as early as our September issues.

Q. Now, then what happened this year?

A. You're asking us!

• • • •

Q. Were the ballots distributed as in the past?

A. We thought so until election night.

Q. Did you make an effort to reach all classes of people?

A. Yes, but this year there must have been a lot of new classes.

Q. You didn't limit those straws to Republican voters?

A. What Republican voters?

• • • •

Q. Was any deliberate attempt made to keep the ballots from reaching the people on the lower levels?

A. No; but we may have been too high up to judge the depths accurately.

Q. Did you see that the ballots were distributed to working people?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you include, for instance, WPA foremen, directors, etc.?

A. I thought you said "working" people!

• • • •

Q. Do you think your poll was accurate in the early stages?

A. It relieves our embarrassment a little to think so.

Q. Has it occurred to you that the voters may have deliberately sought to fool you?

A. No; but we have to admit that they might as well have.

• • • •

Q. It has been suggested that the voters deceived you in a straw vote to end all straw votes. What do you think of that?

A. The idea of ending 'em is all right with us.

Q. Pardon me, but have you been eating strawberry pie?

A. No. Why?

Q. Your face is so red.

A. Take it from me, it isn't pie!

Labor Divided

Lewis Says Mass Industry Unionization Key To Workers' Welfare, And Green Holds Split Won't Hurt A. F. of L.

Editor's Note: As the American Federation of Labor convenes in Tampa, Fla., today, public interest is centered on the widening split in the ranks of organized labor, with the American Federation of Labor on one side and the Committee for Industrial Organization on the other. Below, the leader of each tells his side.

By William Green,
President, the American Federation of Labor.
Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Organized labor faces the future with its hopes high, its courage strengthened, and with a firm determination to reach new heights in economic and social improvement.

This attitude of the workers is based upon the state of mind of the American people expressed and made clear at the recent election, which action can be interpreted as a firm determination on the part of the American people to place greater emphasis in the administration of the affairs of Government on human welfare, protection and advancement.

Thus organized labor is winning its fight for recognition not only of itself as a constructive force in our social and economic life, but for recognition and acceptance of its policies, principles and ideals.

The great emphasis which heretofore was placed upon material welfare and material things is now being shifted to intangible values—human betterment and social security. The officers and members of the organized labor movement are firmly convinced that they are now nearer to the realization of their objectives than they have ever been in all the history of our country.

The standing, strength and influence of the American Federation of Labor will not be impaired because of internal differences or internal strife. It will go forward developing strength, broadening its vision and with newer and firmer grasp upon the economic and industrial life of the Nation. It is the one great reliable force in American life which will effectively prevent any return to what may be termed the "old order" and the domination of wealth and corporate power.

Labor can confidently look forward to the realization of higher standards of life and living and a greater degree of leisure, because the shorter work day must be applied as a remedy for unemployment and human displacement.

In addition a program of social security has been definitely launched, which will provide for unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, old-age benefits and health insurance. The votes cast in the recent election when social security was made an issue must be accepted as an instruction to Congress and to State Legislatures to proceed in the enactment of social security legislation. This will mean a degree of protection for the unemployed, care for the aged, retirement benefits established upon sound and actuarial basis, and health insurance for the wage earner who may be suffering from disease just as compensation is paid to the wage earner who sustains an injury in the course of employment.

I visualize labor as standing at the threshold of a new day. This will mean that life and living will take on new meaning for the wage earner and for the masses of the people. Organized labor will be the instrumentality through which these great economic and human achievements will be reached.

By John L. Lewis,
President United Mine Workers Of America.
Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

In the year since the formation of the C. I. O. (Committee for Industrial Organization) the American labor movement has made rapid and encouraging progress, especially in the modern mass-production industries. The United Rubber Workers have increased their membership ten-fold. The United Auto Workers, with newly acquired self-government, now encompass what were formerly four different competing organizations, and, with consolidated forces and enlarged membership, are about to launch a Nation-wide drive.

The great steel campaign has caught the interest and aroused the hope of millions of workers not only in the steel mills but in related plants throughout the country.

Yet in spite of this new wave of progress, there are some who talk as if the continued existence of the C. I. O. will mean a split in the labor movement and that split will mean calamity. To my mind, the labor movement has been faced with calamity in the past, rather than in the future—the calamity of embracing fewer than one-tenth of the organizable workers when the recent depression overwhelmed the Nation.

Assails Craft Policies.

The unions in the C. I. O. know that their future well-being depends on the organization of the tens of millions of those now unorganized. We did not form the C. I. O. lightly.

We were, and we are, convinced that aggressive industrial unions must be built up in the great anti-union industries if American wage earners are to improve their status, and if the labor movement is to have any continued power for good. The old stand-pat craft policies long ago proved futile in those areas.

Whether or not this new life will split the shell of the A. F. of L. depends on the controlling craft group that make up that shell. They have chosen to suspend the C. I. O. unions without authority, in violation of the A. F. of L. constitution and over the protests of the membership. We have taken no hostile action against any craft union.

But the executive council of the A. F. of L. has refused to listen to reason. They have never genuinely sought a compromise. Their sub-committee, appointed last January, sought a meeting with us only in May—and then to deliver an ultimatum, not to seek a basis for agreement.

We want unity—the unity of all those who toil and who are striving for a place in the American economic sunlight. But we have learned painfully the uselessness of a limited unity among 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 workers, while the vast majority are left unorganized to the mercy of company unions, the Black Legion, and the propaganda machine of the Liberty Leaguers.

If the executive council forces us to choose between this false unity and inaction on the one hand, and an ever-growing labor movement on the other, we shall not betray the interests of our members and of those now unorganized, nor shall we be false to the original ideals of the A. F. of L.

Deportation Means Death, Says Baron

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 15 (AP).—A man who calls himself Baron Rolf Wilhelm von Reitzenstein, but is known to immigration authorities as Immanuel Harry Rooch, awaited philosophically in a jail cell today for word from Washington as to whether he will be deported as an undesirable alien to Germany, where, he said, a firing squad awaits him.

The writer and lecturer claims he was the head of Germany's wartime secret service. Disposition of the case will await instructions from Washington.

Japanese Aide Holds War in China Certain

Peiping, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—The Charge d'Affaires of the Japanese Embassy, D. Kato, tonight told the Chinese press that the strained relations between Japan and China were "serious" and that "war is inevitable."

The Japanese diplomat made this statement after returning from North China, where Chinese charge Japan is attempting to set up another "buffer state," similar to Manchukuo, in five provinces, including Chahar.

Chinese sources say that China's troops in Chahar have been augmented and now total almost 15,000. Minor clashes between them and Japanese forces occur almost daily.

Smartest Society Out For Town Hall Opening

Diplomatic Corps Well Represented as M. Andre Geraud Answers Question: "Can European Peace Be Saved?"

By Dudley Harmon.

The intelligensia and the social register packed the Shoreham ballroom last evening for the second anniversary and this year's opening session of the Town Hall of Washington. A cross-section of Capital society, ranging from "horned-rimmed" students to diamond-encrusted dowagers, turned out for the first of the forum discussions which are rapidly becoming a Washington institution.

In impressive numbers, the Diplomatic Corps arrived to hear M. Andre Geraud's answer to the question, "Can European Peace Be Saved?" The Minister of Portugal and Mme. di Bianchi made their first appearance at a public function since the Minister suffered an attack of heat prostration in St. Louis last summer.

Busy selling tickets, was Miss Sibilla Sidelsky, Mme. di Bianchi's daughter. Others from diplomatic ranks present last evening were the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted, the Naval Attache of France and Mme. Sable, and the Charge d' Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Mr. Josef Nemecek, accompanied by Mrs. Francis Wilkinson Bunker, who looked regal in black velvet and mink. Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mr. Rastko ePtrovic, secretary of the Yugoslav Legation.

Mrs. Frank Bohn, who, with Mrs. Richard Oulihan, deserves chief credit for organizing the Town Hall in Washington, was accompanied by her parents, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper. Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Morris Evans and her daughter, Miss Meta Morris Evans, Baroness von Below, Mr. William K. Ryan, Miss Nancy Hawkins, Miss Eleanor Flood, Mr. Richard Huested and Commander Richard Tuggle were among others in the audience.

Those in the audience who were eager to meet "Pertinax" later at the party given for him by Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary were glad that the time allowed for questioning after his talk was limited. M. Geraud left at midnight to make an address before the Town Hall in Cleveland, but not before a good part of Washington society had had the pleasure of meeting him at the F street club, where the Essarys gave their party.

Cars were parked double for a block in front of the club, so numerous were the guests. Spoken to, or seen across the heads of the others, were the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, the latter wrapped in a long mink coat; the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles A. Davila; the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings—Mrs. Cummings wore a wine red frock and a small high-crowned hat of matching shade; the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, off tomorrow for the A. F. of L. convention in Tampa, Fla.; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, in blue taffeta; Miss Marian Trumbull, Mrs. McCook Knox, with her daughter Kathleen; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. George Williams and Mr. Edward Kulikowski, of the Polish Embassy.

Mr. Essary formerly worked with M. Geraud in Paris, and the latter coresponds frequently for the Baltimore Sun, with which his host is associated. A pleasant, not at all pretentionus personage, the foreign editor of the famed Echo de Paris informed us that his non de plume is Latin for "tenacious."

Further Geraudiana:

He knows English so thoroughly that he writes all his dispatches to this country in our language.

A political correspondent for 25 years, he has exerted no little influence on events behind the scene in Erope.

He will pay Washington a return visit in a fortnight, and this time will bring Mme. Geraud with him. At the last moment she was unable to come as her friends had expected.

Metropolitan's Opener to Draw Local Notables

Wettergren, Due to Sing Here Later, Expected to Be in Cast Dec. 21.

Many music lovers of the Capital will no doubt be in the audience on a Monday night in December when a kaleidoscope of black and white and bolder hues will slash the red plush interior of the lofty Metropolitan Opera House in New York and society will be out in its most lavish regalia for the opening of the fifty-fourth opera season.

On the opening night, according to the Associated Press, the audience probably will see and hear a superstitious Swedish contralto, who each time on her entry to the United States, insists she be given "a good swift kick for good luck."

She is Gertrud Wettergren, who is of particular interest to Washington, as she will be one of the artists presented this year by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend. Singing with her will probably be the Belgian tenor, Rene Maison.

And, probably, the opera for the opening night, December 21, will be a revival of "Samson and Dalila" by Saint-Saens, which has been given but rarely since the death of Enrico Caruso.

Miss Wettergren's demands to be kicked were complied with and good luck apparently followed. She was hailed after her debut in "Aida" last December, and won acclaim as a Carmen in January, although she had to hobble through one act because she lost the heel of her shoe.

Countess Visits At Mt. Rainier

Daughter of Tolstoy Guest of the Joukowskys.

Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, daughter of the famous Count Leo Tolstoy, arrived in Washington Saturday, spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Wsevolod Joukowsky at their home in Mount Rainier. She motored here from her farm in Connecticut. Before the revolution the Countess and Mr. Joukowsky, now in the Russian section of the Library of Congress, were associated in welfare work with the third army in Russia.

Several guests were asked to tea to meet the countess, among them Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mack. Plans for a lecture to be given by Countess Tolstoy in Washington this spring were discussed. The countess will appear here under auspices of the Russian Children's Welfare Society, of which Mrs. Mack is vice president.

After a brief rest here the countess will give several lectures in Southern cities, then spend the winter in Florida. Youngest daughter and secretary of her father, Countess Tolstoy. She is herself a writer of note. She has written two books, "The Tragedy of Tolstoy" and "I Worked for the Soviet," and is at work on a third.

Alumni Here Plan Big Ten Round-Up

Dance to Be Held Thanksgiving Eve.

The Washington Alumni of the Western Conference Universities will give their annual "Big-Ten Roundup" this year on Thanksgiving Eve at the Congressional Country Club. Dancing will start at 9:30 o'clock and a buffet supper will be served.

The members of the committee in charge include Mr. and Mrs. A. F. O'Donnell, Ralph Ingram, Mr. Basil Fowler, Mr. G. C. Harman, Mr. Paul George, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Akre, Dr. L. M. Lucas, Mrs. Martin T Fisher, Mr. T. M. Collier, Mr. Erling B Saxhaug, Mr. Fred Hakenjos, Mr. H. L. McEntee, Miss Amy Veerhoff, Mr. R. H. Miss Ruppert Aids At College Event

Miss Hilda Ruppert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Frank Ruppert, of Washington, who is attending St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind., this year, has been named to an important post on the committee making plans for the charity ball at the college. The event will take place Friday in the dining hall of the college.

Macneils on Visit Here After Return From Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil, who recently reutrned from their wedding trip to Scotland, spent the week-end here at the home of Mrs. Macneil, the former Mrs. Frederick C. Hicks, of Washington. They returned to New York today but expect to be back in the Capital for the Christmas holidays and to remain for part of the winter season.

Since their return from abroad, where they visited the Isle of Barra, ancient home of the Clan Macneil of which Mr. Macneil is forty-fifth chief, they have been at his Long Island estate near Great Neck. His three children, Ian, Kathleen Elizabeth and Joan Barbara, are all there and Mrs. Macneil's young son is at Kent School in Connecticut. All of the family will be here for Christmas.

Union to Entertain.

The English Speaking Union will entertain at a tea Thursday afternoon from 4:30 until 6 o'clock at the club in honor of Miss Gertrude Lawrence.

Returns to Washington for Winter Season

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of the dean of Senators, is shown rearranging her collection of elephants in the library of her home at 2101 Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Borah has come to Washington ahead of her husband to open their apartment for their thirtieth winter in the Capital. Senator Borah will join her here after he has attended a committee meeting in Reno.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Have you ever eaten grape leaves? No? Well, neither had we until Saturday evening. It was then that the Said Zoulfikars of the Egyptian Legation were entertaining at a buffet supper. Their home, for which the petite, but, oh, so clever, independent and capable lady-of-the-house looked for six weeks—is a most attractive place out in Kenwood. After winding about various lanes, boulevards and drives, which are bordered with cherry blossom trees that promise a beautiful spring, one arrived at 109 Brookside drive. An artistic flag walk leads to the stucco house which sits atop a slight rise. With its formal door set well back of several slim columns and curved archways, not to mention a tempting terrace, it has quite the air of Egypt. (We are using our imagination as we have not yet been to the land of the Nile.)

• • • •

Within, soft lights glowed and in the large drawing room a very welcome fire drew the guests to the far side of the room. All about are telltale signs of the host's homeland, soft, rich hangings, table runners, boxes and whatnots.

Black was by far the most popular color of the evening. The hostess herself chose it. Her velvet gown was designed with the Grecian one-shoulder effect. At one side a graceful scarf started, loosely falling from a large, flat buckle of gold kid (incidentally, the belt was made of these same large gold kid links and no end stunning), and thrown lightly over the other arm, and then trailing down and joining the train on the floor.

Now, a word about the young host. Just since he has been here, Mr. Zoulfikar has taken an interest in flying—an interest to such an extent that he is to get his pilot's license in a day or so. But as thrilling as that is, he would never be the one to mention it, and when asked about it all, politely answers a question or two, before modestly changing the subject.

While there was the steady hum and buzz of chatter, pierced every now and then with a cheery greeting or gay whoop of laughter, there were sounds from upstairs of the Great Dane which is making its home at the Zoulfikars while its own master and mistress, the Nikola Perazics, are away. That is a regular house of pets, and they all get along famously. There is the police dog, a debonair young blade of the canine world, and a delightful black and white spaniel with unbounded enthusiasm; then there is the maltese pussy, with facial markings that remind one of a quaint little old lady with her hair parted in the middle and drawn back.

This is a newcomer to the household and was picked up by the Zoulfikars when they came home from a recent party. It has not the slightest objection to having its face or paws licked by either of the dogs, and highly enjoys a tug of war, in which it is the middle and the two dogs are the tuggers.

In the dining room, where a long and wide table had been loaded with everything in the way of food that one could wish for, the 70-or-so guests gathered, and returned with their heaping plates to the drawing room or library. Even after all had been served, the platters of turkey, ham (which was a deliciously spiced dish), roast beef, shrimps, vegetable salad, stuffed tomatoes, relishes, looked as though they had just that moment been placed on the table, so much was there. Here is where the grape leaves come in. There was one delicacy served that looked like a neat little parcel of folded cabbage leaves or Brussels sprouts leaves, but turned out to be spiced rice rolled up and cooked in grape leaves. It is simply delicious.

• • • •

After all this, and the addition of rich deserts, Mme. Zoulfikar, assisted by Capt. Cugia, of the Italian Embassy, and Mr. A. K. Bojsen, came down the three steps from the hall into the drawing room, carrying a large tray piled high with the most artistic arrangement of apples, pears, grapes and bananas. A very pretty little ceremony it was, one gentleman helping the hostess with the tray and the other holding her long train.

Off in one corner, Mme. Sable, wife of the Naval Attache of the French Embassy, in black net over taffeta, with a large pale rose satin bow showing through the full skirt, and Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia, wearing aquamarine blue crepe, talked. With them for supper were Sibilla Skidelsky in black with a bodice of gold satin, and Ernst Meyer, newcomer to the German Embassy. The latter, regarding the attractive rooms a bit sadly, as he had looked at and liked the house from the outside, but unfortunately could never get in while it was vacant, and so took another place.

There was the interesting babble of many foreign tongues and added to this the radio, a huge, powerful affair, was tuned to some station far away across miles of land and sea. Toward the middle of the evening there was dancing. Quickly and skillfully the large soft rugs were snatched up and tucked away, the heavy furniture moved back to line the wall, and those who did not choose to trip the light fantastic or had not been early enough to pick out chairs, retired to the well-booked library, or the dining room where champagne, ice water, Turkish coffee, or anything else you wanted could be had for the asking.

Among those seen during the evening were the Paul Allens, Mrs. George Oakley Totten, in a soft, flowered gown; Ernest and Zoe Schlatter, the latter in royal blue crepe; Mme. Popovici, in gold brocade; the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola, Mme. Boncesco, wearing a wine-colored gown, the front of which was of velvet and the back of moire; Josef Nemecek, who was being most attentive to Marie Elena Garduno Pombo, and Hector Leguizamon.

• • • •

Also Kitty Fuqua in black velvet, a pair of gardenias atop her head; Mustafa Youssef, handsome young son of the soon-to-return Minister of Egypt; Anis Azer, who was his usual witty and nice self; Diane Smith, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Lolita, wearing a dainty, flowered satin frock; the Clarence Grosners, she in twilight satin; Philip Broad and Rastko Petrovic, Mrs. William Bride and the junior Brides and scores of others.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Entertain Friday For District Group

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis will entertain Friday night at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the members and guests of the Archeological Society of Washington. The occasion will mark the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the society, which Mr. Ellis has served as president since November, 1931, succeeding the late Mr. James M. Beck.

Dr. George S. Duncan, professor of Egyptology and Assyriology in the graduate school of the American University, will lecture on "Famous Cathedrals of the British Isles." During his recent visit to the British Isles he delivered lectures in London University and other institutions. Dr. and Mrs. Duncan were guests of the Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth Palace and also of the Archbishop of York at Bishopthorpe.

Yale - Princeton Game Attracts Capital Society

Many Go From Here on Special; Sportslovers Have Own Car.

Cornelia Otis Skinner's description of the boredom of going to a football game on a special train—the difficulty of making conversation for some 12 hours with her escort and the ride back with everybody cold and hungry—would have been a different story had she been a member of the Washington party which went to the Yale-Princeton game at Princeton Saturday.

Seldom has a more congenial group gathered for such a trip than assembled on the special cars which took members of Washington society to the Princeton contest. "It's just like old-home week," one passenger exclaimed as she boarded the train and found she knew at least half of those in her car. And the game was so thrilling even the "Little wren" type of person found herself screaming and yelling until she was hoarse with excitement.

Most of the women wore the classic football costume—tweed suits, topped with luxurious mink coats, a combination both sensible and striking.

Several members of the State Department were aboard, including Mr. Harry McBride, special assistant to Secretary Hull, and Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, chief of the Divion of Far Eastern affairs. Mr. McBride's son is a freshman at Princeton, and since his alma mater lost yesterday, is doomed to wear a black tie with the rest of his class, until Christmas. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Achilles, of the State Department, were accompanied by Mr. Stuart MacDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce, also of the State Department, were on hand to cheer for Yale.

Members of the Sportslovers Club, headed by Viscount J. Henri de Sibour, locked themselves in seclusion in the special car which they hire annually for the game, and passengers in the day coach were amused when they discovered that one of the Sportslovers had locked himself out of his car after a tour of investigation through the train. Members of this group included Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Mrs. Campbell Prichett, Mr. Moran McConihe, Commander Jerauld Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Emmons Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter White were accompanied on the ride to the game by Miss Elizabeth Sibley, daughter of the Harper Sibleys. Mrs. White wore a plaid skirt, topped with a severely tailored black jacket and a mink coat. Miss Sibley wore a Kelly green skirt and plaid jacket with a green hat with a quill. Mr. and Mrs. Dan Moore sat nearby, and chatted a good part of the way with Mr. Horace Peters and Miss Edith Colt. The Bonsals, Phillip and Richard, were also present.

The younger set was much in evidenceon Saturday, as at all football games, and among those we saw were Miss Nancy Leiter, in a blue wool frock with an off-the-face hat of matching shade; Miss Mary MacDowell, who almost missed the train; Mr. Thomas Moorhead, Miss Kate Hyde Scully, in a black tailored hat and black toque trimmed with a long quill, and Miss Betsy Burke.

Daughter to R. W. Garretts.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walter Garrett are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter, Frances Clark Garrett, in Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Garrett is the former Miss Carolyn Jackson, of Chevy Chase.

Peace Committee Meets Wednesday

Dr. Mary E. Woolley, of South Hadley, Mass., president of Mount Holyoke College and chairman of the Committee for the People's Mandate to Governments to End War, will preside at a meeting of the committee at 4 p. m. Wednesday at the home of Miss Edith J. Goode, 1714 N street.

Final arrangements for the work of the mandate committee at the Inter-American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires December 1 will be discussed. Dr. Woolley also will attend sessions of the national board of the American Association of University Women in Washington this week.

Dalmatian Trends

Featured in "ANYTIME," a Crown Tested Rayon Fabric

Shown in Our "Better Dress Shop"

—Because King Edward of England spent a part of his recent summer vacation in Dalmatia . . . this country has come into much publicity as a source of fashion inspiration, and everyone is talking the "Dalmatian Influence." One of the chief characteristics of the native dress of Dalmatia is that embroideries are used extensively.

Our "Better Dress Shop" is enthusiastic about this trend, and has dresses using Dalmatian embroideries in a discreet and sophisticated manner. Their fabric is the new "Anytime," a Crown Tested Fabric created of Seraceta and Crown Rayon, the new rayons of fashion. The Crown Tag stands for laboratory tested color fastness, dry cleanability, and general wearing qualities.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Her Romance With Employer's Cousin Comes to Abrupt Halt; Domestic Employe Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been a victim of divorced parents since I was 15 and because of a desire to be independent of both my step-parents I gave up the opportunity of getting a college education. Having a good social background I traveled and through my relatives came in contact with many fine persons. It was in this way that I met a wealthy family and began doing domestic work.

• • • •

Now, to get down to the main point: I went with this family to a distant city and met a young man of 30 who is my employer's cousin. We were very much attracted to each other at first sight. This attraction developed into deep affection. In fact, he declared his love for me. Even though he comes from a family of high social standing, the fact that I did domestic work made no difference to him whatsoever. He took me lovely places and introduced me to many of his friends. Then, toward the end of my stay, he wrote me a note saying he would be unable to see me again.

• • • •

I have reason to believe his mother is responsible for the note. Either she objects to me on account of the work I do, or she thinks we are too seriously interested in each other. I saw him once after that and he was much upset. He told me that he was unable to explain the reason for his actions, but that he still loved me.

• • • •

I came to this city and he went away to college. Three months have passed. Shall I write him, telling him where I am, and try to arrive at a definite understanding? Or what would you suggest? If you think there is no possibility of a reunion, I am going to give up my position and go home. Do you think I am too old for him? I am 22. Please let me hear from you as soon as possible. Sincerely,

TROUBLED.

Reunion Unlikely.

DEAR TROUBLED: I see no possibility of reunion. We might as well be realists and face facts. From his parents' point of view, you are no doubt out of the question as an eligible object for the boy's affections. Had you two met under other circumstances, as social and cultural equals, the difference in your ages might have been regarded as unimportant. But with things as they are, it will undoubtedly be used as one more argument against you. The boy probably will be told that he is too young to commit himself seriously to one girl, with his college education yet to be accomplished. He probably will be told you could never be an adequate helpmeet in whatever career he has in mind; that you cannot meet his friends on common ground; that your lack of education and social technique are deplorable and irremediable handicaps, and so on and so on. It is safe to assume he has already heard something of the sort. His upset state of mind is probably a symptom of bitter strife between his emotional desires and his intellectual dictates.

• • • •

My advice to you is not to write him and to make no attempt to clarify the situation. By letting him fade out of your life without making a single move to hold him, you will be sparing yourself unnecessary humiliation and the possibility of completely losing his respect. Were you to write a letter, it might fall into unfriendly and unsympathetic hands, and be used as a further argument against you.

This romantic interlude may be turned to good account if it serves to focus in your mind an image of the sort of man to whom you are temperamentally best suited, by tradition and blood inheritance. It may be a challenge to you to improve your neglected education, studying at nights, if necessary, in order to do so; to branch out in time into some field of work which does not label the worker with the caste stigma, which even our own alleged social democracy regrettably attaches to the domestic employe, and thus elevate yourself by you very bootstraps into a position where you come into daily casual contact with your essential equals.

You have pride, spirit, initiative and resourcefulness, as you have proved in refusing to be supported by stepparents whom you could not honestly accept in your own parents' place. But in a world which accepts persons largely at their own evaluation of themselves, it behooves you to place a higher evaluation upon yourself than that of half-educated, unskilled worker—and I say unskilled worker for the reason that your own story indicates you turned to domestic service because you were not fitted for anything else and very possibly not even for that, at the time you took your present position.

• • • •

In, in going home, you can better your chances of catching up on your education, and can return to daily association with persons who accept you for what you essentially are, and not for what your occupation would superficially label you, by all means go home, and for the present make the best of your child-of-divorce status. H. M.

• • • •

She Wants a Ring.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May a girl tell her boy friend what she really wants for Christmas and yet not seem too bold? I have been going with a boy for about five years and recently he asked me to tell him what I want for Christmas. There is really only one thing I want and that is a ring. Should I tell him so? And if so, what is the most tactful way to go about it? Please answer as soon as possible.

BETTY LOU.

• • • •

DEAR BETTY LOU: The girl who wishes to keep sentiment alive in her courtship would never tell an attentive young man the identical article she preferred for a holiday or anniversary remembrance, it seems to me. Nor would she even accept a gift of jewelry from a man to whom she was not engaged, much less admit to him that she wished a ring, of all things. The gift of a ring conveys the connotation of a bethrothal, and to suggest a ring as the desired gift amounts to hinting broadly, if not actually asking, for a proposal of marriage.

• • • •

My advice to you is to tell the young man that anything he chooses is sure to be acceptable. If he insists on more specific guidance, you might tell him to take his choice of gloves, purse, handkerchiefs, perfume, cigarettes, books or even a magazine subscription. Many persons of impeccable taste would frown on even such gifts, for there is still abroad in this country a sizable representation of old-school persons who believe the only acceptable gifts from a man to a maid are flowers, candy and books. M. H.

Modernized Pompadour for Maid and Matron

The modernized pompadour (below) designed by Monsieur Guillaume, of Paris, and especially planned for the post-debutante age. The bang or pompadour is brought well fordward when the face is long; the top of the head left sleek, revealing its shape; the sides arranged with curls, turned under in the back. For the young matron (right) this hair stylist creates a pompadour softened with curls, rolled under, the sides are fairly smooth, with just the suggestion of a long, loose curl.

Paris Stylist Calls Long Hair Obligatory Mode of Fashion

Heads as Well as Silhouettes Are Going Regal Under Influence of Forthcoming Coronation in England, Says M. Guillaume.

By Ethel Ehlen.
Post Fashion Editor.

LONG HAIR has returned! In keeping with today's formal and elaborate modes of fashion, inspired by ancient history, hair that reaches at least to the shoulders, is obligatory. So emphatically maintains Monsieur Guillaume, the foremost hair stylist of Paris, who is in Washington today and Tuesday at the Elizabeth Arden Salon.

According to Monsieur Guillaume, the short bob is as dead as the dodo; it is incongruous he insists, when worn with period-influenced clothes, which are taking over the entire fashion picture this winter. Coiffures, he says, are no longer casual, but well-thought out arrangements, accenting femininity and elegance. The reason is obvious—to promote harmony throughout the costume.

"The approaching coronation of Edward VIII, is the reigning factor in all feminine styles," said M. Guillaume. "Heads as well as silhouettes are going regal." Coronation-inspired coiffures, he predicts, are not only a sensation of the present, but because they are distinctive and smart, and so revolutionary in hair-styling, they will be a permanent vogue for at least several seasons.

To prove that the alluring new coronation-inspired coiffures are ageless, M. Guillaume is presenting versions in four different types, planned in accordance with feminine ages—debutante, post debutante, young matron, and the silver-tinted matron. Since the matron doesn't change the mode of hair dressing as lightly as her daughter, the coiffure for the woman frankly 40 or over, is of special interest. As created by Guillaume, the hair at the sides is arranged in soft waves with curls at the back that are rolled over. A soft, wisp-like bang distinguishes the front.

For the young girl, Guillaume suggests a coiffure with the hair parted in the middle, long side curls and large puffs across the top of the head. This is inspired by the coronation of Victoria, who was only 17 when she was crowned. For the young matron, this hair-stylist has created what he frankly calls his masterpiece; it is the coronation coiffure of 1937. The hair is parted directly through the center, the top of the head left flat and the hair at the sides rolled in a soft cornucopia effect from the sids around the head; a fluff of curls suggesting plums, framing the face.

M. Guillaume's theories on hair dressing are that longish hair should be dressed high in the front, with a pompadour or frizzy bang, and a low back line, achieved by rolling the curls under in a long effect, keeping the crown of the head sleek and revealing its shape. Sides should be fairly smooth.

"Let no one with a long face gasp at the idea of a pompadour!" volunteered M. Guillaume. "By bringing the pompadour out rather than up, it actually shortens the face. And for the round or square face it is ideal; delightfully feminine and chic; definitely representative of the times."

Miss Arden, who is also at the salon today and Tuesday, is introducing her new Amarillo make-up for evening. It is very Spanish in theme and, as the name indicates, has a glorious golden-yellow tinge, designed especially to wear with the popular coronation red. Another dramatic new idea in make-up is her English complexion, which keys so aptly into the headlining coronation fashions. For it she has concocted a special foundation and lipstick, an ideal rendering of that radiant and petal-like pink and white complexion over which poets have raved for generations.

Reading Is Habit Largely Created In Environment

Most Children Influenced if Surrounded by Devotees of Books.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

READING is a habit largely induced by environment. The child brought up surrounded by books, and by people who love books and read them, would be very different were he brought up in a household where books and reading were not a usual and accepted procedure.

Of course there are children who would read under any conditions. There is an occasional exception who would not open a book if his life depended on it. But the average child reads or does not read, according to his upbringing.

The X's had a very small apartment and were constantly moving. Therefore they traveled light, and books were one of the impedimenta which they did not carry. It made no difference to them, for they never read them anyway. The daily papers and an occasional magazine to supplement the radio and movies were all that they needed.

Their children went through school, but in spite of their parents' protests and disappointment refused to go on to college. Books and what was in them they cared nothing about. They wanted to get jobs at once and begin the practical business of making a living for themselves.

The Y's on the other hand, took to books as naturally as to the air they breathed. The whole family read and the whole family went to college. The children were no cleverer than the X children, they simply had the habit of books.

Books are not essential to life. One cannot learn everything or nearly everything from them. If the X's don't care for books it is quite all right. But they must not look for the miracle of bookish children, and complain that the youngsters are turning down an opportunity or disappointing their parents' ambitions, when they refuse to continue an academic life. One cannot reap what one has not sown.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 15.

BY THIS TIME the story of the historic press preview of Television may be pretty chilly fowl, but it is my right and privilege, whatever the date, to remark that it was tremendously thrilling, though still extremely complicated, as Mr. Sarnoff and I agreed, and pretty far from our settin' rooms, even today.

ALICE HUGHES.

I discovered, to my horror, that there are no less than 14 knobs and dinguses to be adjusted, and the three on our present radio set are a terrific toss to my mechanical ingenuity.

Then, too, the cost of the current would run to about $3 a month as the set is constituted at present—no small item in a modest family budget, even for seeing Miss Eleanor Powell tap-hoofing away in Hollywood.

The apparatus, at present, looks a lot like the old crank-turning slot machines of our happy childhood, with the screen on which the vision appears about 5 by 7 inches. And now, too, you will learn of "visual static" instead of the squawk variety which takes the form of cloudy lines which obscure the view and must be tuned out by one or several of these fearsome knobs and things. The successful range, at present, is not much more than 30 miles.

So we all agreed with the brilliant Mr. Dave Sarnoff that the show was a brilliant stunt—and not a great deal more, to date. For the hour of television's proper commercial bow is yet far off. Meanwhile, Jack Benny still does business on Sunday evenings—unseen, it is true, but eloquent!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Practically every New Yorker treks down to Greenwich Village now and then—just to keep an eye on the area which once spawned genius at every corner—where Edna St. Vincent Millay busily buried her candle at both ends, and where Floyd Dell wrote about a moon-calf. The place has changed much, even in physical appearance, being now a sort of downtown Broadway, verminous with neon-lighted night clubs and things. As an old Villager, I shuddered and bustled along, the other evening, but I did see a sign over a night-den that delighted me. It is called "The Crisis." What could be a more perfect name for a place where roisterers go to eat, drink, dance and fall down?

The second-generation Stones, daughters of dear old Fred, continue to do right well in show business. Pretty little Carol is a real hit in our big "White Horse Inn," the spectacular colossus, or vice versa, which actually packs the 3,600-seat Center Theater in Radio City. Paula's in films in the West, and Dad, of course, is one of the grandest things in the movies.

And speaking of things to do here in the evening, if you can be wooed away from improving lectures and exhibits, there is "Bill's Gay Nineties" on East Fifty-second street, where authentic old-timers give out the songs of that long-past era and there is a gentle sentimental mood pervading the joint. Leading the troupe is Joseph E. Howard, now rising 70, the silver-tongued tenor who once wrote such hit songs as "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?" and other numbers greatly favored by father in his morning tub.

It is a Gotham article of faith that there is no one so defunct here as last season's Ace Glamor Girl, but this year we have a real stayer in the person of the very pretty and social Dorothy Fell, once the photographer's pal in El Morocco and other fashionable stay-up spots. "Dotty" still stares up at us from the society pages—if only because she has given in to the current vogue for pneumonia and runs about Park avenue without a hat!

Beware of the word "baroque!"

It is jolly well going to be the new cliche (there's an Irish bull!) of the fashion racket here, and will sweep the suffering Nation. J. Hamilton Preston, head of the local school of fine arts, used it properly to describe overornate interior decoration. Already it is about to be attached to anything from girdles to coffee percolators. Don't say I didn't warn you about "baroque!"

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THAT little Turner boy looks like an angel, but he can think up more mischief than ten little imps. This morning his mother rescued him from making a parachute jump off the dining table, and yesterday he had two live frogs on the parlor sofa.

"Which explains why I've gone in for the rugged theme in my interior decorations," explained his mother. "The furniture is sturdy and informal maple that just suits a family like mine."

She had the walls papered in yellow because that is a color that keeps its high spirits through any household climax. Yellow window curtains, too, sheer and hung straight; that makes washing and ironing them easier, which is an important point when a lady has her hands full of school-age family. The rug is green, not plain, but of rather indistinct pattern, and the sofa is covered in brown frieze, certainly a good hardy choice, but smart too. For the easy chairs she has used slip covers of flat weave mohair, with a brown ground and beige to natural toned flowers with a touch of green in the leaves.

For lamps, she vetoed pottery bases because they're so easily spilled and mashed when a herd of second graders comes tearing through the house. Instead, she selected lamps with bronze finished metal bases and plain parchment shades. This room can take a lot of banging and still look presentable . . . as for the effect, we think it's delightful to see, which would make it a successful room even not counting its practicality.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Pattern for a Child's Room." This bulletin is five pages long and includes samples of colors along with patterns for patchwork quilt bedspreads, one for a boy's room and one for a girl's room.

Children Pleased With Sandwiches

Is there a child who doesn't prefer a sandwich to a cooked meal? Children love to eat snacks and that is one reason why school lunch boxes are so much fun. Nice looking sandwiches, a big, shiny apple and a piece of cake or some cookies make a heavenly meal, according to the child. They are not interested in roasts, hot soups and fruit cups when they can have their luncheon in a box.

Make your child's sandwiches attractive so they will sell themselves since mother isn't around to make speeches.

A good idea is to give a child one sandwich containing meat or eggs and another made of something sweet.

Chopped Tongue and Egg Sandwiches.

2 slices tongue, chopped
3 slices tomato, chopped
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped
4 tablespoons mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste.

Mix together tongue, tomato, egg and mayonnaise. Season with salt and pepper. Use a layer of filling between slices of bread. Makes ¾ cup filling. Makes six sandwiches.

Date Stars.

2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese
½ cup finely chipped dates
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Blend the mayonnaise, cream cheese and dates. Spread between thin slices of bread cut into star shapes with a cookie cutter. Makes 1 cup filling.

Household Hints

Two or three tablespoons thick sweet cream and a pinch of baking powder is a good substitute for an egg to each pumpkin pie.

Add vinegar to the water in which wilted vegetables are soaking; they will revive quickly and any little bugs in them will come out.

The GENTLER SEX . . .

By Malvina Lindsay.

Grand Tour.

"Now before you sit down I want to show you everything . . . I always say there's positively nothing as exciting as a brand new house—especially to people who have to live in apartments and hotels.

"You know what I think we'd better do? Go down in the basement and work up! Then we won't miss anything. Right down these steps now—be careful, they're steep. I should have brought the flashlight—watch out for that turn!

"Did you ever see such a gorgeous basement?? . . . I just wish you'd feel of that cement floor! We had a perfectly MARVELOUS cement man. If you ever want to have any cement work done—

"That? Oh that's the game room—or it will be after I get it fixed up. We'll have a ping-pong table there . . . and some chairs and a cute little card table—after I get some curtains at the windows it'll look a lot different.

We had the most MARVELOUS furnace man.

"That's the furnace. See, it's all automatic . . . works itself. Just turn that lever—no, the other one. There! You've done it! Actually a baby could operate it.

"Wait; don't go yet. I want to show you the built-in garage. Be careful there till I turn on the lights. Isn't it marvelous? . . . All right then; we'll go upstairs. I hope I haven't forgotten anything—wait, watch out for those steps.

"See, now, here's the hall, and I just wish you'd look at that darling clothes closet . . . that little room is the paneled den. Isn't it cozy?

"Here's the living room. Isn't it homey? Just feel those floors, will you? All hardwood! Aren't they beautifully finished? We had the most marvelous floor finishing man. Now this is the fireplace—see, you can actually burn wood in it.

"What? Yes, the dining room is nice. Just look at those fixtures, will you? We had the most marvelous fixtures man. The kitchen? . . . Yes, but wait! I simply must show you the breakfast nook. Isn't it cheery? Say, wait a minute. You'd better let me go ahead in the kitchen and turn on the light. See, this is the refrigerator. Just let me show you what marvelous ice cubes. What? Yes, the porch is out there, but wait. You haven't seen the oven . . . or the electric pastry mixer or——

"What? . . . Yes, that's the pantry. Just stand up and measure yourself to those shelves . . . did you see the cute little containers? Wait; I'd better go ahead of you up those stairs and turn on the light. Watch out for those steps.

"Here's the master's bedroom . . . see what a wonderful view . . . too bad it's night! Here's the closet. Just go in and let me shut the door and you can see how roomy it is. See, here's the bathroom—ALL TILED!

"The room across? That's the guest room—or it will be when I get it fixed up. Just look at that TILED BATH! See, it opens into the kiddies' room. I wish you'd try those faucets. We had the most MARVELOUS faucet men——

"That little room? It's supposed to be for the maid, but everybody says it's a shame to waste such a nice room. I think I'll just fix up that little room in the basement for her . . . you know, next the garage—— Say, wait, don't go down yet; I MUST show you the attic. Here, right up these steps . . . watch out, they're steep . . . I must have a light put in.

"Did you ever see such a comfy attic—or it will be after it's finished. I wish you'd see how solid those steel girders are. Did you know this house was all weather-stripped?

"Wait! You'd better let me go ahead of you down those steps—oh, say, there's something on the second floor I forgot to show you—the telephone nook! . . . I did? Well, I don't remember . . .

"Well, now you can get a better look at the living room—isn't that a comfy chair? Oh, say, do you know what? I forgot about it all till this minute! We'll have to go back down in the basement I forgot to show you the laundry!"

Care Is Necessary With Cretonnes

After Washing They Should Be Hung in Shade.

There is nothing quite so satisfactory as cretonne to brighten up a living room. The colors are so gay and the material so fresh and crisp.

Lovely cretonnes must be chosen with taste, and care must be used in washing them. Use a mild, white, pure soap, preferably in flake or other readily soluble form and avoid boiling or hard rubbing.

In washing cretonnes first shake the dust out thoroughly. Then immerse them in tepid or cool suds of a mild, pure soap. The amount of soap you use depends on the hardness of the water. Use enough to make a good lasting suds.

Wash the article in the suds by gently swirling it around and squeezing the suds through it. If you use a washing machine, run the washer only a few minutes; then change the suds and run it a few minutes longer. This is much more effective than one long washing in the same suds.

Squeeze the suds out without wringing them. Then put the curtains through several lukewarm rinsings, squeeze them as dry as possible without twisting, or put them through a loose wringer. Hang on the line smoothly to prevent wrinkles and streaks. Remember, colored fabrics should be hung in the shade, as the sun will damage them. Iron the material while uniformly damp with a medium-hot iron.

Cleaning ivory: Ivory which has become yellow may be easily cleaned and its whiteness restored by following this method: Take half a lemon, dip it in salt, and rub over the discolored ivory. Wipe off immediately with a soft cloth.

A most useful, soothing application for fire burns is a scraped raw potato used as a poultice. Also most helpful for an inflamed eye.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

When We See Double.

Every now and then some one will state that whatever he looks at seems doubled. One silver dollar is two, but, when he reaches for them, two hands are present—one for each coin! No, it isn't a delusion. The trouble is that each eye forms a separate image.

When this type of vision (diplopia) develops out of a clear sky, we may know that something has gone wrong with the machinery which holds the eyes in exact balance. Ordinarily what each eye sees is fused into one through the action of the muscles of the eyeballs. Their combined pull is regulated by nerve impulses from the brain. Because of this complicated mechanism it is surprising that this visual defect is not complained of more often.

Alcohol One Cause.

The best known variety follows overindulgence in alcoholic beverages. Here the nervous system control of the ocular muscles is lost temporarily so that focusing becomes difficult or impossible. It subsides promptly, however, when the drug has been eliminated from the system.

In botulism, which is a food poisoning contracted by eating home canned vegetables containing the bacillus botulinus, one or more nerves supplying the eye muscles are nearly always involved, resulting in twin vision of objects. This may be quite serious and paralysis of one or more muscles may remain permanently.

Persons past middle age who are afflicted with arteriosclerosis occasionally will suffer a hemorrhage or plugging of a small blood vessel with consequent injury to the nerves controlling the muscles. Not only will double vision be an aftermath, but drooping of the lid and paralysis of nearly all the muscles supplying one eye may ensue. This is of the same nature as a "stroke" in which other portions of the body are rendered helpless. As is the case with apoplexy, the symptoms may clear up rather quickly or they may endure indefinitely.

Accidents—especially a fall on the head or a fractured skull—frequently bring about diplopia. The nerve most commonly injured in this way is the sixth, which functions in turning the eye outward. The ensuing paralysis turns the eye in the opposite direction in a very conspicuous fashion.

Prisms Normal Cure.

Various measures may be undertaken when the situation has remained stationary for from one to several months. In cases of partial paralysis it is often possible to superimpose what the two eyes see by means of prisms worn in the glasses. This prevents dual vision as long as the head is held in a certain position, which patients learn to do rather easily.

In more complete paralysis surgery is the only means of cure. The attack upon partially paralyzed muscles is somewhat involved, but much improvement can be obtained by a properly selected operation, and it is a mistake for sufferers to believe that there is no remedy for this form of "seeing double."

To clean enamel ware: You will find that a half worn whisk broom makes a good scrubbing brush for enamel ware. When your whisk broom becomes worn take them and trim them to stub. Then scald with soapy water, then with clean water and finally rinse with cold water. When washing enamel ware, and the food sticks, you will find that a few strokes with one of these brooms removes it without injury to the cooking utensils.

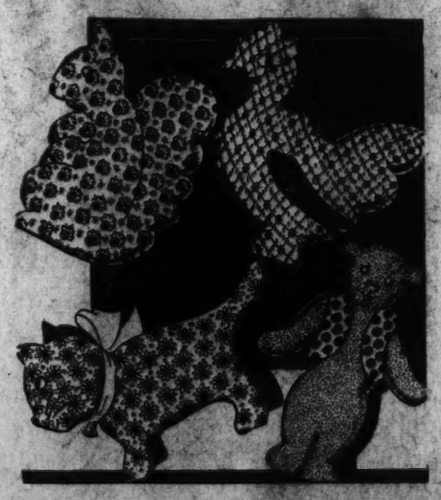
Simply Made Rag Cuddle Toys Delightful Playthings for Baby



By Alice Brooks.

Pattern 5609.

"EENIE, Meenie, Minie, Mo"—it's hard to decide which to make—but why make just one, why not all! Delightful cuddle toys, these, and just the soft, warm playthings for a baby's arms. There's nothing to the making of them, for each is composed of but two pieces, with the exception of the bear, whose jacket is extra, and the chick whose flapping wings are separate. Your gayest cotton scraps can go into the making of these winning gifts. In pattern 5609 you will find a transfer pattern for the four animals; instructions for making them; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

The extension of the civil service to employes in "permanent" emergency agencies seems likely to be accomplished as part of a general reorganization of the Government, with a number of changes in the merit system probable. Although it doesn't necessarily follow that these will be the suggested changes, it might be well to recall the recommendations for "better government personnel" made last year by a commission which included all three members of the President's special reorganization committee.

Outstanding of the committee's recommendations was for the establishment of a "career service." The committee suggested breaking up the general public service (which excluded the judiciary and policy-making positions) into five divisions: First, administrative services; second, professional and technical; third, clerical; fourth, skilled and trades, and fifth, unskilled. Each division was to be considered as a ladder with ample provision for employes to mount, rung by rung, or to shift to another ladder.

As essentials of such a career service, the committee urged increased appropriations for the Civil Service Commission, creation of a specialized personnel office in each of the five divisions and greater emphasis on department personnel work, integration of recruiting with the Nation's educational system, automatic promotion, a sound retirement system, a workable means of demotions and dismissals to eliminate deadwood, encouragement of employe groupings for professional, technical and other reasons, and post-entry training for all employes.

Other recommendations of the commission were a more rigid probationary system, stricter control over temporary appointments, a more secure tenure (provided improvements are made in recruiting, retirement and deadwood elimination), repeal of all "four-year" tenure laws, inclusion of postmasters in civil service and their future recruitment through promotion, inclusion of deputy collectors of internal revenue and marshals in the civil service, extension of classification to the field, extension of civil service to employes of emergency agencies "as far as practicable," repeal of section 213 of the economy act and amendment of veterans preference laws to "adequately recognize war service of veterans without conflicting with the merit principle or the efficiency of the public service."

All in all, a rather ambitious program, which, if adopted, would certainly revolutionize this business of working for Uncle Sam.

You probably have noticed the surprising lack of originality in American liquor labels. We never relized why until one day last week when R. W. Janney, chief examiner of the Federal Alcohol Administartion's liquor label section, took us through his offices in the Justice Building.

Every liquor that is to be sold in this country—and that includes both imported and domestic whiskies, gins, brandies, rums, cordials, wines beers and anything else the boys in the back room can think of—must be labeled to the FAA's taste. Now the FAA's taste, Janney admits, does not run to artistic, but to those labels that give the information required by law straightforwardly, minus undue typographical or other artistic flourishes that might mislead the public.

The FAA's examiners lean over backwards to see that the public is protected from misleading claims or "socially undesirable" art on the labels. Included as "socially undesirable" are sketches of women or children, religious or church figures, schools, the American flag or similar "suggestive" bits. How rigidly these standards are imposed can be seen from that almost 90 per cent of all labels submitted the first time are returned to the manufacturer for correction.

Since February the FAA has approved 89,028 distilled spirits labels and about 15,000 wine labels. According to law the distilled spirits labels had to be approved by August 15—and although members of the alcoholic industry were betting 3 to 5 against the FAA, the job was completed in time. The wine deadline is December 15, and the FAA examiners have stepped up their work so they are handling almost 1,800 labels daily.

The manufacturers themselves are in good part to blame for the lack of originality in labels. Most of them seek to give the impression that their products are imported and label their bottles as nearly like the foreign bottles as the FAA will permit. The second great obsession of liquor manufacturers is to give the idea their wares are old. The FAA permits the use of the word "old" only when it is part of the brand name, yet one-sixth of the distilled spirits labels approved carried the word "old." Next most popular are "oak" (liquor is stored in oak barrels) and "elk."

But occasionally there are sparks of originality, as in the case of the man who wanted to sell a "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year whisky. By far the most individuality shown, however, was that of a gin manufacturer who submitted a label featuring a nude woman. He pleaded for a special exemption from the FAA's ban on women figures, as the gin was being bottled specially for use in a nudist colony.

Car Liability Rate Increase Hinted Here

A. A. A. Director Hears Talk of Proposed Boost in Premium.

District Insurance Costs Considerably Lower Than Other Cities.

On the heels of the recent increase in building public liability rates, reports of an impending increase in automobile liability rates have gained circulation in local insurance circles.

With basic premiums of $31 a year now offering protection of $5,000 for bodily injury of one person, $10,000 for two or more persons and $5,000 property damage, automobile liability insurance rates in the District are among the lowest in the country.

Yet last year insurance companies licensed here collected $2,207,425 in automobile liability insurance premiums and paid out only $905,489 in claims. In the previous year, premiums totaled $1,756,402 and claims amounted to $796,525.

The basic premium rate is established for companies throughout the country by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters in New York City, based on the "experience" in losses over a period of years.

Washington's "W and X" rate, which covers lower-priced cars compares with $54 for Baltimore, $64 for Philadelphia, $57 for Pittsburg, $114 for New York City, $80 for Cleveland and $48 for Milwaukee, one of the safest cities in the country in per capita traffic accidents.

Rate Plan Outlined.

The per capita accident rate, however, only has slight bearing on the establishment of the insurance premium rate because insurance companies base their statistics on the number of insured persons who are involved in accidents, C. D. MacMillan, director of the insurance department of the American Automobile Association, explained.

"Washington's automobile insurance rates are low," MacMillan said, "because the assured drivers here do not figure proportionately in as many accidents as they do in other cities."

MacMillan said he had heard reports of a possible increase in rate, but nothing definite has come yet from the National Bureau of Underwriters in New York.

"We all know that juries are becoming more liberal and the public is becoming more and more claim conscious," MacMillan said. He pointed out that every claim filed against an insurance company must have some bearing on future rates.

Increase Doubted.

J. B. Moor, director of insurance for the District, however, was skeptical of an increase in the basic rate.

"Competition will keep the rate within reason," he said, pointing out that there are 104 companies which write automobile liability insurance here.

Charles E. Conner, assistant director, added that already competition has forced some companies to cut their premiums far below the basic rate.

"I carry my automobile liability insurance with a company which has its home office outside of Washington," Conner said. "My premiums are only $18 a year and it is a good sound company, too."

Moor pointed out that the local insurance department has no control of rates other than to see that the companies do not jeopardize their financial standings with low rates. "But they can charge as much as they want and we can do nothing about it," Moor added.

Insurance companies writing automobile liability insurance in the District, Conner said, have been complaining of the absence of a law which would protect them from what is known as the "guest passenger" racket.

Banned In Some States.

Assured drivers who become involved in accidents in which a friend who was riding with them might have sustained slight injuries frequently encourage their passenger to sue and then go before a jury and freely admit that the accident was all their fault.

In a number of States guest passengers are not allowed to sue the driver of the car in which they were riding unless they can show he was guilty of "gross negligence."

MacMillan said insurance companies in the District are harassed with claims by lawyers, but said he did not believe there were many shysters or ambulance chasers operating here.

Judaism Is Vital To Race, Says RabbiLandman

Economist Benjamin Stolberg Joins Plea to Abandon Nationalistic Plan.

Advocating the practice of Judaism for Jews, Rabbi Isaac Landman, of Congregation Beth Elohim, Brooklyn, N. Y., last night told listeners at the National Temple Forum of Washington Hebrew Congregation, that the Jew who forsakes Judaism might as well "think himself out of existence altogether."

"As a Democrat, a Fascist, a Socialist, a Marxist or a simple proletarian," said Rabbi Landman, "the Jew is no better nor worse than anyone else who holds these social or political theories. Only his religion makes him unique among men. Without his Judaism he has no excuse for living."

Rabbi Landman was debating the topic, "Should Judaism Be the Way of the Jew?" with Benjamin Stolberg, well-known economist and writer.

Urges Assimilation.

Stolberg said he believed that consciousness of race, nationality or religion was a reactionary force which tended to hinder the Jew. He thought the Jews could best solve their problem by "assimilating in a progressive direction."

Landman maintained that an adherence to Judaism could be the only ultimate salvation of the Jew. Through it, he argued, racial distinctions would eventually be broken down.

The two speakers agreed substantially on the advisability of Jews abandoning nationalistic tendencies.

"Judaism interpreted as nationalism, thank God, is being discarded even by the post-war zealots who now have sensed finally the threat of constricted political and economic nationalism to world peace," Rabbi Landman declared.

Deplores Separatist Ideas.

"Judaism interpreted as a separatist, segregating culture or civilization within the culture of the nation in which we claim citizenship constitutes only an added vexation of the spirit for them who hold confused ideas about Jews and are unacquainted with or distort the ideals of Judaism as religion."

Reactionary governments like Nazi Germany, the rabbi asserted, are not in fear of the Jews but of the philosophy of Judaism—a philosophy which, he said, is directly opposed to the Nazi way of thinking.

"Judaism," he said, "pleads for justice and righteousness for all humanity; Nazi-ism only for a mythical race. Judaism stresses the brotherhood of man; Nazi-ism the brotherhood of one nation."

New Trolley Routes Revealed; Cars Will Bear Route Numbers

The Capital Transit Co. last night made public its new rerouting plan for street cars, involving four major changes in routes and a number of minor ones. The plan will go into effect Sunday.

After that day the cars will carry numbers to designate routes they ply. The new routes and route numbers are as follows:

Routes 10 and 12, Rosslyn-Benning. The Rosslyn line has been coupled with the Columbia line. Cars of route 10 will be operated between Rosslyn and Fifteenth and H streets northeast, and between Rosslyn and Kenilworth. Cars of route 12 will be operated between Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest and the District line at Seat Pleasant.

Routes 20-22—Cabin John-Maryland: The Cabin John and Maryland lines have been coupled. Cars of route 20 will be operated between Cabin John or Potomac Heights and Rhode Island avenue and Twenty-second street northeast, using the old route of the Maryland line east of Fifteenth street northwest. Cars of route 22, from Mount Rainier and beyond, will have Washington Circle as their western terminus.

Route 30—Tenleytown - Pennsylvania Avenue: Cars of the Tenleytown line (route 30) which have been operated between Friendship Heights and Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, will have their eastern terminus extended to Seventeenth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Route 34—New Pennsylvania Avenue Line: There will be a new line (route 34) between Potomac Park and Eighth and F streets northeast, passing the Union Station.

Routes 40-42-44—Mt. Pleasant: On the Mt. Pleasant line there will be no major change. Cars of route 40 will be operated to Lincoln Park or to Third and Indiana avenue northwest; cars of route 42 to Thirteenth and D streets northeast, by way of the Union Station, and cars of route 44 between Connecticut avenue and S street and Union Station by way of the Courthouse.

Routes 50-52-54 — Fourteenth street: Cars of route 50 will be operated between Fourteenth and Decatur streets and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; cars of route 52 between Takoma or Fourteenth and Colorado avenue and Sixth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and cars of route 54 between Fourteenth and Park road and the Navy Yard.

Routes 60-62 — Eleventh street: Cars of route 60 from Eleventh and Monroe streets northwest will have their southern terminus at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The other branch of this line (route 62) will be operated between Fourteenth and U streets (Portner place) and the wharves by way of U, Eleventh E, Ninth, Pennsylvania avenue and Seventh street.

Routes 70-72-74-76 — Seventh Street-Georgia avenue: Cars of route 76 will be operated between Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and Georgia and Alaska avenues; Brightwood or Rock Creek Church road (New Hampshire avenue). Cars of route 72 will be operated between Seventh and Pennsylvania and Fourth and Butternut streets; cars of route 74 between Seventh and Pennsylvania and Soldiers' Home (these cars have been operated to the wharves). Cars of route 76 will be operated between the wharves and Seventh street and Florida avenue northwest.

Route 80—North Capitol: On the North Capitol line (route 80) the western terminus will be changed from Virginia avenue in Potomac Park to Nineteenth and F streets northwest, with cars operating between that point and Brookland or Catholic University.

Route 90—New Jersey avenue: There will be no change in this line. Cars will bear route number 90.

Route 92—Florida Avenue. The western terminus of this line (route 92) will be changed to the loop at the Calvert Street Bridge.

During rush periods special routes will be continued to and from important Government agencies, as has been the practice in the past, with some improvements in service. At a later date, cars on such routes will carry distinctive route numbers, using odd numbers.

The re-routing plan announced last night, like those previouusly put into effect, is the fruit of a merger of all traction lines here.

John Ihlder to Discuss D.C. Housing Conditions

John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, will address the Social Action Institute, sponsored by the Washington Youth Council and held every Tuesday night at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia road northwest.

The topic of Ihlder's address will be: "What Church Youth Can Do About Bad Housing Conditions in Washington." He will also lead a discussion of the work of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Crime Reduced As Police Wage War on Thefts

Loot valued at about $700 was stolen in the city over the week-end as an unusually small number of housebreakings or robberies was reported. Police attributed the lack of crime to last week's drive against transient thieves.

Maurice G. Stokes, of 330 Seventeenth street northeast, was robbed of $9 while riding in a taxicab. Stokes said he hired a cab at Second street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast and when he entered there was a man in the back seat. While riding, Stokes told police, he missed his billfold. When he told the driver, the other passenger returned the wallet and leaped from the car. But the returned wallet was empty.

Clothing worth $110 was stolen from his automobile parked in front of 224 Fourth street southwest, Howard Burrell, of Montgomery County, Pa., reported.

A hair waving machine valued at $500 was taken from his car by a thief who broke the window with a horseshoe, Richard F. Currie, of Philadelphia, Pa., told police.

A sneak thief was captured by police in the basement of the home of Edward Law, 617 F street northwest, early yesterday after Law had surprised the intruder in his bedroom.

Law said he was awakened by the man who ran into the cellar. Notifying police, Policeman J. E. Dawn, of the First Precinct, arrested Herman Forster, colored, a next-door neighbor, in the basement.

Bishop Scores War as Enemy Of Holy Spirit

War appears in international life today because nations transgress against the Holy Spirit, the Right Rev. Robert, Strider, Bishop of Coadjutor of West Virginia, declared in a sermon yesterday at St. John's Episcopal Church.

The bishop made the statement in the closing sermon of a series of daily missions he conducted in the church last week. One of the outstanding members of the Episcopal clergy, Dr. Strider during the week explained the personal elements of religion, and told his audiences how the fundamental principles of the Christian religion can be applied to modern living.

"The Holy Spirit reveals himself in the social life of the race," he said yesterday. "Continuously since the emergence of man on the earth, that Spirit has been striving to make him truly one. With painful slowness a purely individualistic viewpoint has given way to a deepening social consciousness. At the beginning doubtfulness, pure selfishness, was the prevailing rule of life.

"Then came the family, later the tribe, and after that the racial group; until, in our day, racial groups have actually, though rarely, attained to the unity of a co-operative commonwealth. The Holy Spirit cannot rest until mankind becomes one harmonious family."

Pastor Favors Mercy Deaths Of Incurables

'Proper Review Board' for Cases Urged by Young Minister.

The right of incurables to a "mercy death" was staunchly supported last night by the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church.

Discussing the question which has divided clergymen and physicians the world over, the minister declared it was a "perversion of the term" to call prolongation of life for those who cannot be helped "a merciful thing."

"When a dog goes mad, or a horse breaks a leg, we say it is the merciful thing to administer painless death," Anderson said, "and yet, when a human being is afflicted with a disease that cannot be cured we say it is 'merciful' to do anything to prolong his life.

"A proper board of review might give permission to remove from misery those incontrovertibly beyond help: for example, idiots, imbeciles, criminally insane, and those whose last days are destined to be spent in horrible suffering."

Authorization of "mercy deaths" should come, according to Anderson, from a "proper board" or social-service group, acting only when consent of the afflicted, or of his family, was given.

"We hesitate, properly, to give too sweeping an answer to the question here," the pastor added, "because of the great strides medical science has taken. What we cure today, our fathers thought incurable."

Anderson, a young minister who took charge of the First Congregational parish only a month ago, discussed "mercy deaths" as part of a "Question Box" sermon. Several other controversial questions on current issues also drew answers.

In the course of his sermon, the second of the kind he has given here, the minister advocated physical examinations as a prerequisite for marriage.

"Absolutely, yes," he declared. "The young couple themselves are embarrassed to demand this of each other, whereas a law would make it matter-of-course, and the embarrassment would be on the same plane as the license itself."

Answering another question, the minister favored Father Coughlin's retirement from radio speaking. "His (Father Coughlin's) temperament is too volatile, too volcanic for controversial matters. He slips too easily into demagoguery. By his abusive utterances he has retarded the proper influence of the clergy on public affairs a generation."

Answers to other questions follow:

Q. If a man can afford his losses, is slot-machine gambling all right?

A. No. For he still supports a demoralizing institution. He still sets a bad example to those unable to afford such losses.

Q. How does one learn to "drink like a gentleman?"

A. He doesn't. It is a habit-forming performance of which no good can come.

Q. Do we need a Hitler in the United States?

A. No. Our Jewish friends are among the most enterprising, resourceful and valuable citizens we have. No religious group can suffer without all of us being hurt. And, third, "God hath made of one blood all nations to dwell together" and antagonisms have no place in the divine order.

FEATURE STORY: And now the Nobel Award has been added to Eugene O'Neill's prize collection. . . . A few years ago his friend, Dr. Nathaniel Lief, went to visit O'Neill in the small hotel room on West Forty-sixth street where the playwright lived. He was busy autographing copies of his newly published play, "Strange Interlude." . . . "Do you want to see something I prize very highly?" O'Neill asked. "Wait, I'll show you." . . . He walked to the dresser, opened the top drawer, and began rummaging through it. On top were two gold medals, signifying the Pulitzer Prize Awards. O'Neill shoved them aside carelessly and continued to rummage. "Here it is," he said—extracting the old, tattered document which is his most coveted possession. . . . It was his Able Seaman's Certificate.

POLITICS: At 1 a. m. Cab Calloway and Bill Robinson went through their usual comedy routine at the Cotton Club . . . "Did you hear?" Calloway spoke up to Bojangles. "That man Roosevelt won the election" . . . "Aw, dammit," Robinson replied, "four more years of prosperity" A lady seated at the ringside nudged her tall, red-headed escort —who fell off the chair . . . He was John D. Hamilton.

BOOK DEPT.: John Barrymore visited the Leslie Howards in Hollywood recently. He presented a book of pastels to Howard's daughter, and then was asked to autograph it. . . . Barrymore wrote: "When you're grown up and should happen to look at this, know that a one-time famous actor presented it to you."

FINANCE DEPT.: Howard, incidentally, was ill during the premiere performance of "Hamlet." And the reviews hurt him deeply . . . "$1,500 worth of free tickets were given away on opening night," Mrs. Howard related later. "And for what? For such reviews? Never again!"

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Howard Redell, the commercial photographer, has been retained to take an action-photo in connection with one of their pep-food affiliates. The action-photo is to show the conclusion of a race between a scrawny boy and a vigorous pep-fed lad. . . . Redell hired the models, conducted the race, but it was no go—because the scrawny lad won. The race was repeated, and again repeated, each time with the same result. . . . Finally, the husky boy won—but only after the skinny boy had given his opponent a 20-yard lead.

MUSIC DEPT.: Yascha Bunchuk, the 'cellist-conductor, was being flattered by the song-pluggers last night . . . "Look, such nice clothes you wear always," they honey'd, "and a nice car. You must be rolling in dough" . . . Bunchuk, acting coy and modest, answered: "Oh, well, I wouldn't say that exactly" . . . "Come on, come on," the pluggers continued, "I'll bet you got $100,000 socked away" . . . Yascha waved his arm airily and replied: "Oh, well, everybody has $100,000!"

THEATER DEPT.: Don Richardson has been seeking a stage role for the past three years. On each occasion he was rejected with the explanation, "You're not the type." . . . He relinquished his ambition, and two weeks ago became the stage manager for "Don't Look Now." . . . Yesterday a 75-year-old man, who portrays the 85-year-old colonel in that play, suddenly became ill. Richardson stepped in, and now has the role. . . . He's 21.

Mutterings:

HOLLYWOOD, NOV. 15.

The whipping post is none too good for cheap producers who force film units to work Sunday when there is a holiday (even Christmas) during the week. Frantic urge: To glue John Barrymore's eyebrows in place while he has them lifted disdainfully away up to there. Growl: Theater double bills should be re-doubled, and set six. Silly notion: to attend a dignified Grace Moore recital and scream "Fire!" during her top screech.

GRACE MOORE.

Some day my homicidal instinct will vent itself on people who attend movies and gossip while the picture is on. (Bet a pretty that a fair-minded jury would set me free.) Secret: George Brent had a funny tip on his nose which a surgeon clipped before George stabbed at pictures. Nervous itch: To double my fist and see if it will fit into Martha Raye's mouth. I am getting so weary of grossly exaggerated publicity about Marion Davies's pictures.

Add annual announcements: Mary Brian says she will not wed until she is ready to retire.

A story that might never have leaked out (but did) has to do with the removal of Grace Moore's tonsils. They were removed by Dr. Joel Pressman, probably better known to you as Claudette Colbert's husband. Grace arrived at his offices with an elaborate diagram of her throat. She told him exactly how to snip off her tonsils so they would not interfere with her high notes. "Please be very careful," she warned just before he administered the anaesthetic. "You're playing around with a million dollar music box."

By anonymous mail comes this "secret of movie success:" "Keep your back to the wall, your ears to the ground, your shoulder to the wheel, your nose to the grindstone and both feet on the ground." A neat trick, if you can do it.

All of Those Busby Berkeley Beauties Will Arrive In the National Capital on Tuesday of Next Week

Flying Troupe of 1937 "Gold Diggers" Is Booked For One-Day Stop in Washington; Mr. Melcher Given Farewell to End All Farewells—We Hope; Gossip Odds and Ends.

SO NOW it comes out that Washington—meaning the local offices of the Warner Brothers organization, presided over by Zone Manager John J. Payette—will play host to "The Gold Diggers of 1937" on Tuesday, November 24, the same date that Katharine Cornell will inaugurate her engagement at the National in Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory."

BELL.

These "Gold Diggers," the flying theatrical troupe who have been celebrated in this space before in both words and pictures, will pause only one day in the National Capital on this 12,200-mile transcontinental joy-ride of theirs.

That day will be fairly crowded with press conferences, luncheons, dinners, personal appearances at the Earle and the usual concomitants, flubdub and fol-de-rol of this sort of thing as earlier exemplified by the visits of the "Forty-Second Street Special," "The Moulin Rouge Caravan"—in a blizzard, remember? —and similar safaris that have come from far places for brief spaces.

Heading the troupe will be three principals—Jeanne Madden, whom I liked very much with Dick Powell and Joan Blondell in "Stage Struck" and none of the others of the critical fraternity seemed to care much about; Rosalind Marquis, who has a featured role in the new film "Gold Diggers," and Fred Lawrence, young singing actor, who will act as master of ceremonies during the appearances of the entourage in Washington.

It might be worth mentioning, in passing, that 12—count 'em, 12—of Busby Berkeley's fabulous chorines appear in this personal appearance exhibition of showmanship, periphery and pulchritude. Their pictures appeared here only a few days ago and I pledge you my word you shall know all about the blonde on the right end of the line immediately they have arrived in town.

That was a gorgeous rout Mr. and Mrs. Carter Barron staged in the Heigh-Ho Club Saturday night in a farewell farewell to Eddie Melcher, erstwhile drama editor of the Evening Star, who now has left our placid purlieus for the hectic life of a dialogue writer—or something of the sort—in Hollywood. Eddie hasn't exactly left for the Coast, at that, although, quite definitely, I believe, he has left Washington. For the next six weeks, Master Melcher, I suspect, might be found hiding out in some remote spot in Jersey against the time when he will be called upon to appear in Hollywood for his articled stint of dialoguing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer about the first of the new year.

But getting back to the gracious Barrons' distinguished soiree, I can only say that it fairly matched the celebrated "Dinner at Eight" dinner at 8; the English mutton chop dinner and the various other festive revels they have spread in honor of the press, visiting players, departing firemen and whatnot.

One of the distinct drawbacks to a completely enjoyable evening for a majority of those in attendance was the incorrigible habit of your reporter of making speeches and a pronounced tendency on the part of all concerned to stand up on their feet and say nice things about this Melcher fellow, who really doesn't deserve half of it.

He is, of course, as everyone knows by now, a despicably low character of whom no good can be expected whatever. However, I did him eulogy and so did everybody else.

Incidentally, and perhaps not unimportantly, some notorious hatchets were buried in the early morning hours of this splendidly appointed party and once again it can be said that "all is quiet along the Potomac," insofar as heretofore supposedly warring critics are concerned. The whole contentious business that had endured for almost a decade was silly to begin with. It is pleasant to have it over.

Dots and Dashes.

Comes a letter from Max Gendel, general press agent for Max Gordon, written from the Copley-Plaza, Boston, quite a swanky place, in which the triumphant continuance of "St. Helena," starring Maurice Evans as Napoleon, is announced . . . The piece was about to be yanked, as we say in the lower circles, at the Lyceum Theater in New York, when by one of those inexplicable reversals of form that sometimes occur, business took an upward swing and has been at the sell-out point ever since . . . Max Gordon's determination to keep the play going was arrived at at exactly 11:07 p. m. on a Saturday night . . . It has been justified ever since . . . Show business . . . You have to have the "feel" of it to get along . . . Last night at 9, the members of the critical fraternity, still able to navigate on their own power after Carter Barron's farewell to end all farewells to Eddie Melcher Saturday night at the Heigh-Ho, were vouchsafed a preview glimpse of "Come and Get It" . . . Tomorrow at 1:30, for those of us who will not be in New York looking at "Winterset," as guests of RKO-Radio and S. Barrett McCormick, "Reunion" will be unspooled with the Dionne quintuplets and Jean Hersholt in their original roles . . . Today at 1 o'clock the Variety Club will hold its semi-monthly luncheon in the Willard, with Harry P. Somerville, managing director—of the hotel, not the club—as "king for the day" . . . Noel Coward has been invited as honor guest . . . Loew's Palace and Columbia Theaters have replaced the Metrotone News with a new news reel called "News of the Day," with Jean Paul King supplanting Edwin C. Hill as commentator . . . What young Washington critic was it who wasn't able to take part in Noel Coward's and Gertrude Lawrence's bill at the National Saturday afternoon, because slender as he is, he couldn't get under the bed? . . . Don't be silly . . . That Melcher fellow, of course . . . Apt to be under anybody's bed, anytime . . . Always best to look! . . . Mitzi Mayfair, bless her heart, is coming to town again . . . In Vicente Minnelli's musical business, "The Show Is On," this time, due in the National on Monday, December 7 . . . Mitzi is one of this column's favorite persons . . . And how she can dance . . . Or had you heard about that? . . . A thank-you letter writer, like Ruth Etting, Leo Carrillo, Hobart Bosworth and precious few others in the profession . . . A grand gal . . . Don't say I didn't tell you.

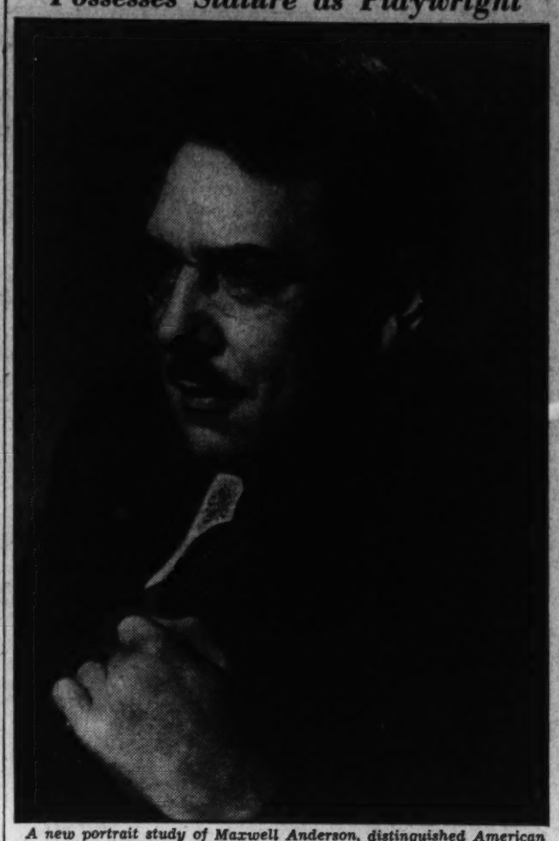
Possesses Stature as Playwright



A new portrait study of Maxwell Anderson, distinguished American playwright, whose newest work, "The Wingless Victory," will be presented by Katharine Cornell for the first time on any stage in the National Theater a week from tomorrow night. Mr. Anderson's "Winterset" was last season's choice of the Critics Circle of New York as the best play of the year—which, incidentally, it was.

Bride-to-Be By Vida Hurst

SYNOPSIS.

Becy Stern is the pretty young secretary of Francis Rhodes, elderly owner of a prosperous paper manufacturing company. Because of her employer's illness, Becky has been working in his home, where she has had to repulse the attentions of Francis Junior, a madcap fourth of her own age. Here also she has met Philip, handsome, embittered architect newhew of Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes, who has just returned after eight years from Mexico City. Philip is an orphan and self-made. He is the object of the envious hatred of Francis Junior, to whom he has been held up as a model.

Regina, Philip's married cousin, and her mother are convinced Philip has returned from Mexico City to win Lelia Meade, beautiful young widow, who had jilted him eight years before, and who shows now that she regrets it. Becky is called on to take letters for Philip and falls in love with him while Francis Junior, made more ardent by Becky's frequent snubs, involves her in several embarrassing situations, which she fears may cause her to lose her job. Though his father does not learn of his infatuation, Philip does, and his attitude toward Becky is influenced by it. She is ready to quit her job, but her father urges her to stay with it as a reorganization in his office may leave him jobless. She does, but the strain is difficult. She does not hide very successfully her interest in Philip, and Francis Junior, Regina and Becky's mother all suspect her secret.

It almost seems that Philip guesses it, too, when his uncle and aunt leave on a cruise ad he arranges to have Becky remain to work for him. So he may keep an eye on Francis Junior, he arranges not to open an office at once, but conduct his business from the elder Rhode's home.

Now go on with the story:

Chapter 7.

From the hour of Mr. Rhodes' heart attack until the day he sailed, confusion reigned in the house on Green street. It was no easy matter to secure the proper accommodations on a boat sailing to Alaska during the summer months. There were wires to be pulled and endless shopping to be done. Through it all, the master of the house was protected by remaining at home, listening to the radio, dictating an occasional letter or reading the detective stories he preferred to any classic in his library.

Once again Becky was busy with details, many of which were outside her regular duties but she was glad to be of service in any way she could. Mr. Rhodes was paying her salary until the day of his departure but after that she would be working for Philip and the prospect of long, quiet days listening to his low voice roused such joyful expectation that no price would have seemed too high to pay for it.

Cheerfully efficient, she helped Mrs. Rhodes with her packing, ran up and down stairs and telephoned, breaking engagements and making appointments. Even Regina's cool insolence did not really hurt. Philip had laughed when his cousin insinuated that it wouldn't look well for them to work together in the house but his eyes had contained a hint of secret excitement as if he, too, were anticipating the situation.

"I must be crazy to think such a thing," Becky told herself. "He isn't seeing as much of Mrs. Meade as he was but that's probably because he feels he should spend more time with his uncle."

His impersonal attitude toward herself was belied by the silent promise of his eyes, or did she imagine it? Becky alternated between flashes of faith in her intuition and longer stretches of common sense. Everything considered, it was a period of mentally holding her breath—as if something wonderful were just around the corner waiting to happen!

Francis, jr., avoided her as he did everyone else. Moody but sober, he came and went from the factory to the house and back again. Impressed for the time being at least by the necessity of not upsetting his father. Only once he gave vent to the resentment which seethed beneath the surface.

"I understand Phil has taken it upon himself to play nursemaid while my parents are away," he stated.

"Who said so?" Becky inquired.

He was standing at the library window as he spoke, gloomily surveying the distant bay.

"Gina!" he replied. "I haven't said anything to my father because I don't want to worry him, but if he thinks I'm going to be responsible to that precious cousin of mine he's greatly mistaken. Once he's gone I shall do as I please, if and when I please."

"I don't doubt it," Becky said, refusing to be disturbed. "But why must you be so childish?"

"Is it childish to want to look after myself at my age?"

"No one would object to your doing so if you would only act your age," she said frankly. "I doubt if your cousin is any more thrilled at the prospect than you are."

Stubby Vinton was telephoning several times a day now.

"Where's Pick, Miss Stern? When will he be home?"

Sometimes she asked rather breathlessly, "Did you tell him to call me? Well, why didn't he?"

"He's sticking to business right now," Becky told her finally, uncertain whether to feel annoyed or sympathetic. "He goes to work every day."

"Hasn't he all summer?"

"Yes, but he's staying there until the factory closes. He isn't even coming home for lunch as he was for awhile."

Becky was thinking fast. If this girl was really as in love with him as she seemed she might be able to do something for him.

"Listen, Miss Vinton," she said, using Philip's words to her. "Why don't you use your influence to help him?"

Obviously flattered, Stubby asked, "How do you mean?"

"Don't drink when you're out together. Try to interest him in other things."

"What?" the girl demanded.

"Oh, picnics in the country on Sunday. Swimming or playing golf."

"I'm surprised that you'd suggest such a thing, knowing him as well as you do," Stubby said in a hard, little voice. "Any time I try to dictate the policy he'll drop me. I'm not the one he's interested in and I know the score as well as you do."

"You're very frank," Backy approved. "Do you know I have an idea he likes you better than either of you realize?"

Unsuppressed eagerness rang in Stubby's reply.

"Honestly, Miss Stern? If I really believed that I'd do anything." She finished disconsolately, "But I'm afraid you're mistaken."

Watching his face that night when she told him that Stubby had telephoned Becky decided the girl was right.

"Why doesn't she leave me alone?" he snapped. "Can't she realize that if I wanted to talk to her I'd call her?"

"She's afraid you're feeling depressed about the trouble at the night club," Becky explained. "She's really very fond of you, Francis!"

He stumped upstairs to his own room and Becky did not know whether he called Stubby or not. But the day before Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes sailed Stubby stopped, embarrassingly close to six o'clock, ostensibly to tell them goodby. Her straw-colored hair was bound by a pale blue ribbon, tied in a bow, which made her seem younger than she was until you looked at her eyes. They were blue as a kitten's, but hard. Her body underneath the white sport suit was thin and undernourished. Her hands were like claws.

Mrs. Rhodes, who had known her all her life, kissed her rather absentmindedly saying, "You must keep Francis, jr., from getting lonesome."

He was joking, of course, but to Becky the question had been pitiful rather than ridiculous.

Francis, jr., arrived just as Stubby was starting home.

"I didn't drive," she explained elaborately, "because my mother wanted the car."

Francis, jr., sighed, "No explanation is necessary, Stubby! I'll take you. You, too, Becky, if you're ready."

"I'm not," Becky said quickly. "Thanks just the same."

She would give the poor child a break. Although she doubted if it would help in the face of Francis, jr.'s, determination to look upon her as a "brat." But when Lelia Meade came up the driveway with Philip in her car Becky told herself she knew exactly how Stubby felt.

"And I'm probably being just as obvious about it as Stubby," she thought.

"SCAN-DOLLS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 27 scenes, featuring Jean Lee, supported by Billy Fields, Conny Ryan, Jess Mack, Billy Ferber, Harry Ebanson, "Birdie" and Johnny Patchen, Georgia Clyne, Evelyn Whitney, Conchita and the Dancing Bryanettes. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

While one may miss the effulgent glory of Miss Ann Corio this week, "Scan-Dolls," nevertheless, offers plenty for which the avid burlesque fan may offer pre-season thanksgiving. If it was for nothing else than to welcome back Billy Fields and Jean Lee, the week would be amply worth while. For, with the devastating comedy of the former and the dazzling platonic beauty of the latter, there are all the essentials for another grand show.

But that is not all. On the comic side is Harry Ebanson, who knows what the business is all about, and with Jess Mack and Conny Ryan, a couple of the wheel's better straight men, to act as foils, there is everything that might be desired for fast-moving, hilarious comedy.

A "Dancing Zulu."

On the distaff side there is the "Dancing Zulu," Conchita; the brunette charmer, Evelyn Whitney; the titian Georgia Clyne, and Miss Lee to furnish those attributes of feminine pulchritude without which no burlesque performance would be complete.

For specialties Billy Ferber and Mr. Ryan raise their voices in song and "Birdie" and Johnny Patchen do some fast stepping, especially to Von Suppe's "Poet and Peasant." Mention should be made of Mr. Ferber's soprano saxophone version of Oley Speaks' "Sylvia."

One should also mention the tabloid revue, a la minstrelsy, with which the first act ends. Here almost all the principals contribute to the jollification. Throughout the program the Dancing Bryanettes commendably strut their stuff.

Late Pictures Are Appraised By Coast Sage

Tabloid Vignettes Hot Off Wire Sizzle In From Hollywood Studios.

By Henry Sutherland.

Hollywood, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Picketing the preview parade:

"PENNIES FROM HEAVEN" (Columbia). Bing Crosby in a pleasant, but unimportant little picture. Except for Crosby's mellow voice and Trumpeteer Louis Armstrong's swell night club clowning, "Pennies" is hardly adult entertainment.

Faint story has Crosby a lute-twanging modern troubadour, becoming protector of Fellows and her grandfather (Donald Meek) as a favor to a condemned killer while innocently in prison on a false charge.

Madge Evans, the love interest, plays a social worker first intent on installing the little girl in an orphanage, and then on getting her out of it.

In his role as protector of Fellows, Crosby starts a night club in a haunted house, which proves a grandiose flop, defies death in a carnival stunt that lands him in a hospital, and sings mellifluously in backyards.

Armstrong figures in the night club sequence and his alternate trumpeting, husky singing and mugging are worth the price of admission alone. His number, "Skeleton in the Closet," has what it takes.

Crosby's theme song, "Pennies From Heaven," is already getting a heavy plug on radio programs.

"CAN THIS BE DIXIE?" (20th Century-Fox.) It can't. This one is strictly for young admirers of child actress Jane Withers and the No. 2 spot on double bills.

In a feeble plot, Withers and mournful Slim Summerville play medicine show troupers who come to the rescue of a "Southern Colonel," Claude Gillingwater, who has seen better days.

With the aid of a horse race, an amateur radio act and turning the proud old family mansion into a roadhouse, they restore the Colonel's fallen fortunes and promote the romance of Helen Wood and Thomas Beck, Donald Cook completing the triangle.

Musical numbers: "Uncle Tom's Cabin Is a Cabaret Now," "Does You Wanna Go to Heaven?" "Pick, Pick Pickaninny," and "It's Julep Time in Dixieland," all by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst.

"MADY HOLIDAY." (Metro-Goldyn-Mayer.) A mystifier of the filler-in type in which Edmund Lowe does the detecting and Elissa Landi and Zasu Pitts the gasping.

Levity with which the picture moves seems slightly out of place among the fake corpses planted by Landi and ZaSu Pitts the gasping, writer and real ones manufactured by diamond thieves, but fortunately the picture is so incredible no sensitive soul will be offended.

"THE PLOT THICKENS." (RKO-Radio.) But neither plot nor production is thick enough to merit more than the "B" class. James Gleason and SaZu Pitts are chief engineers in this weak comedy melodrama.

Action revolves about a theft of a Benvenuto Cellini metal masterpiece, complicated by murder, policemen and the true love.

Airline Reports New Income Peak

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., today announced it would offer rights to stockholders and reported the highest revenues on record for the three months ended September 30.

Rights will be offered shareholders to subscribe to 207,711 shares of common at the rate of one-third of a share for each share held. The price has not been set. Proceeds will be used for equipment.

Third quarter net income was 139,880, equal to 22 cents a share, compared with $70,140, or 11 cents a share, in the like period a year ago. Third quarter operating revenues were $1,737,036 against $1,615,995 in the same period last year.

Updike Waits Trial As Reckless Driver

Former Representative Ralph E. Updike, of Indiana, was free today under $500 bond awaiting a jury trial on a charge of reckless driving.

Updike was arrested by Policeman Maurice C. Barco, of the Third Precinct, after an automobile said to have been operated by the former Representative was involved in an accident at Twenty-sixth and I streets northwest Friday night.

Arraigned in Police Court Saturday, Updike pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial. Judge John P. McMahon continued the case for assignment.

According to police, Updike's car struck a truck operated by William H. Richards, 24, of Hyattsville, Md., careened across the street and tore a porch off a house at 2600 I street.

MEET CAPTAIN DAVIS

Martin Brent Davis, 16, 510 Sixth street southwest, has recently been appointed a team captain in The Post chapter of the Newspaper Boys of America. Martin attends St. John's High School, where he has been on the honor roll every month and he has received a red, white and blue pin for the best drilled cadet. His hobbies are collecting biological specimens and model making. Martin likes his Post route because he can help his parents by earning some of his own money, and he feels that the route is helping him physically and is teaching him many valuable business methods. All Post carriers are members of the Newspaper Boys of America, a national organization which trains boys to be better carriers and better citizens.

Wildest Grid Year Draws To Close

Yale's Comeback Over Princeton Feature's Day's Contest.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—College football's dizziest campaign in years today faces the semifinal stage, with championship conflicts still to be settled, conclusively, in six of the eight major zones of rivalry.

Here are the current outlines of the scramble for touchdowns, titles and gate receipts:

National Leadership—Northwestern, Big Ten titleholder, and its main victim, Minnesota, still pacing the big parade, with Fordham, Pittsburgh and Louisiana State shaping up as the teams most likely to round out this week's top five in the Associated Press ranking poll.

Washington Ahead.

Rose Bowl—Washington, the No. 1 choice of the West Coast, pending final returns, with Fordham, Alabama and Louisiana State rated the outstanding prospects, about in that order, for the call to the big money match at Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Sugar Bowl—Pittsburgh a likely entry, with Marquette an alternative choice, for the third annual post-season affair at New Orleans against either Alabama or Louisiana State.

East—Fordham the only remaining major unbeaten team, with Pittsburgh finishing strong and Dartmouth leading the "Ivy League."

Midwest — Northwestern, undisputed Big Ten champion, sharing unbeaten united honors with Marquette; Nebraska leading the Big Six with Kansas State now challenging the battered Cornhuskers.

Duke and L. S. U. Lead.

South—Duke and Louisiana State in command of the Southern and Southeastern Conference races, respectively, with all indications pointing to title-clinching conquests next week. Arkansas pacing the dizzy Southwest race, with anything likely to happen.

Far West—Washington on top of the Pacific Coast Conference, and assured at least a tie, pending a Thanksgiving Day test against Washington State. Utah State in undisputed possession of the Rocky Mountain title for the first time in 15 years.

Without much debate, the plaudits in today's roundup belong largely to old Eli Yale for its sensational comeback conquest over Princeton, 26 to 23. The startling achievements of the boys in blue, led by their resourceful captain, Larry Kelley, stood out against a background of fine performances, including noteworthy intersectional victories for Notre Dame, Pittsburgh, Minnesota and Marquette.

Recalls Albie Booth.

Yale rallied to win from the Tigers after trailing by 0-16. In the second quarter, Kelley, who caught the touchdown pass that upset Princeton's powerhouse two years ago, was a dynamic figure in a thriller that recalled Yale's famous 33-33 tie with Dartmouth when Al-

Packers Romp Over Dodgers By 38 to 7

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The powerful Green Bay Packers ran wild here today to rout the Brooklyn Dodgers, 38 to 7, in a National Professional Football League game before 25,325 paying customers at Ebbets Field.

The Packers varied a smashing running attack with a dazzling aerial offensive to score two touchdowns in the second period and three in the third after warming up with a field goal in the first.

The luckless Dodgers got no nearer the Packer goal than the 33-yard line until the last heat, when they drove 60 yards for a touchdown to escape a shutout after passing up another scoring opportunity earlier in the period when Green Bay intercepted a pass on the Packer 9-yard stripe to nip a 70-yard Dodger advance.

Paul Engebretson, former Northwestern star, began the Brooklyn massacre with a 22-yard field goal in the first.

The first of two Packer touchdowns in the second came when Ernie Smith blocked a Dodger kick on the 17 and Arnold Herber passed to Don Hutson over the goal line. Smith added the point. Later in the quarter, the visitors took a Brooklyn punt on their 35 and passed their way to another score, with Herber again hurling the touchdown, Dart to Hutson.

Frederick A.C. Drubbed, 49 to 0, by Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 15.—The Frederick Athletic Club lost its first game of the season today to the Baltimore Orioles of the Dixie League, 49 to 0. The locals were outclassed from the outset, when the Orioles scored two minutes after the opening kick-off, when Wally Masters traveled 65 yards off tackle for a touchdown.

Gore's 44-Yard Field Goal in Final Quarter Wins; Phils Stopped Cold.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 15.—The Los Angeles Bulldogs defeated the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Professional Football League here today, 10 to 7, when Fullback Gordon Gore kicked a 44-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Outrushing the visitors 182 yards to 55, the Bulldogs, probationary members of the league, stopped the Eagles' running attack cold.

The Bulldogs scored shortly after the opening kick-off, when Quarterback Frank Greene passed 51 yards to Ike Frankian, right end, on the Eagles' 4-yard line. Ed (Crazy Legs) Stark, outstanding ground-tackle for the touchdown. Greene gainer of the day, skirted right kicked the extra point.

The Eagles tied shortly before the half ended. "Stumpy" Thomason, halfback, reeled off 14 yards to the Bulldog 27, Dave Smulker added 4 and then passed to Ed Manske, left end, for the tally. Hank Reese, center, converted.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 15.—Chicago's powerful Bears overwhelmed the Boston Red Skins, 26-0, before 12,000 at Fenway Park today to remain tied with the Green Bay Packers for the lead in the Western division of the National Pro Football League.

Only twice during the game did the home forces manage to get beyond midfield and they were unable to make a single scoring gesture. The Bears scored in every period and Jack Manders placekicked his sixth and seventh consecutive field goals of the season in the second and fourth periods, from the 20 and 30-yard lines.

Hewitt Scores First.

Bill Hewitt opened the Chicago scoring by carrying a 45-yard aerial tossed by Bernie Masterson, into the Boston end during the first five minutes of play. Bronko Nagurski crashed over from the 3-yard line to climax a 53-yard march in the third session and Manders registered the third touchdown on a 30-yard end sweep in the finale, shortly before he booted his second field goal.

Manders also converted two extra points to boost his personal total to 14 points. A poor pass from the center ruined the placement he attempted after he scored his touchdown.

Yankees Beaten, 12-7, By Boston Shamrocks

New York, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—The Boston Shamrocks smashed to a 12-to-7 victory over the New York Yankees before 16,000 spectators in an American League football game here today.

The Beantowners scored their first touchdown when Zyntell intercepted a pass by Irwin and ran 60 yards for a tally in the first quarter. The second score came in the third period when the Shamrocks marched down the field 75 yards in six plays for a touchdown, Zapustas snagging a 20-yard pass across the goal line.

121 to Start P.G.A. Golf Title Play

36 Holes of Medal Play Start Tourney; Takes 64 to Qualify.

By Dave Herman,
By a Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 15.—Dress rehearsal for the national professional golf championship ended yesterday afternoon. Tomorrow morning the curtain goes up for the title play to start, with few of the great golfers missing from the field of 121 who qualified in sections. It is a field of the world's best, playing in what today is unquestionably the world's toughest tournament to win, and on one of the world's great golf courses, long, testing but fair. The course measures 6,879 yards, and if the committee in charge of placing the discs feels disposed to stretch it out to maximum length it will go 7,100 yards at least.

Most notable absentee from tomorrow's starting list is Olin Dutra, one of the former winners of the P. G. A. title as well as of the National Open title. Pressure of business kept him home. Al Watrous, another of the leaders, was unable to come because of illness.

64 Holes to Qualify.

But in the field assembled here are so many who have won the major honors in national or international play that the absence of even three or four great artists of the game occasions only passing comment. The one hope of taking the title back to the Washington district is Leo Walper, who has been playing satisfactorily in practice.

The system of championship play is 18 holes medal play today, 18 more tomorrow, 64 to qualify. On Wednesday there will be two rounds of match play, at 18 holes, after which all matches will be at 36 holes until the final next Sunday. It is a long, hard grind and this time will be the more so because of the nature of the course, which has more wooden shots than almost any course any of the professionals have played and necessitates a mastery of long iron play, as well as the ability to pitch and putt. Physical condition, therefore, will count as well as shot-making ability.

High Scores Seen.

All sorts of guesses were being made here tonight, by the contestants, as to what will make the grade in the two medal rounds. Their guesses range all the way from 152 to 160 strokes and if they encounter a wind like that which swept the course today for the final practice, the 160 probably will be much nearer correct. Those scores under 70 which have been so prolific in the practice rounds since the course was opened Friday suddenly shrank to meager proportions when they faced today's stiff currents.

What a difference this wind made can well be exampled by citing the home hole, 423 yards, played directly against the wind. With a favoring wind, or a zephyrless day, that hole is nothing more than a drive and five to eight-iron for the lusty hitters. Today there were scarcely more than a handful of players who could get home with a drive and longest iron in the bag, while it is safe to say that a majority in the practice field only made the edge of the green or fell short with two full woods.

Among those who did get home, to provide a spectacular finish to a most interesting match that gave a foretaste of the excitement to come during the week was the present P. G. A. champion, Johnny Revolta. He and Tony Manero, the National Open champion, were playing against Walter Hagen, five times winner of the P. G. A. title and of other titles too numerous to mention, and Gene Sarazen, three times the P. G. A. highlight.

Hagen and Sarazen started badly, two down at the end of the first three holes, with a sizable gallery trooping along, but Hagen got one back at the fifth, he and his partner squared at the eleventh and Sarazen put his side one up with a birdie at the twelfth, a lead retained up to the time they played the home hole. There Revolta, lion-hearted, one of the prime favorites to retain his title, walloped a second shot home and sank a long putt for the birdie that squared. "As far as I'm concerned," commented the jocular Hagen, "it was an eagle. That hole was a par-5 today, for me at any rate."

Hackney, Diegel Shine.

The great scores of the final day's practice were by two veterans, Clarence Hackney and Leo Diegel, the latter twice winner of the P. G. A. Hackney, one of the real old-timers of the pro ranks, had a smashing 68, something to really brag about under the prevailing conditions. Diegel was just a stroke behind him. Jack Forrester had a 70, Ky Laffoon a 73 along with Harold Sanderson, but by and large it was noticeable that the scores which the incoming players were mentioning ran mostly to the higher 70's.

During the three days of practice, however, especially the first two when the winds were light, there were deeds of wonderful savor, to whet the curiosity of the galleries expected during the week. The outstanding single incident of practice naturally was the hole-in-one by Ray Mangrum, merely because an ace always provides a thrill. But far more brilliant than anything else was the 30 for the first nine holes recorded Friday by Jimmy Hines, of Long Island, one of the men who may shine in this tournament. Darkness cut short, at the thirteenth hole, a round which savored of downright sensationalism. Then there was the amazing best-ball of 59 by the group of four players which included Ray Mangrum and his hole-in-one.

Sage Hagen Advises Youngest P. G. A. Player

Giants Handed 38-to-0 Defeat By Lions

New Yorkers Take Worst Beating in Career as Fumbles Figure.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 15. — The Detroit Lions rode rough shod over the New York Giants in a National Professional League football game here today, winning, 38 to 0. It was the worst defeat in the history of the Giants.

Taking advantage of Giants' fumbles, runs through the New York line and around its ends and completing most of the few passes attempted, the Lions showed 18,000 fans much of the power which brought them a league championship in 1935.

The Giants exhibited none of their vaunted offensive during the first three quarters. Their drive in the fourth quarter, from their own 5-yard line to the Lions' 10, was stopped when Ritchhart, Lion center, intercepted a pass from Leemans on his own 8-yard line and galloped 92 yards for a touchdown.

Clark and Caddel both got touchdowns. Clark drop-kicked three points after touchdown and drop-kicked a field goal in the second period from his 25-yard line. Presnell place-kicked two other extra points.

Until the last period, the Giants had gained only 44 yards by both passing and rushing and never threatened the Lion goal.

Hobart Back Tops Eastern Scorers

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Although his team had no game scheduled, Fred King, star ball carrier of the undefeated Hobart team, easily held his place as high scorer in Eastern football during the past week.

A total of 75 points, scored on 11 touchdowns and 9 extra points in 7 games gave King a margin of 7 points over Barney Marcus, of Bates, who completed his season with a four-touchdown splurge against Colby on Armistice Day. Marcus wound up with 11 touchdowns and 2 points after for a 68-point total, giving him second place by a 2-point margin over Joe Szur, of Canisius, and Daddario, of Wesleyan, who had 66-point totals up through Saturday.

Szur's total did not include Sunday's game with Niagara, costing him a chance to go higher as Daddario made four touchdowns to tie.

Ken Sandbach, Princeton's quarterback, took an undisputed place as the East's leading place-kicker when he booted his second field goal of the season against Yale and converted 2 points after touchdowns to bring his total in that department to 15.

Italy, Nazis Play Friendship Game; It Ends in 2-2 Tie

Berlin, Nov. 15 (AP).—Germany and Italy played a 2-to-2 tie today in a soccer game scheduled "to cement the nations' friendship."

A crowd of 110,000 packed the Olympic Stadium and a nation-wide radio hookup carried the game to listeners in other parts of the country. All other sport throughout Germany was canceled for the day as 67 special trains carried fans to Berlin.

Germany led, 2 to 1, at half time after fighting off a powerful Italian attack but Ferrari, speedy Italian forward, outran the entire German team to tie the count after ten minutes of the second period.

Race Officials Plan National Agency

Meeting of Operators on Friday to Seek U. S. Co-operation.

By the Associated Press

Miami, Nov. 15.—Practically every major track in the country will be represented at the meeting of American race-track operators in New York Friday, according to advices of State racing commissioners.

The meeting, called at the suggestion of the commissioners, will be for the purpose of organizing an agency through which the tracks can be represented and promote their welfare on a national scale.

Those who have indicated they will be present are Matt Winn, who will represent the American Turf Association, which controls Churchill Downs, Latonia and Lincoln Fields; George H. Bull, Saratoga; Charles F. Adams, Suffolk Downs; Joseph E. Widener, Hialeah and Belmont Parks; Albert Sabath, Hawthorne; Walter O'Hara, Narragansett Park; William V. Dwyer, Tropical Park; Tom McKoy, jr., Rockingham Park; Fran H. Reitman, Epsom Downs; Edward J. Brennan, Hagerstown; W. B. Millard, jr., Ak-Sarben, Omaha; Raymond R. Russell, Alamo Downs; Edward P. Kilroe, Jamaica; C. W. Baker, jr., Delaware Park, now under construction at Wilmington; John E. Cowdin, Aqueduct; James Butler, Empire City and Laurel; Matt L. Daiger, Pimlico; Charles E. Lehr, Detroit; James C. Thornton, Agawam; Clem McCarthy, Bay Meadows, and Edwin James Brown, State of Washington tracks.

Chicago Cards Win Over Pirates, 14-6

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP).—Chicago's lowly Cardinals won their second game of the National Professional Football League season today, defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 14 to 6, at Wrigley Field. It was the second win in nine starts for the Chicagoans this year.

George Grosvenor, whose brilliant play was responsible for the Cards' first victory of the campaign a week ago, again paced his mates. Seconds after a poor Pirate punt had rolled out at the Pittsburgh 20, Grosvenor wheeled 9 yards around end to score for Chicago in the opening period, Kellogg converted.

In the second period Blazine intercepted a Pirate pass in Pittsburgh territory and Vaughan hurled a 38-yard touchdown pass to Smith for the second Cardinal score. Kellogg again made the try for point.

Favored Tars Start Practice For Army

Middies to Be Choice for First Time in 15 Years for Next Week's Tilt.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 15.—With all other games out of the way and in the best of spirits after its victories over Notre Dame and Harvard, the Navy football squad, under Head Coach Tom Hamilton and his aides, will start tomorrow with the Army game as its only objective.

For the first time in 15 years, the Navy will enter the game, which is to be played November 28 in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, something of a favorite, based on its last two victories and Army's defeats by Colgate and Notre Dame.

Outstanding backs on the service teams are Bill Ingram, son of a Navy captain, and Monk Meyer, son of an Army colonel, the assimilated ranks of the two being the same. Both teams, however, are unusually equipped with running backs, Antrim, Schmidt, Reimann and Thomas being added to the Navy's list, while the Army has Craig, Ryan, Kasper and others.

With powerful and well-trained lines and well equipped as to reserves, the game promises to be one of the best exhibitions of football the service schools have ever contested.

While the Army team has the advantage of about a year in average age of players, the weight advantage trends somewhat to the Navy, and neither team has any players who were outstanding at other colleges before entering the service school.

The Navy squad is in remarkably good condition as the season tapers, and care will be taken during the next two weeks to have all players in top physical form. Duke Ferrara, powerful tackle, who was injured in the Notre Dame game, did not play against Harvard, but will be ready to get into full practice during the coming week.

Victory First Over Rivals Since '23

Passes Bring Two Scores in Opening Quarter; Blocked Kick Aids.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—University of Santa Clara maintained an undefeated, untied football record today by defeating its oldest rival, St. Mary's College, 19 to 0. The annual classic, attracting a capacity crowd of 60,000 fans, saw Santa Clara score twice in the opening period on passes and chalk up a third touchdown in the third quarter on a recovered blocked punt.

It was Santa Clara's first victory over St. Mary's since 1923.

The triumph strengthened the Broncs' claim to rescognition as one of the Nation's leading elevens. Their victims include Stanford and Alabama Polytechnic.

Santa Clara gained to St. Mary's 34 on punt exchanges shortly after the kick-off and quickly clinched victory. Lefthalf Gomez passed 26 yards to Lefthalf Derosa and two plays later Derosa passed over the goal to Gomez.

Gaels Rally in Second Half.

A few minutes later Fullback Pavelko recovered a St. Mary's fumble on the latter's 21, and from the 8-yard line Gomez passed to Left End Finney behind the goal.

Soon after the third period opened, Santa Clara capitalized on a blocked punt to score again. Right Guard Rodgers catching the ball to run 5 yards across the goal.

Although badly outclassed in the first half, St. Mary's outplayed its ancient foe in the last two periods, chalking up nine first downs against none for Santa Clara.

On two desperate attempts in the final quarter, the Gaels charged 67 yards to Santa Clara's 2-yard line and later to the 13, only to lose the ball on incomplete passes into the end zone.

The line-ups:

Santa Clara.	Position.	St. Mary's.
Finney	L.E.	Timm
Artoe	L.T.	Dennerlein
Bazil	L.G.	Kordick
Dougherty	Center	Conles
Rodgers	R.G.	Jorge
McGee	R.T.	Wilkin
F.Smith	R.E.	Gianoni
Falaschi	Q.B.	Ferris
Gomez	L.H.	Groux
DeRosa	R.H.	Falkenstein
Pavelko	F.B.	Maxham

Santa Clara	13	0	6	0	—19
St. Mary's	0	0	0	0	—0

35 Rival Grads Listen Here by Leased Wire

Great was the satisfaction among Santa Clara Alumni here last night after the Broncs had trounced St. Mary's, 19 to 0. Great also was the gloom among St. Mary's Alumni who gathered with Santa Clara grads to listen to a special play-by-play account of the game over a special leased wire.

Among the jubilant Santa Clara rooters in Washington was Cyril Smith, Santa Clara, '34, who was host at 1109 Sixteenth street northwest to 35 grads from the two Catholic schools on the Pacific Slope. The Santa Clara grads had much to cheer about as the victory came in from the playing field 3,000 miles away, where 60,000 more were seeing the spectacle.

Scott Hopes to Convert Mascia Into "Stepping Stone" Tonight

Cowboy Aims At Higher Things

Two Recent Losses Bring Fighter to Brink of Desperation.

By Bill McCormick.

Cowboy Howard Scott, lightweight champion of the Dsitrict, and Pete Mascia, self-styled "best club fighter in the world," will engage in 10 rounds of slam-bang at Turner's Arena tonight.

The erstwhile cow prodder will attempt to convert Mascia into a stepping stone, upon which to prance back into local favor he knew before being knocked out by Chino Alvarez and whipped by California Joe Rivers.

Mascia, with everything to gain and nothing to lose, but who wouldn't care if the situation were reversed, probably will fight his usual carefree battle against the former bovine puncher.

Mascia was nosed out by Pedro Montanez, Lou Ambers and Al Roth. He holds victories over Leonard, DelGenio, Eddie Brink, Jose Santos and Joe Doherty, among others.

Since coming here from Texas some six months ago, Scott has greatly altered his style. From a very careful counter-fighter he has become a rather wild swinger who depends greatly upon a right-hand punch. This change in style was in a large measure responsible for his being knocked out by Alvarez, who nailed him in the final round, and for his loss to Rivers.

Has Beaten Rivers.

While still employing his counter-fighting style, Scott was able to beat Rivers—not once but twice. It was only after he became reckless that Joe was able to hit him hard enough to slow him down to his speed. While the change in style undoubtedly has made Howard easier to hit, it has increased his ring worth by making him a more spectacular performer.

A break in the preliminary card was announced yesterday. Mike Danner, who was scheduled to fight Buddy Scott, received a cut eye in training and that bout has been canceled.

Four six-rounders will comprise the supporting card.

Country Boy Baggett, a hill billy importation of Gabe Menendez, will make his local debut against one Rusty Baker, of Baltimore. Al Narisco, who looked great in a recent bout against Young Raspi, will tackle Vincent Solthers. Joey Straiges, who bids fair to become a local favorite, will engage wily old Jim Tramberia, and Young Palmer will face Lou DeMario.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (Joe Louis) to G (Jack Sharkey).

MAIN EVENT—Howard Scott, Washington, vs. Pete Mascia, New York, lightweights; 10 rounds. Rated C. Pete is described as a great club fighter. He'll need all his clubs when he faces the Cowboy, who is cocked and primed for this one. We like Scott.

PRELIMINARIES—Country Boy Baggett, Georgia, vs Rusty Baker, Baltimore; light-heavyweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Baggett will prove a sensation, especially against the Rusty one. The Country Boy by a knockout.

Al Narisco, Camden, N. J., vs. Vincent Solthers, Baltimore, welterweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Narisco with ease.

Young Palmer, Camden, vs. Lou De Mario, Baltimore, welterweights; 6 rounds. Rated D. Palmer.

Minor Loop Votes Night Baseball, Chain System

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP).—The American Association is going in for more night games and a modified system of "chain store" farm clubs in its 1937 baseball program.

Association club owners, meeting here today in an informal session, decided that all the eight teams next season would support some class B clubs as a move toward developing improved talent. Formerly the association members backed class D outfits.

Log-Rolling Champ In Exhibition Here

Actual log rolling, not the political type, will be seen for the first time in Washington at the Shoreham Pool tomorrow afternoon. The exhibitionists will be Henry Delyea, world's champion, and his No. 1 challenger, Harry Wilson.

Both the champion and his challenger are from Couer d'Alene, Idaho. The champion has been a log roller since he was 13. Wilson, who is only 20 and a lumberjack, also began developing his skill at 13.

Both Delyea and Wilson appear in the motion picture "Come and Get It," which will open at Loew's Palace next Friday. The Shoreham exhibition is sponsored by Lansburgh's Department Store, where tickets for the event are available without cost to the first 400 persons requesting them.

Hornsby to Get 'Full Support' Of Owners

'Rajah' Henceforth to Be 'Czar' of Browns, Also Gets Pay Boost.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—Manager Rogers Hornsby is "tops" with the new owners of the St. Louis Browns.

Donald Barnes and Bill DeWitt, president and vice president of the new organization which has acquired the baseball club, came out of a long conference with the Rajah today and announced:

"We intend to give Hornsby our support 100 per cent."

Hornsby will sign a new contract as soon as the Barnes syndicate completes its purchase contract with the Phil Ball estate. Under new terms, Hornsby will relinquish his right to 25 per cent of the club's profits and receive a salary boost.

To Save Complete Charge.

"Hornsby will have complete charge of the Browns on the field and whatever disciplinary measures he deems necessary to conduct and keep the team at its best morale and playing strength will receive whole-hearted approval by us," said Barnes.

The old Rajah, who led National League batters several seasons, said he would sign a playing-manager contract, but if he found he was "not up to major league standards," he would bench himself to make way for an active player.

"We've gone over the entire playing personnel of the team," DeWitt said, "and we have an understanding of the merits and demerits of all the players. We've laid some plans for 1937, but, of course, it's too early to divulge them at this time."

Southeast A.C. Deals Hessick First Defeat

The Southeast A. C. dealt the Hessick Coalmen their first loss of the season before more than 2,000 fans on the Monument Grounds yesterday.

A 70-yard dash by Cuozzo just as the first half ended produced the initial score and the winners added another in the fourth quarter when Hans plunged over from the 3-yard stripe after a sustained drive of 50 yards.

3 Titleholders Head Nation's Ring Card

Ambus, McLarnin to Meet Friday; Steele Faces Mike Belloise.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 15.—Three titleholders and one former champion headline an attractive national boxing program this week.

The top event will bring together Lou Ambers, light king, and Jimmy McLarnin, former welterweight champion in a ten-round nontitle affair at Madison Square Garden Friday. Ambers, who took the 135-pound crown from Tony Canzoneri about two months ago, lost his only fight since then to Eddie Cool.

Freddie Steele, middleweight monarch, and Mike Belloise, recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission as featherweight titleholder, also appear in over-the-weight bouts. Steele tackles Gus Lesnevich, of Hackensack, N. J., in a ten-rounder at Los Angeles Tuesday, while Belloise meets Sonny Valdez, of Tucson, Ariz., in another ten at Hollywood Friday.

The program:

Monday—At New York, Aldo Spoldi, Italy, vs. Ritchie Fontaine, Montana, lightweights, 10; at Newark, N. J., Buddy Ryan, Roselle Park, N. J., vs. Mello Bettina, Jersey City, heavyweights, 10, and Tom Chester, New York, vs. Vincent Funk, Weehawken, N. J., light-heavyweights, 6; at Miami, Fla., Johnny Cruz, Havana, vs. Snag Trowbridge, West Palm Beach, Fla., lightweights, 10, and George Esrick, Baltimore, Md., vs. Johnny Dean, Kannapolis, N. C., welterweights, 8; at Boston, Mass., Charley Gomer, Baltimore, vs. Lou Lombardi, Jersey City, lightweights, 10; at Bridgeport, Conn., Leroy Brown, Charleston, S. C., vs. Carl Knowles, New York, light-heavyweights, 10, and Johnny Lasinski, Meriden, Conn., vs. John Duarte, Providence, R. I., light-heavyweights, 10; at Chicago, Pat Silver, New York, vs. Harry Thomas, Eagle Bend, Minn., heavyweights, 10.

Tuesday—At Los Angeles, Freddie Steele, Tacoma, Wash., vs. Gus Lesnevich, Hackensack, N. J., middleweights, 10 (nontitle); at St. Louis, Henry Armstrong, St. Louis, vs. Joesy Alcanter, Kansas City, featherweights, 10; Midget Wolgast, Philadelphia, vs. Everette Rightmire, Sioux City, Iowa, featherweights, 10, and Frankie Wallace, Cleveland, vs. Pat Kissinger, Kansas City, lightweights, 10.

Washington Pros Beat Celtics, 9-7, Take 2d Place in Dixie Loop

Benner Wins Game After Being Goat

In a thrill-a-minute game that matched any of the tear-jerking "melerdrammers" of the gay nineties in suspense and breathless moments, the Washington Pros scored a 9-to-6 victory over the Alexandria Celtics before a slim crowd of approximately 1,000 fans yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The victory gave Washington undisputed possession of third place in the Dixie League.

It was the District eleven's second triumph over their neighboring rivals this year, but for a time it looked as though the Celts were going to square accounts for they were the first to score early in the second quarter. Willis Benner, whose perfect placement from the 20-yard line later in the same period clinched matters for the Pros, was indirectly responsible for the touchdown, fumbling a punt deep in his own territory. Kennen recovered for Alexandria on Washington's 26-yard line.

Kinsey Jones, whose passing and ball carrying were features of the losers' play, completed a pass to Ab Wright for 21 yards and first down on the 5-yard line, where Jones personally took matters in hand. He scored through the line, going the distance in three plunges, and Bill Parrish added the extra point.

Pros Stage Rally.

But this turn of events failed to remove any of the starch from the Pros make-up. At a matter of fact it only whetted their appetite for victory and before time was called for tea the host eleven had scored their nine points, and as later events proved, won the ball game.

ed the ball moving toward the

Dick Nelson and Lee Carlin started the ball moving toward the Celtics' goal line with a couple of sweeping end runs that brought the Pros to their own 40-yard line. Here Nelson faded back and chucked a 25-yard pass to Carlin, who galloped another 35-yards for the touchdown. Benner's placement for what would have been the tying point was wide.

Alexandria gained possession of the ball deep in Washington's territory again not long after when Benner committed his second fumble of the afternoon. But their goalward drive was interrupted by Genie Augusterfer, who gathered in one of Jones' passes and ran it back to the Celtics' 10-yard line, where Leo Roskowski nailed him from behind.

Nelson and Carlin hit the line for no gain before Benner dropped back and redeemed himself and the Pros with a neat placement that sailed smartly over the cross-bar, blasting Alexandria's hopes of victory.

The Celtics threatened again late in the final period when Jones' passes started dropping into the waiting arms of Ab Wright, but an alert Washington secondary and the timekeeper's fowling piece prevented a score.

Wednesday night's scheduled game between Washington and Norfolk, which was to have been played at the Stadium, has been postponed until December 13, and will be played at Seat Pleasant.

Washington, Police Boys Clubs Win Loop Games

The Washington Boys Club defeated the St. Martin's Boy Club, 12-0, and the Police Boys Club, No. 5, nosed out the Northeast Boys Club, 6-0, yesterday, to go into a tie for first place in the Police Boys Club 135-pound football league.

The passing combination of J. Zannelotti to H. Zannelotti completed two 30-yard tosses, one in the first and one in the third quarter to give the Washington Boys Club their victory at Griffith Stadium. On Monument diamond No. 2 the Police Boys won in the third period when Halfback DiCarlo spun over the goal line.

Cardozo, Armstrong Clash for Colored Title

With Dunbar eliminated from competition by scholastic difficulties of the majority of its squad, Cordozo High School will clash with Armstrong this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Walker Stadium for the colored city high school championship of the current season.

Armstrong has been installed as the favorite, although not with as much confidence as in previous seasons. The game is expected to afford many thrills, as the Cardozo eleven has proven its mettle in previous clashes of the year, and will resort to its bag of tricks in the endeavor to win its first championship.

Covert, Babcock Take Argyle Turkey Shoot

W. A. Covert with 81-16—65, and C. J. Babcock with 89-21—68, were uncontested winners in the Argyle Golf Club turkey tourney over the week-end, while R. F. Posson, with 85-16—69, won in a draw from Sidney Sherwood and W. R. Sobers for the third bird. Sherwood had 87-18—69. Sobers shot 79-10—69.

Hoya-Maryland Battle Heads Local Card

Lickings Taken by Both Teams Should Add to Quality of the Game.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Washington's one and only football classic, Georgetown vs. Maryland, tops a lean card this week, vieing with the Catholic University-Western Maryland battle for patronage. George Washington will be idle, resting up before its Turkey Day debate with West Virginia.

Although both Hoyas and Terrapins met defeat last week, it is no indication that their third modern series meeting will be a mediocre exhibition of football. On the other hand, the losses probably will result in a better and more exciting duel.

Georgetown's downfall can be laid to one big item, not two or three, as most fans are willing to believe, and that is the secondary's inability to adjust itself to Manhattan's clever passing attack. Scout reports indicated that the Jaspers relied on power plays between the tackles for their gains, and Jack Hagerty, consequently, schooled his men to meet and stop this type of offense.

But the big Green eleven turned up with a smart passing attack that clicked with magical ease. It didn't look so magical or so mysterious from the press box as Georgetown refused to abandon its diamond, or 2-2-1 defense with passes being thrown and caught with monotonous regularity by the eventual winners.

The Hoyas, still rated below Maryland among the local teams, will enter Saturday's game on the long end of the wagering, and with an even dozen men on the bench with injuries their chances aren't enhanced any. Maryland's defeat can be blamed on overconfidence, more or less, and you can bet your bottom dollar they won't feel the same way this week.

Mrs. McCarty Victor In Beaver Dam Golf

Mrs. J. J. McCarty won the women's handicap golf event and a turkey at Beaver Dam Country Club yesterday, shooting a 109 for a net of 92. Her handicap was 17. Second low net was Mrs. Jack Guck with 130-33—97.

Three were tied for third, Mrs. R. Carl Mitchell, with 110—11—99; Mrs. Charles Ranger, with 131-32—99, and Mrs. C. E. McGowan, with 135-36—99. Mrs. C. E. Purdy's 103 won low gross honors.

Bowers Collegians Win Over Eckington, 13-12

The Bowers Collegians withstood a belated rally by Eckington A. C. and staggered to a 13-12 victory yesterday at Magruder Park. The collegians scored twice in the first period on thrusts by Bealor and Baldwin and Kidwell, former Eastern High star, insured victory by tallying the extra point on a line smash.

Pete Bogan, an all-high halfback at Tech several years ago, led the Eckington rally which fell one point short of a tie.

Can Lose Games And Draw 50,000 Fans On Each Saturday

By Paul Mickelson.

New York, Nov. 15.—Notes, observations and nominations from the football press box:

For a twice defeated team, Notre Dame is shattering all attendance records on its up and down sweep of the Nation's gridirons. For their first seven games against Carnegie Tech, Washington University of St. Louis, Wisconsin, Ohio State, and Navy and Army, the Fighting Irish, who really have a flock of Irishmen carrying the hod this year, have played before 351,000 fans, an average of more than 50,000 a game.

Sellouts are anticipated for their two remaining games—55,000 for the Northwestern and 75,000 for the Southern California encounters—which would lift the season's total to 481,000 for nine games. Coach Elmer Layden expects to lose the last two games, giving the Irish a season's record of five victories and four defeats.

Who said a team had to win to draw customers?

Nominations from yesterday's football wreckage:

Scoring kings—Capt. Mickey Kobrosky of Trinity, and Emilio Daddario, Wesleyan, were the hardest men to stop. Each scoring four touchdowns as Trinity walloped Norwich, 60 to 0, and Weseleyan thumped Rochester, 35 to 19.

Scoring genius . . . Ray Buivid, Marquette's buzz saw, lifted his aerial marksmanship average to .600 as the Golden Avanlanche buried Mississippi, 33 to 0.

Longest run . . . Ace Parker, Duke's All-American candidate, reeled off the longest gallop of the major football season by returning a North Carolina kick-off 105 yards.

Worst defeat . . . Trinity's 60-to-0 victory over Norwich, and Franklin Marshall's 71-to-10 track meet triumph over Dickinson.

The Regal Clothiers held to first place in the National City 150-pound class football league yesterday and also remained unbeaten, untied and unscored upon by defeating the Trinity A. C., 6-0, at Seat Pleasant, Md. In the other league game, the Arlington A. C. handed a 12-0 beating to the Washington Cardinals, at Ballston, Va., to take second place from the Trinity team.

The Regals pulled out their victory in the second period when Fullback Mangum zig-zagged to a touchdown on a 25-yard run.

Arlington scored both touchdowns in the first period. A 30-yard pass from Fullback Birch to Halfback Via accounted for the first touchdown when Via took the toss and raced the remaining 20 yards for the score. Quarterback Well shortly afterward flipped a 20-yard toss to Birch, who fell over the goal line with the second tuochdown. Via missed both tries for point from placement.

Yesterday's Recreation League soccer contests showed much closer scores than have been the rule and the tie for first place was broken, Sun Radio defeating Heurich's, 2-1. The Sport Club beat George's Radio, 3-0; Marlboro trounced Silver Spring, 6-2, and the Italian-Americans topped the Democrats, 3-1.

In what was deemed the feature attraction of the day, neither Sun Radio nor Heurich's showed much to enthuse about.

The winners' opening goal came from an undeserved penalty kick and which appeared savable, the sphere going through the goalkeeper's hands, this being the only score in the first half.

Heurich's, playing with ten men during most of the game, attacked early and often in the second period but failed to score and the Sun forwards broke away on the left, a cross by Harding hitting M. Simonds' foot and glancing into the net for Sun's second goal.

Marlboro Climbs.

Marlboro profited by Heurich's defeat and climbed into second place, making its meeting with Sun Radio next Sunday practically the deciding game of the first half of the schedule. Silver Spring gave Marlboro quite a tussle for 45 minutes, but lack of condition told against the home team in the second half, plus the wind, and Marlboro maintained their winning ways.

Henry Dietle played a great game for the losers but lacked support from his teammates.

George's Radio played surprisingly well against the Sport Club at Bennings in holding the winners to three goals, all scored in the first half, and the same must be said of the Democrats, who played on even terms with the Italian team in the opening half and went down fighting in the closing period.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Monday Mourning Quarterback.

Notre Dame, 20; Army, 6—The Irish won this one for the third year in a row and are probably demanding permanent possession of West Point. Somebody should call to the attention of the House Military Affairs Committee that obsolete Army air attack which resulted in two intercepted passes that paved the way for Notre Dame touchdowns.

POVICH.

Yale, 26; Princeton, 23—Sounds like the score of a city series game between the A's and the Phillies. The Elis pulled it out of the Tigers in the second half by throwing caution to the winds and a few passes to Larry Kelley. Princeton won the first, second and fourth quarters, if that's any consolation to 'em. But Germany won the first two years of the late world unpleasantness and Napoleon won his way to Waterloo.

Manhattan, 13; Georgetown, 0—There must be some mistake. Georgetown always could lick Manhattan and this was the best G. U. team in years. Maybe Manhattan hadn't heard about the Hoyas' undefeated record. Or maybe they didn't care. Anyway, they handed Georgetown a complete licking. The Hoyas dropped from the unbeaten ranks with a thud that was probably heard all too painfully on the Hilltop seismograph.

Catholic U., 7; N. C. State, 6—It was close, but still comforting for Catholic U., which had dropped three in a row. The Cardinals went into their shell after scoring that first touchdown, or it may not have been so close. But unless Irish Carroll, C. U.'s All-American candidate of last September, gets into a game soon, there will be a well-defined suspicion that he can't make the team.

V. M. I., 13; Maryland, 7—Ouch! Maryland had this one won until the last quarter when the Flying Cadets came along with 13 points. Maryland might still have won had they confined their kicking to the ball in the last quarter. With a fine lack of discrimination, a Maryland player kicked one of the V. M. I's. on the chin and the penalty gave the Cadets the ball on the 1-yard line. The rest of the story is contained in the final score.

George Washington, 50; Catawba, 0—It was to be expected. Those G. W. substitutes who hadn't been getting much of a play were in a mood to cut loose against little Catawba. The Colonials, however, are learning. That is a nice end-around play that they learned from Rice Institute in a half-dozen painful lessons a couple of weeks ago.

Navy, 20; Harvard, 13—Whenever Navy needed a touchdown, they had a simple formula: give the ball to Bill Ingram. The Crimson scored a moral victory but they also learned a moral lesson: it's well to score in the first half, too.

Pitt, 19; Nebraska, 6—That long train ride to Lincoln certainly had its effect on the Panthers. They showed their greatest power of the season against the team that held Minnesota scoreless for 58 minutes. Even in the face of that 7-to-0 beating by Duquesne, Pitt would be the favorite to lick any team in the East.

Alabama, 20; Georgia Tech, 16—The Crimson Tide's Rose Bowl hopes all but collapsed in that second half, but nobody can take away those three touchdowns they scored against a tough Tech team in those first two quarters. If it's a team from the South that gets the Rose Bowl bid, Alabama, unbeaten in four trips to the bowl, appears to qualify.

Louisiana State, 19; Auburn, 6—Not as close as it appears. That swell L. S. U. team had a 19-to-0 lead until late in the fourth quarter. Whenever Louisiana State needed a touchdown they marched down the field and collected it, which is a pretty good system and may yet land 'em in the Rose Bowl.

Northwestern, 9; Michigan, 0—Northwestern won the ball game but Michigan won a new host of admirers. The team that was beaten, 27 to 7 by Penn the week before just about saved Coach Kipke's job by holding the Big Ten champions to a touchdown and a field goal. It may be the upswing at Ann Arbor.

Minnesota, 47; Texas, 19—With a 35-to-0 lead in their possession, the Gophers could hardly be blamed for those three Texas touchdowns. But the result did nothing to disturb Minnesota's current ranking behind Northwestern as the Nation's No. 2 team.

Marquette, 33; Mississippi, 0—This was one of the most notable victories of the day by a team that only a week before had been held to 7 to 6 by Creighton. Marquette, still unbeaten and untied, reached the peak of its power to score five touchdowns against a Mississippi team that is tough.

Navy Yard Beaten In Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 15.—Fredericksburg's Big Reds downed the Receiving Station eleven of the Washington Navy Yard here this afternoon, 15-6. Fredericksburg scored in the opening quarter when Harry Ingalls recovered a Navy Yard fumble on the latter's 11-yard stripe and Ventura plunged over for the score after three plays.

The locals added a safety in the second period when Pitts broke through the Navy Yard wall and blocked a kick in the end zone which he recovered.

Guelig, a power in the visitors' backfield, scored the Navy Yard's lone touchdown in the third quarter when he galloped 20 yards around end to go over.

Eight School Contests on Schedule

Weak Roosevelt High Team Lone Obstacle Between Tech and Title.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Much beaten and buffeted, Roosevelt High finds itself sharing the scholastic spotlight this week with Episcopal High's unbeaten and untied contenders for the Virginia prep school championship.

On Roosevelt falls the burden of keeping Tech High from the inter-high title. Episcopal, only unbeaten, untied schoolboy team in the Washington area, gets its toughest assignment of the season, Saturday, against Woodberry Forest School in Orange, Va.

Episcopal's chances of keeping its great record unsoiled are considerably brighter than Roosevelt's of stopping Tech. The Rough Riders haven't won an inter-high game and Tech hasn't lost one. Only an inspired last-ditch stand appears to be Roosevelt's chance of halting the gray-clad gridmen.

One of the most promising battles of the inter-high series is slated for tomorrow when Western and Central meet at Western in a fight for second place in the final standings. In the event that Roosevelt beats Tech, of course, tomorrow's result may have decided the title.

Gonzaga Faces St. John's.

Other important games find Gonzaga and St. John's meeting in their traditional Catholic Prep School League Thursday, Devitt Prep meeting Eastern High on Friday, Landon meeting Friends School and Central High traveling to Waynesboro, Pa., for a game with the town Waynesboro High Wildcats.

In addition to Eastern's 0-to-0 tie with Tech, last week's scholastic developments were marked by Landon Prep's 26-to-6 win over St. Alban's and Woodrow Wilson High's 13-to-12 victory over Western.

Landon, conqueror of Woodrow Wilson, 32 to 0, clearly proved itself one of the foremost scholastic clubs of the section and attempts are being made to book it with Episcopal, or possibly Bullis or Gonzaga. The Colonels are not expected to get much more than a workout when they play their perennial rivals from Friends this week. The Quakers took a 37-to-0 beating from Baltimore Friends last week.

Both Episcopal and Woodberry Forest, perennial rivals, beat National Training School last week. The Alexandria school won, 20 to 6, on Thursday and the Orange Prep School took a 32-to-0 decision Saturday.

Virginia A. C. Bows, 19-0, to Palace A. C.

Two Intercepted Passes, Blocked Kick Lead to Winners' Score.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 15.—Outplayed throughout the first half, Palace A. C. capitalized on two intercepted passes and a blocked kick to halt the Virginia Athletic Club's winning streak with a 19-0 victory at Baggett's Stadium.

Twice in the first two quarters the Virginians penetrated Palace territory, only to be held inside the 20-yard line. Coming back after the half, they resorted to passes, and the third quarter was less than five minutes old when Donaldson intercepted a toss intended for Pullman and dashed 40 yards to score. Before the same period was finished, Johnson duplicated Donaldson's stunt, and Hanlin added the extra point on a line plunge.

In the final quarter an exchange of punts found the Virginians backed up on their own 5-yard line, and the entire forewall swarmed through to block Mellon's kick, Hanlin recovering behind the goal line for the score.

Aside from the touchdowns scored through breaks, the visitors never came close to the Virginian's goal line and the locals had a wide margin in yardage gained, although frequent fumbles seriously damaged their scoring chances.

Silver Spring Bows To Police Boys Club

After repulsing its foe four times from the 6-inch line in the first quarter, the Police Boys Club eleven found its passing attack in the final period and pushed over two touchdowns for a 12-0 victory yesterday over the Silver Spring Merchants before 800 people on the latter's field.

A recovered fumble that slid down the field to the Boys Club ½-foot line in the first period was the Merchants' only scoring threat.

The passing combination of Hoeft to Shade that had been threatening throughout the game for the Boys Club finally clicked in the final 10 minutes of the game and they pushed over two markers. Passes for the extra point failed twice.

Wild Grid Year Draws to Close

bie Booth was an Eli hero. Thus the final score in the latest three-year stretch of Bulldog-Tiger rivalry reads: "Kelley, 2; Princeton, 1."

Yale winds up its campaign next Saturday against a Harvard team that has shown unexpected November strength. The Crimson yielded yesterday to the all-around prowess of Navy's Bill Ingram, 20 to 13, but will be far from the pushover of recent years when it invades New Haven.

Navy's hopes of turning the tables on the Army, two weeks hence before more than 100,000 spectators at Philadelphia, appear on the upgrade, not alone because of its own improvement, but as a consequence of West Point's rout by Notre Dame, which lost to the Sailors the week before. A capacity jam of 80,000 yesterday saw the Irish seize their opportunities, run up a 20-6 margin, and bottle up the Army's brilliant Monk Meyer for all but one belated touchdown gallop.

Notre Dame has blown hot and cold by turns this season, but the latest Irish performance serves a sharp warning to Northwestern, which risks its unbeaten record at South Bend next Saturday. This will close the season for Lynn Waldorf's Wildcats, who registered their sixth Big Ten triumph over Michigan, 9 to 0, with Steve Toth, scoring hero of the Minnesota game, accounting for all the points. Northwestern reached its emotional as well as playing peak against the Gophers and will be distinctly on the spot against Notre Dame.

Texas Is Scapegoat.

Meantime Minnesota continued to heap vicarious vengeance upon the teams which had the bad luck to catch the Gophers on the rebound. By walloping Texas, 40 to 19, Minnesota made it 99 points for two games since being upset by Northwestern. The Texans emerged with the distinction, however, of doing more scoring against the Gophers than all other teams combined this season, previously only Washington and Northwestern having crossed the goal line. Wisconsin has the dubious distinction of being the windup victim for Minnesota next Saturday.

Pittsburgh, although beaten by Duquesne and tied by Fordham, impressed the Midwest with its tremendous power for the second time this year by whipping Nebraska, 19 to 6, before a capacity crowd at Lincoln. The Cornhuskers, who had held Minnesota to seven points, got only made too many major mistakes—all of which Pitt capitalized—but they were consistently overpowered by the great Panther line.

The South's part in Rose Bowl speculation covers a wide range. Alabama, four times an entry at Pasadena, still is much in the picture as a result of standing off Georgia Tech's challenge, 20 to 16. Meantime Georgia, which upset Tulane by 12-6 yesterday, moves North next Saturday to tackle Fordham, the East's main contender. The Rams didn't play yesterday.

Louisiana State, in a receptive mood for any kind of post-season competition, kept its place at the Southeastern peak by trouncing Auburn, 19 to 6. Duke's decisive victory over North Carolina, 27 to 7, featuring Capt. Ace Parker's 105-yard run for touchdown, virtually assured the Blue Devils of another Southern Conference crown. Only North Carolina State, which was outpointed by Catholic University, stands in Duke's way now. Tulane, in a slump after a great start, is the remaining barrier for L. S. U.

In the Southwest, Arkansas' smashing victory over Southern Methodist, 17 to 0, put the Razorbacks on top of the conference heap. Sammy Baugh meanwhile paced Texas Christian to a 26-0 victory over Centenary and Texas A. & M. registered its third conquest in eight days over Utah, 20 to 7.

Basketball Is Here.

On the Air Today

Mr. Walter O'Keefe's new comedy device—the DRamateurs—took an unexpected but undoubtedly dramatic turn Saturday night. One of Mr. O'Keefe's amateur actors, on reaching the stage, expressed his feelings in respect to appearing before the microphone in language which has not yet become accepted in public dialogue.

The remark was not obscene, but it was profane. Hardly had the words left the man's mouth than the telephones at WRC began to jangle. Those who were called were either indignant or curious. Some of them said they had just heard, unmistakably, profanity on an N.B.C. program. Others asked if it could be possible that what sounded to them like profanity had actually been profanity.

Not having heard the program I do not know what Mr. O'Keefe did about it. He is admittedly a fast worker at ad libbing. But even to a man with his microphone experience and knowledge of listener reactions, the situation must have required some fast thinking and equally fast salvaging.

According to the program's press agent, O'Keefe really has been presenting untrained men and women in nonrehearsed acts. Each "actor" gets $20. In rehearsal, when the program is timed, experienced radio actors are used to read the lines the amateurs will handle when the show goes on the air.

O'Keefe himself selects the "actors" as a rule. One week he presented Baby Michael O'Keefe's nurse, Olive, and an elevator boy from his apartment building. It is further said that the reason for using unprofessional talent in the to work on that unfortunate remark night before last.

Two new programs take to the air today. At 11:15 a. m., the "Personal Column" comes to WMAL's schedule, announced by Radio Row as one of the current season's sensations. It is fashioned over the "agony columns" of London's newspapers. Advance notices indicate it is one of those departures in broadcasting you'll want to try out.

At 1 o'clock, WJSV presents "Five Star Revue," starring Morton Bowe, tenor; Meri Bell, popular songstress; Ray Sinatra and his orchestra, and O'Keefe melodrama is to insure the "homey, hammy flavor" wanted.

It has been my understanding that stooges, or "plants," are used in the audience, however, when O'Keefe meanders about asking silly questions.

Unquestionably the sponsors of the "Saturday Night Party" and O'Keefe himself have given thought to the eventuality of some such incident as actually took place Saturday night. Yet they cannot be damned for what took place if experience with man-on-the-street broadcasts and others of an equally spontaneous character are used as a yardstick.

So far as I know, never a profane word has been uttered by a person being interviewed in the street broadcasts here. Hundreds of hours on the air can be accounted for in "Curbstone Queries," Cordon Hittenmark's "Questionmark" and other programs which rely on the passerby for its wordage.

But—I wouldn't care to be on the receiving end with those interested in the "Saturday Night Party" this coming week when the cranks get Bill Johnstone as a Hollywood reporter.

Other features today:

"The O'Neills"—Beginning today will be presented at 11 a. m., from WMAL. The same program will be heard from WRC, at 3:45. In other words, the listener has a choice of morning or afternoon now.

"Florida's Treat"—with Friddie Rich's orchestra and Harry Richman, presents as guest, Cliff Edwards. WRC, at 12:30.

Richard Crooks—sings tonight, "One Alone;" "The Bell Man," by Forsythe; "Pearl Fishers," from Bizet's opera, and "Vilia," from "The Merry Widow." WRC, at 8:30.

Double bill—Lily Pons and Adolphe Menjou star in radio version of "Conversation Piece" in "Radio Theater," WJSV, at 9. In intermission, Cecil B. DeMille interviews Cotton Warburton, who will give his All-American selections for this gridiron season.

Henry W. Lanier, son of Sidney Lanier, the poet, won the N. B. C. tenth anniversary children's program contest and a prize of $1,000. His program is titled "Bravest of the Brave." Other awards went to Samuel J. Shumer, New York; Helen Platt, Portland, Oreg.; Pauline Gibson, New York; Richard Howells Gibson, New York, and Berton Braley, New York. Mr. Lanier is former editor of Golden Book Magazine and author of several books. About 750 scripts were submitted.

514 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, announced yesterday the completion of the liquidation of 30 receiverships during October, making a total of 514 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the so-called banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 514 institutions, exclusive of the 42 receiverships restored to solvency, aggregated $149,595,068, or an average return of 76.29 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured depositors received dividends amounting to an average of 61.93 per cent of their claims.

New York Bank Stocks Decrease 5.64% in Wk.

New York, Nov. 15.—New York City bank stocks experienced a marked setback during the last week, closing at substantially lower levels, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on November 13 amounted to $1,839,786,000, compared with $1,949,742,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $109,956,000, or 5.64 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 3.58 per cent compares with a yield of 3.37 per cent on November 6. The current market value is now 1.38 times the known book value, against 1.46 times at the close of the previous week. Based upon current figures, the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 19.3 times their known earnings, compared with 20.5 times on November 6.

Dividend Changes.

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Favorable dividend changes in the past week totaled 94 compared with 62 in the preceding week, Standard Statistics Co. reported today. Unfavorable changes numbered one against none in the previous period.

Financial and Business Review

Demand Lifts Steel Output To 74 Per Cent

Automobile, Railroad and Structural Purchases Increase.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 15.—While interest in the forthcoming price advances dominated the iron and steel market last week, automobile production rose above the 100,000-mark for the first time in five months, rail awards aggregated 118,560 tons, structural shape contracts increased by about 5,000 tons, and the national steelworks operating rate advanced 1 point to 74 per cent of capacity, says Steel.

Protective buying against the price advances appeared, even though the extent of the increases or the effective dates were unknown.

The week brought forth additional expansion programs and it is now apparent that the seven continuous hot strip and sheet mills being constructed or under authorization constitute one of the most remarkable expansions for any product in any two-year period in the history of the steel industry. Capacity will be increased by 4,020,000 tons. Prior to 1935 capacity of such mills in this country amounted to only 4,838,500 tons.

Automobile assemblies were up 19,934 units to 104,248, with Chevrolet accounting for one quarter of the industry's total and Ford speedily increasing production.

Pennsylvania Railroad's order for 100,000 tons of rails, the largest in three years, is expected to be followed by a good sized inquiry from New York Central and orders from several Western carriers. Seaboard Airline bought 10,060 tons last week and Atlantic Coast Line 6,000 tons. Freight car awards, which aggregated 39,634 at the end of October, compared, to only 9,158 in the same period last year, are likely to be boosted by purchases in the immediate future. Chesapeake & Ohio is in the market for 2,000 cars.

Awards for structural shapes totaled 26,706, compared to 21,827 a week ago. Contracts placed included 6,500 tons for the Sixth avenue subway, New York, and 4,320 tons for an upper Mississippi River dam.

Snow on Broadway.

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Winter's advance man tossed a handful of snowflakes onto Boradway tonight. He also dampened downstate New York and New Jersey with the first snowfall of the season.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Profit-Taking Appears With Top-Heavy Good News; Hint of Foreign Curb.

New York, Nov. 15.—After rushing forward in more active trading in the first two days, speculative markets took a more sober view of the outlook and worked irregularly lower on somewhat lessened activity during the remainder of the week. Conversely, the Government bond market, after continuing its remarkable advance into new high price areas, (i.e., new low yields), became apprehensive and declined as the week closed.

Foreign exchanges were well under control, but the slide in French francs continued. Commodity markets generally maintained a good tone and prices moved forward on wholesale and retail fronts, according to the well-known indices.

So far as the trade news was concerned, more happened to encourage the markets than to suggest a decline, railroad traffic for last week fell, in accordance with seasonal dictates, but less than might have been expected and continued to hold a high margin over a year ago. The steel industry maintained its high operating rate, and the holding of the national motor show brought out an unusual batch of optimistic predictions. What struck public imagination most forcibly was a series of large extra dividend disbursements, bonuses paid to labor, and plans announced for purchase of equipment and plant expansion.

Bullish Wave.

Corporations figuring in such news were General Motors, Chrysler and many other leading concerns. Granted that the larger dividend distributions were forced by the penalty tax law, for the most part, and that the increased wages and bonuses paid to employees may have sprung from the same source, it was also true that earnings had risen to support such distributions. However, the speculative markets chose to get a new focus on the near term outlook.

Regarding the current wave of good news as largely covering water over the dam, the future was found to contain more uncertainties. It is assumed that the backed up replacement and expansion demands of industry are sufficient to insure continuance for some time of the business recovery. What is not taken for granted is the attitude of the Government toward business, the tax burden to be borne, and most important at the moment, whether corporations will be able to pass along to consumers the considerable additions to their operating costs involved in higher wages, shorter hours and rising prices for raw materials.

If they are not able to do so, shorter crops are in sight for stockholders, even with a further gain in business activity. Meanwhile, the situation was complicated a bit by two statements from high quarters. On Friday morning the country was told through the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board that the rise in the stock market had been sound and had involved no expansion of credit. The inference was drawn, therefore, that no steps to stop the advance would be taken, and, on the other hand, the suspicion was aroused that the Government felt something uncomfortable was coming and hastened to give the bull market its blessing.

Greeks Bearing Gifts.

Later in the day the President himself added to the confusion by remarking that the Federal Reserve Board and the SEC would assist the Treasury in looking into the extent of foreign purchase of American securities. The President's idea was that such operations should be curbed if they went too far, in order to prevent a collapse of values and a depression of dollar exchange in the event of withdrawal of foreign funds. Undoubtedly much of the rise in our markets, as well as much of the ease in money, is traceable to the influx of foreign money. Part of it has come here to seek greater opportunities for profit, part has come in flight from currency devaluation on the other side, part has been sent by those fearing political changes.

Largely we have sterilized gold imports, but they have nevertheless added to excess bank reserves, enlarging the basis of credit inflation. A large amount of gold could be withdrawn without injuring us in the least, as we now hold more than eleven billions of the metal. However, foreign sales of securities would tend to depress prices and might embarrass the stabilization fund. Sales need not be expected so long as political conditions are unsettled abroad, or so long as our markets continue to rise on improving business.

It is not easy to see what can be done about it. It will prove to be just as unpopular for the Government to bar (if it can) foreigners from buying American securities as to prevent them from purchasing American goods. A nationalistic policy on that score is no more defensible than is one on other merchandise. Surely, with modern experts in currency and exchange management so numerous in Washington and elsewhere, a way will be found to regulate the international flow of capital without undue disturbance to markets anywhere.

One explanation readily suggests itself for the curious hint on foreign investment control given by the President. So far French devaluation has been a flop as a means of repatriating French capital, and another serious decline in francs is consequently threatened. Is it possible that our Government is trying to shoo French money home by flapping its apron ends?

Average Stock Yield Increases for Week

New York, Nov. 15.—The average price of stocks of seven industrial groups registered a gain during the week ended November 13, led by the office equipment group, which rose 2.60 per cent, while 12 groups decreased in price, according to a weekly compilation of 19 New York Stock Exchange industrial group averages by Wyckoff Associates, Inc.

The second highest gain was made by the retail group, 2.25 per cent, followed by the building group, 1.32 per cent. Minor gains were shown in the silver, chemical, gold and food groups. The largest loss for the week was reflected in the copper group, which decreased 2.25 per cent, followed by the farm equipment group, 1.96 per cent; steel, 1.45 per cent, and oil, 1.10 per cent.

Nine Million More at Work Than in 1933

September Employment Is 7 Per Cent Under 1929 Average.

New York, Nov. 15.—The total number of unemployed workers in September, 1936, was 8,975,000, according to new estimates of the National Industrial Conference Board made public today. This compares with a maximum of 15,939,000 unemployed in March, 1933, and an average total of 1,132,000 unemployed in 1929.

Employment in all types of enterprise in the United States in September, 1936, was 43,747,000 workers, an increase of 9,116,000 workers as compared with the depression low of 34,631,000 employed in March, 1933. The number of employed workers in September was 3,409,000, (or 7 per cent) below the average of 47,156,000 workers employed in 1929.

Manufacturing industry has contributed most to reemployment, with an advance of 3,033,000 workers from March, 1933, to September, 1936. Agriculture was next in importance with a total of 1,488,000 reemployed workers. The construction industry has reemployed 1,358,000 workers; the service industries, 1,288,000; and trade, distribution, and finance, 1,142,000.

"Industry" in general, including manufacturing, extraction of minerals, construction, transportation, and public utilities, contributed 4,913,000 reemployed workers, or 54 per cent of total reemployment. Non-agricultural enterprises in general accounted for 7,628,000 workers, or more than 83 per cent of the total increase in employment.

The number of workers employed in agriculture was 500,000, or nearly 5 per cent greater in September, 1936, than in 1929. Employment in the service industries and also in trade, distribution, and finance, in September, stood at 96 per cent of the 1929 level. Manufacturing employment stood at 87 per cent; construction at 83 per cent; the public utilities at 81 per cent; transportation at 77 per cent; extraction of minerals at 67 per cent; and forestry and fishing at 59 per cent.

Auto Production.

Detroit, Nov. 15 (AP).—Cram's Reports, Inc., estimated today that this week's automobile production in the United States and Canada totaled 104,248 cars and trucks, compared with 83,982 last week and 95,075 the corresponding week a year ago.

New Life Insurance Less Than Year Ago

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—New life insurance production during October was 1.3 per cent less than in October of last year, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents announced today.

New paid-for business, exclusive of revivals, increases, and dividend additions, of 40 companies having 83 per cent of the total life insurance outstanding in all United States legal reserve companies in October was $715,261,000 against $724,413,000 in October, 1935.

Lynchburg Budget For Schools Rises

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 15.—Budget for the public schools here for 1937 provides for expenses of $498,444.02, an increase of $14,418.08 over 1936.

Request of the teachers for cancellation of pay cuts would involve an expense of $48,412.22, which is not provided for in the budget, though the step has been recommended by the school board.

The budget goes to the city council at its next meeting and if the salary increase is provided for it will have to be by a boost in the school tax rate.

Officers Ordered To 'Explain' Shots

Danville, Va., Nov. 15.—Police Lieut. Ira Harris, Police Lieut. O. S. Mayberry and Officer H. L. Mann will be given opportunity this week of telling the police commission what happened after the Forty-and-Eight Ball November 11, when the tires of Harris' car were punctured by bullets fired by Mann.

The dance was over, Harris was taking a group of friends home when a police car containing Mayberry and Mann started pursuit. Mayberry said he was unaware the car ahead contained his colleague, explaining that the car "acted queerly" and he felt it should be investigated.

RA to Investigate Coercion Charges

By the Associated Press.

Assistant Resettlement Administrator C. B. Baldwin, said yesterday his office will investigate complaints that 150 homesteaders of the Cumberland homestead project at Crossville, Tenn., are being "coerced and intimidated" in financial operations of the project.

Four employes of the project appealed to President Roosevelt Saturday for an investigation of their charges that project managers are forcing homesteaders to accept 50 per cent of payments due them.

Project Manager William Macy Stanton said at Crossville he had worned the four they would be dismissed unless they signed a voucher for "settlement of your credit hours on a basis of 50 per cent cash payment."

Baldwin said "the matter of credit hours has caused some confusion at several projects. The credit-hour system was inherited by the Resettlement Administration on those projects which were started as subsistence homesteads under the Interior Department."

Ex-Wife of Denhardt Undecided as to Course

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Denhardt, divorced from Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt after 32 years of wedlock, was undecided today whether she would see the bald veteran of three wars before his examining trial Friday on charges of murdering dark-eyed Verna Taylor, his reputed financee.

Gen. Denhardt spent Sunday in the seclusion that has hidden him since the night of November 6, when the Bluegrass beauty was found in a ditch, a bullet through her heart and the general's service revolver near her feet.

Wind Balks Piccard's Stratosphere Balloon

St. Cloud, Minn., Nov. 15 (AP).—A 10-mile-an-hour wind at the St. Cloud Airport today thwarted the attempt of Dr. Jean Piccard and Prof. John D. Ackerman, of the University of Minnesota aeronautical college, to penetrate the stratosphere with a pilotless balloon.

Two balloons were demolished by the wind before the two scientists gave up their attempt to explore the stratosphere with a full set of instruments.

Human Need Drive Backed by Landon

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 15 (AP).—Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, said tonight in an appeal for public participation in charity drives that it is an "American characteristic" to forget differences in critical times to achieve worthwhile ends.

The defeated Republican Presidential candidate spoke over a Nation-wide radio hookup in behalf of the National Mobilization for Human Needs.

"It is both fitting and typical," he said, "that after a hard fought Presidential campaign we should all join in this great mobilization. In nearly every one of our American communities peoples of good will are uniting to accomplish this worthy community job."

"We are all engaged in this country," he added, "in trying to build a better world. We must think more often of the individual need for better hearts and better heads if we are to reach our goal. Leadership, inspiration and results of our national mobilization must be achieved through our own understanding, our own desires and by our own hands."

'Social Party' New, De la Rocque Says

Caen, France, Nov. 15 (AP).—Col. Francois de la Rocque, outspoken rightest leader, asserted today his new "social party" was not a reconstruction of the disbanded Croix de Feu as leftists have charged.

"The French Social Party is not a reconstruction of the Croix de Feu. It is something new. We are going to pursue a policy of housecleaning, and the old parties had better know that we are not a reformed or refurbished outfit. We will have candidates where the people desire them who will act on a fully prepared political plan."

Bodies of Constantine, Kin, Shipped to Greece

Brindisi, Italy, Nov. 15 (AP).—The bodies of Constantine, former King of Greece, and his wife and mother were en route to Greece tonight aboard the Greek cruiser Averoff, escorted by a flotilla of Italian and Greek warships.

Constantine died 13 years ago and was buried in a crypt in a Russian Orthodox Church at Florence. The crypt also has been the temporary resting place of his queen, Sophia, and his mother, Olga. The bodies were exhumed from the crypt with religious ceremonies Saturday.

Ridgeley, W. Va., Speeds Building of New School

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 15 (AP).—Mayor Paul K. Morgan, of Ridgeley, W. Va., across the Potomac River from here, announced today that work on the new Ridgeley school will be started this week by a Ridgeley contractor. The cost is $11,000, to be supplied through Federal funds.

The former school building was destroyed by the March 17 flood.
